The difficulties of making up a font of Chinese type, says the American Consul at Shanghai, although considerable, are not relatively so great as one might imagine, for while Kang Hsi's dictionary the standard and most comprehensive work of its kind in the language, contains some 40,000 characters it has been found that for all practicable purposes a font need contain about 7,000. Of course, with a font of this size the Chinese printer, in the course of setting up a book will frequently find that he lacks a dozen or so unusual characters, a difficulty which he readily meets by having these missing symbols hand cut on blank type by skilled engravers, who, thanks to the old wood-block system are to be found in practically every town in China. Although practically all Chinese newspapers and books on modern topics are now printed from movable metal type, books pertaining to old China, such as the Confucian classics and their commentaries, are still produced by the time-honored method of printing from wooden blocks. Among the reasons why the Chinese prefers his books of this nature printed in the old way are his naturally strong conservatism, the peculiar charm and artistic softness of the pages printed from blocks, which the modern books from metal presses do not have, and the fact that the new style volumes lack that peculiar odour imparted in the older method by the lampblack table ink, with which they are printed, an odour which, although extremely disagreeable to occidental nostrils, is inseparably associated in the Chinese mind with good literature.

TROUSERS FROM OLD COATS

The Chinese never waste anything. A shopman puts up parcels with half the paper and string used by Europeans. Servants collect and sell match-boxes and things which seem to us to be useless. In the country you will see a boy up in a tree beating down a single leaf with a stick for fuel. Women, when too old for any other work, collect dry grass for the same purpose. A man collects his fowls and then beats old, damp mats or matting; cock-roaches and other vermin jump out, and the fowls have a meal that costs nothing. You give a coolie an old coat that you are ashamed to wear, and he will probably get a tailor to transform it for thirty or fifty cents into two pairs of excellent trousers for himself.

One has only to watch their story-tellers in the streets to see that the Chinese are natural orators. They are also very clever conjurers. Rich Chinese are very charitable. They distribute free rice and tea in time of exceptional distress; they subscribe to hospitals and to asylums for the blind, for the old, for lepers, and for orphans; they even support associations for supplying free coffins to the poor.

THAT WONDERFUL DOG

One evening at a tavern the topic was about dogs. "Oh!" said Juby, "I had a dog and was taking a near cut across some fields when I missed the animal, and on going back I found him staring at a notice-board bearing the words, 'All dogs found here will be shot.' And come he would not."

"Yes, yes, that's good, but what about Johnson's retriever? One night his house caught fire, all was confusion; old Johnson and his wife flew for the children and bundled them out sharp.

"Alas! one was left behind, but up jumped the dog, rushed in, and soon reappeared with the child, depositing it on the lawn. All were out now, but in rushed the dog again. What he was after no one knew. Presently the noble animal reappeared, scorched and burnt, with what do you think?"

"Give it up," came from the listeners.

"Why, with the fire-policy wrapped up in a damp towel, gentlemen."

A NEWSPAPER BLUNDER

A year or two ago, Big Ben (the well-known Westminster parliament clock) was fitted with new hands. A reporter in the London office of a Manchester paper saw his chance and wrote: "A well-known character, who has lived in Westminster all his life, and is familiarly known to many Londoners as "Ben," underwent a serious operation this morning. As Westminster Hospital was too full to allow of him having a bed, the operation was carried out by two doctors in the open air, and in the presence of a large crowd. Both of Ben's hands were taken off — successfully and rapidly. A new pair will be provided for him." The sub-editor in Manchester read through the paragraph, and added the headlines: 'Operation in the Open Air. Big London Crowd Watches Man's Hands Taken Off.' And so it duly appeared in next morning's paper."

Entertaining Up To Date

A new form of entertaining, started by Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, is being taken up by Newport hostesses. It is a dinner and dance, with the dancing between the courses. As soon as one course is finished the orchestra strikes up, and the guests leave their places and begin to dance. The dance finished, another course is served. Eating and dancing go on in this way until the dinner is finished. By the time coffee is served the dinner-ball has lasted two hours.

Romans in Britain

The Roman galley found during the excavations in connection with the new County Hall for London was moved from Westminster Bridge to the new London museum at Kensington Place the other day. When the oaken beams were hoisted from the Thames mud a quantity of decayed bones was discovered. These included the rib of a man and other human remains, and also the jaw of a dog. Their condition was such that it was found necessary to enclose them in wire netting to prevent them falling to pieces.

Vast Economy.

"Your new position must bring you a large salary!" said the diffident interviewer.

"Oh, yes," replied the prima donna complacently. "And, besides, think of the enormous sums I save by getting to hear myself sing for nothing."—Washington Star.

RECIPROCITY IN ORE

Spokane, Wash. — Resolutions were adopted recently by the Spokane Mining Men's Club, asking Congress to pass a bill for reciprocity on lead and zinc ore products which will admit ore from British Columbia mines to the United States free.

THE GOLD SHIP

THE GOLD SHIP

The Way Treasure Is Transported From One Country to Another and the Precautions Taken To Protect It.

Of the many romantic happenings which relieve the drabness of modern life, few appeal more strongly to the imagination than the conveyance, to and fro, of the great quantities of gold — whether bullion or specie — which, week in, week out, form an ever-flowing golden stream round the civilised world.

Perhaps the largest quantities of the precious metal are those conveyed weekly from South Africa, the output of the mines, which in bars, not unlike exaggerated cakes of yellow soap in appearance, find their way to the Bank of England and the other great banks. The value of these weekly cargoes frequently runs into millions.

Then, too, every mail steamer which leaves the docks carries its quantum of gold. Gold in bars, gold in sovereigns, gold in the coinage of every nation.

The casual passer-by who wanders through the long corridors of the Bank of England may happen on a little stone-paved courtyard, completely shut in by several sets of iron gates. Here he may see gold "bricks" being thrown into very ordinary-looking vans by sturdy porters, who handle the precious metal as if it were mere clay.

A Big Responsibility.

The van being full, a couple of individuals, also very ordinary-looking, climb in and seat themselves on its gold-paved floor, and off it goes to the docks or the railway-station.

Arrived at the docks, the gold, whether in bars or coin — which latter is packed in bags containing 1,000 sovereigns or their equivalent, which in turn are enclosed in iron-bound boxes, sealed with an official seal at the Bank of England on every joint — goes straight on board the ship it is to voyage in.

The bars, or boxes, are received by one of the ship's officers, and, with the assistance of a couple of quartermasters, are carefully checked and tallied. The officer — usually the second officer — signs a receipt for them, and they are placed in a special hold, to which access is obtained by only one entrance, and that is locked and sealed.

From the moment that he has signed the receipt the officer is personally responsible for the bullion and specie and its safe custody and delivery, and access to the treasure-hold can only be had — legitimately — by means of the key, which remains in his possession.

When Silence Is Golden.

As to the exact precautions taken to guard the bullion-hold and its contents, and its precise situation, representatives of the various companies preserve a complete and very wise reticence, and even sailors and officers on the actual vessel seldom know where the gold is kept during its transhipment, so well is the secret kept.

Probably not more than three or four people in the ship are in possession of the information. The truth is that, surprising as the statement may sound to the uninitiated, there are in existence very highly organised gangs of international thieves, whose special work is the theft, or attempted theft, of gold while in the charge of the steamer companies.

BENEFICIAL WARS

Some People Argue That Wars and Industrial Calamities Benefit Mankind in the Long Run.

Few calamities in the world's history have been unattended by some advantage to humanity. The late Lord Palmerston is credited with having stated that even a great war had its benefits for the English people inasmuch as it induced them to study geography. There are people who go much further, and seriously argue that the horrors of war are afterwards compensated by reforms and discoveries which mankind at large would never have enjoyed but for the drastic chastisement which war inflicts. Among the arguments of this kind deduced from history is the statement that all the wealth and luxury the world has enjoyed from the industry of brass-working would probably have been lost but for the sacking and burning of the city of Corinth in the year 146 B. C. In Corinth there were immense quantities of gold, silver, and copper, and it is said that the violence of the conflagration was so great that these precious metals were melted and ran together, and thus the famous Corithian brass was first manufactured.

Long Delayed in Delivery

A letter written in December, 1660, to a prominent member of the Body of Friends in Durham, Eng., has just been found in the Public Record Office, having been undelivered. A copy of the letter has been forwarded to the descendants in the eighth generation of those for whom it was intended. The letter is addressed: "For My Loving friend Richard Hickson, a butcher in Durham to be delivered to William Bywaters, Durham, paid 9d."

MRS. DR. SPROULE

New Speaker of House of Commons

The appointment of Dr. Sproule to the Speakership seems to have given wide satisfaction, the Hon. gentleman being generally recognised as an all round fair minded man. Next to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Honorable John Haggart Dr. Sproule is the veteran of the Dominion House of Commons, having been first elected in 1878. He has sat continuously for East Grey since that time and he has been such a worthy representative that in his home constituency he enjoys the esteem and confidence of all classes of citizens, no matter what their political beliefs may be.

Dr. Sproule was born in the county of York, of Irish parentage and graduated in medicine from Toronto University in 1868. FIENDISH MURDERS.

Aged Couple Tortured to Death in New York East Side.

New York, Jan. 8.—A case of double murder found in an East Side house yesterday is one of the most shocking in detail of any since the Guldensuppe dismemberment and the "Jack the Ripper" series of crimes. Isaac Futterman, 80 years old, and his wife, Rachel, 72 years old, were found dead in their rooms at No. 101 Norfolk street, their bodies terribly mutilated.

The police believe that the aged couple were practically tortured to death, and in the absence of any well-established motive for such a crime, the police think the Futtermans were victims of some religious maniac.

The nature of the mutilation led the police to believe that it had been begun while the Futtermans were alive, and that death had actually been caused by blows over the head which fractured both skulls.

London, Jan. 5.—It is understood that the Home and the Canadian Governments have exchanged views regarding the propriety of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught paying an official visit to the United States.

The Late Samuel Sherin.

On Saturday, January 6th, there passed away one of the oldest residents of the village of Lakefield, in the person of Samuel Sherin. He was born in the Township of Emily about five miles from Omemee on the fourth day of November, 1830. At the age of 24 years he moved to the present site of the village of Lakefield where he and his brother the late John C. Sherin, opened the first store in 1855, in which store he was employed for about twelve years, when his health failed him and he was compelled to give up business for about three years. He was appointed Clerk of the Division Court by the late Judge Boucher, and held that office for about twenty-four years, during which time he engaged in the conveyancing and insurance business. On the incorporation of the village of Lakefield in 1875, he was appointed Treasurer of the Village and held that office, with the exception of two or three years, until his death.

In 1863 he was married to Sarah A. Rosborough of the Township of Smith, who still survives him. He is also survived by four children, namely: Wesley, Division Court and Town Clerk of Lakefield; Samuel E., of "The News", Baltimore, Md.; Miss Alice, on the teaching staff of Toronto, and Miss Nina, residing at home.

Mr. John Young, Ennismore, has purchased the old American House, Hunter street. Mr. Young will occupy the north half as an implement agency, and the south half will be converted into a garage.

CHURCH BURNED.

Methodist Edifice at Tillsonburg a Prey to Flames.

Woodstock, Ont., Jan. 8. — The Methodist Church at Tillsonburg was destroyed by fire this morning, with all the contents, except the records and the communion service. Defective flues are supposed to have been the cause. The church was a very old brick one. A valuable pipe organ was burned. The extent of the loss is unknown, but it is partially covered by insurance.

The loss is in the vicinity of thirty thousand dollars partially covered by insurance.

A New Electric Line.

Fenelon Falls Gazette": An electric railway line between Lindsay and Minden is among the near probabilities. The line it is understood is to be built and equipped by English capitalists, who are taking preliminary steps towards its construction. The exact location of the road is not known, but it is likely to pass through Fenelon Falls and possibly Coboconk.

Local Option Next Year.

The Times is informed that the temperance party has practically decided to bring on a vote on Local Option next January in this city. The campaign will probably begin in the spring, and will continue throughout the summer and fall.

CARD OF THANKS.

I desire to thank the electors of the Township of Smith, and especially those of my home ward, for their very liberal support, which placed me at the head of the poll by a handsome majority, at the recent municipal elections.

During the last four years I have served the Township to the best of my ability, and shall continue to do the same during my term of office.

Wishing you all a very happy and prosperous New Year. I remain,

Yours faithfully,

Wm. Davis.

KING EDWARD VACUM CLEANER

You cannot clean carpets, rugs and furniture by beating. If you think you have, just try a KING EDWARD VACUUM CLEANER and you will find the article full of dust, which breeds disease.

The KING EDWARD HAND MACHINE has no equal as compared with other hand machines. It is lighter to operate and its suction is much stronger. Its suction is stronger than many of the power machines, and the dusting is done away with. On account of the short stroke one person can operate it on carpets and rugs equally as well as two, and it is about half the weight of other hand machines to carry up and down stairs or from one room to another. It is sold for less money than any of the hand machines. All machines are guaranteed.

Labour's New Quarters.

The Trades and Labor Council has leased the old T. A. S. quarters on George street to be used by them for all their meetings. The council sublets these rooms once a month to the various trades unions represented in the city where they may hold their meetings. The rooms have undergone an overhauling, the walls have been repainted and everything put in to good condition. The Barbers' Union meets the first Monday of each month. It has been suggested that a ball be given some time during the winter for benevolent purposes.

Ministerial Association.

A social evening has been arranged for the Ministerial Association for Tuesday, January 16th, at the Y.M. Lakefield, will lecture on the Holy Land and the Fifth Gospel.

Nearly $300 Raised.

The Peterborough Health Association has received $298.50 by the sale of stamps and calenders, and are accordingly grateful to the citizens for the support given them, especially the children, who did so much to promote the sale. The stamps brought $180 and the calendars yielded $118.50, making a total of $298.50 In the sale of stamps the school children worked very earnestly, especially those of the South Central, who excelled all others. This school sold nearly seven thousand, one pupil, who is deserving of honorable mention, selling two hundred and seventy-five.

Mrs. P. J. Lynch, G.T.R. superintendent was in the city on Saturday, also Mr. Wm. Bibby, general roadmaster.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

"THE BLUE BIRD."

Wonderful Scenic Reproduction Coming to Royal Alexandra Theatre in Toronto.

The new theatre's famous production of the "Blue Bird," the exquisite fantasy by Maeterlinck, will be presented at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto, for two weeks.

No recent play has made quite so profound a sensation in America or Europe; with its beautiful philosophy, rare humor and pathos, it has charmed playgoers of all ages and all countries. In New York, where it was produced at the New Theatre, this so-called literary drama, scored the greatest popular success of the season, attaining a run of 268 performances. In England, France, Germany and Austria, it has met with the same huge success, while in Russia fifty-two different company are now playing it throughout the Provinces.

This season a number of innovations from the London, Paris, Berlin and Moscow productions have been added to the original new theatre production, better to interpret the Symbolism and poetry of the piece.

Indeed, so careful has the drama been staged, to bring out all the fanciful flights of the poet's imagination and to make vivid his wonderful descriptions, that the New Theatre production of "The Blue Bird" is probably the most marvellous bit of stage-craft that has ever been witnessed. Certainly, no scenes have yet been conceived that can compare in beauty and compelling weirdness with "The Palace of the Night," "The Kingdom of the Past." "The Land of Happiness" and the other lands born of the poet's imagination, where Mytyl and Tyltyl have their adventures.

In "The Blue Bird" Maeterlinck has revealed a new and comforting philosophy of life, expressing it through the light and delicate fancy of the pursuit of two children of the blue bird, the symbol of happiness. They are accompanied on their journey by "Bread," a jolly grotesque individual; "Milk," a beautiful, timid creature; "Water," a fowling, sylph-like girl; "Fire," a hissing tempestuous youth; "Sugar," a silly chap with candy hands; the faithful "Dog," the sly, scheming "Cat" and other things and animals embodied in human form by the magic of fairly Berylune.

So intricate are the various scenic effects that nearly a year was spent in the preparation of them. Beauty, fantasy, wisdom, humor, and a delightful tenderness are all blendid into one.

"The Blue Bird" brings tears to the eyes then chases them away with laughter; plunges you in revery and then startles you with some joyous surprise. Children and those who like to take their amusement lighter, derive infinite pleasure from the amusing actions and witty sayings of things and animals turned into human beings. To those who look deeper, however, the author has furnished a bottomless well of mysticism, romance and inspiring symbolism.

Particular attention will be given to out-of-town orders with remittances and a self-addressed stamped envelope will receive prompt attention. All orders should be addressed to Manager Lawrence Solman, Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto.

The Best Helpmeet.

All men, as well as women, like to be understood. Sympathy is their greatest help, and no woman who is self-centred, who is vain and thinks only of herself will gain the highest regard of man. She may be exquisitely beautiful, have a crowd of admirers at her feet, but she cannot bestow that wonderful happiness a plain little woman full of sympathy gives to her husband. If she understands him, is interested in him and his lifework, whether it be planting vegetables, composing music, or building towers, she will encourage him to reach his highest aim. Being beautiful will not make up for selfish indifference.

Fun and Fresh Ideas.

To remain young one must have company and enjoy it. Not a big dinner party one day, an afternoon reception the next, a late card party the following, and so on. This, for the hostess, is hard work that will quickly bring the appearance of age in its train, and, indeed, no work is more arduous. To attend to the wants of guests, to anticipate their desires, to have the whole responsibility of the success of a party is an utterly differtn thing to the bright company necessary to the well-being of the woman who leads too monotonous a life.

The limiting influence of four walls is what so many women who are housewives and mothers have to fight against, and they need company as a recreation

FRIDAY SUPERSTITION.

King Edward Dreaded Having His Mattress Turned That Day.

A strange story of the late King Edward is told by M. Xavier Paoli, the famous commissary of the Paris detective force, who has guarded so many royalties during their journeyings in Europe, in his book entitled "My Royal Clients." It appears that one of the chief duties of Hawkins, King Edward's second valet, was to make the bed.

"He was better acquainted than anyone with the King's habits and tastes; he knew, for instance, that His Majesty's mattress must never be turned on a Friday. This was a curious superstition of the King's, and it was the only one I ever knew him to cherish, and he made no secret of it." It was curious that he died on a Friday, and that "the doctors, forgetting his expressed wishes amid the grave cares occasioned by the sudden altercation for the worse in his condition, ordered his mattress to be turned, hoping that this would give him a little rest. A few minutes before midnight he drew his last breath."

Very amusing, by the way, are M. Paoli's recollections of another royal visitor to Paris- Sisowath, King of Cambodia, who came attended by a huge suite of sons, daughters, Ministers, favorites, chamberlains, and a troupe of twenty dancing-girls, and who flew into a great rage because his suite was seasick.

"I forbid you to be sick," he shouted to them. "These are my orders. Am I king, or am I not?"

The King's baggage included 200 sacks of coal, which the Cambodians insisted on landing, fearing they should find none in France. The King was extremely polite, and shook hands with everyone, including all the flunkeys who lined the staircase of the Marseilles Prefecture on his arrival. Even to this eccentric sovereign, as to all others, M. Paoli made himself agreeable, and he writes:

"When at length the hour of parting had struck, good King Sisowath, greatly moved, called me to his side. 'Here,' said he; 'present for you.' And he handed me a parcel done up in a pink silk handkerchief. As soon as I was on shore I hastened to open it. To my great confusion is contained a splendid Sampot made of cloth of gold. The King of Cambodia had presented me with his state breeches!"

Outmanoeuvred Them.

There is a good story, which concerns the days when Sir George Newnes was wooing the Newmarket constituency as a Parliamentary candidate. A few hours before one of the meetings, which was being held in a tent, the information reached him that a gang of the enemy were coming to the meeting to upset the platform. The gang with their lady friends, who had been invited to see the fun, duly appeared on the scene, and were politely invited to seats close to the platform; and, as space was limited, the ladies received a pressing invitation to take seats on the platform.

After a few ineffectual protests the blushing maidens accepted the invitation, and thus the gang were compelled to sit listening with unwilling ears to the political gospel of their opponents, while above them in the midst of the enemy's camp their sweethearts sat blushing and giggling.

And when towards the end of the meeting Mr. Newnes rose and told the whole story, told it with many a word of admiration for the young men who, for the sake of the ladies they loved, were now abstaining from deeds of valour, and when in an eloquent peroration he wished all the young Tory couples very happy married lives, the audience nearly sent the tent flying with their shouts of laughter.

CAVE-DWELLERS OF TUNIS

The capital city of the Matmatas, the cave-dwellers of Tunis, containing about 2,000 inhabitants, is one of the strangest in the world. It is not erected upon the ground, but is burrowed in the earth, the country being a high, rocky plateau barren, sunbaked, and swept by the simoom.

When one of these people wishes to build a dwelling he chooses his spot, traces a circle to show its location, and then digs until he reaches the desired depth, which varies according to the number of suites he desires. The rooms are caves hollowed out in the sides of the circular covered pit, and the bottom of the pit forms the courtyard, which is a usual feature of a Moorish house. Besides the rooms, a passage is also dug, communicating with the outside world, and a door is built at the outer end.

The soil is a malleable clay, is easily cut, and lends itself well to excavation, the roof of each room requiring no support as long as it is well arched. The cave-dwellers inhabit the territory between the town of Gabes, on the Tunis coast, and the sand-hills of the Sahara.

"Silver Greyhounds."

WHAT IS LAZY

A [illegible] a curious hobby. He take[illegible] interest in tracing the h[illegible] of everyday common words, and [illegible] an immense amount of a[illegible] in this strange study. "Recently," he says, "I have been making inq[illegible] into the number of words acc[illegible] used by young children. Perh[illegible] result of my investigations may interest your readers. Children from sixteen to nineteen months use from 10 to 232 words, while two-year-old children use from 115 to 1,227 words. The vocabulary increases rapidly from that time on. It is perfectly safe to assert that the average three-year-old child makes use of 1,000 words. One three-year-old boy I know has a vocabulary of 1,771 different words."

Busy at the Bar.

At a certain junction on a Scottish Railroad two brakesmen were employed one night recently in the operation of wagon-shunting.

Feeling somewhat thirsty, they took advantage of a lull in their work to adjourn to an adjacent public-house for refreshment.

The "boss," appearing a few minutes afterwards, discovered their absence, and, suspecting their place of retreat, lost no time in making his way to the inn aforesaid. Opening the door of the bar-parlour, he caught the delinquents in the act of consuming a couple of pints of beer.

"Hallo!" exclaimed he, "is this where you chaps do your shunting?"

"No," replied one of the culprits, without a moment's hesitation; "but it's where we shifts the pints!"

First Expert Chess Player: "Won't you sit down and play a game with me?"

Second Expert Chess Player: "I can't. I have an important engagement in six weeks' time."

"TINFLUENZA"

Tin, Which Is the Most Susceptible of Metals, Easily Catches Cold. It Then Crumbles.

A curious illustration of the susceptibility of metal to heat and cold is provided by the effect which winter has upon tin. As a matter of fact, unless tin is kept above 18 deg. Centigrade it falls a victim to a strange illness which has been described as "tinfluenza." In other words, the metal catches a very severe cold, the symptoms of which are decay, loss of lustre, and crumbling of the surface to grey powder. The change is not a chemical one, for the grey powder is still tin, and the extraordinary fact is that it can be brought back by careful warming to its originally healthy condition.

The purer the tin the more susceptible it is to cold, and consequently decay, apparently; and, in fact, it may be made proof against the disease by alloying it with other metals. The disease is a cause of considerable annoyance and disappointment to the collectors of coins who possess valuable tin specimens in their cabinets.

Even tin buttons have been known to crumble in this way and organ-pipes made of tin have been found to decay after a severe winter.

The rot is even infectious, for decaying tin, in contact with healthy, lustrous tin, soon spoils it, and reduces it to its own unhealthy state.

MOTOR-CYCLIST'S AMAZING FEAT.

A striking illustration of the capacity and durability of the motor-cycle is furnished by the record recently set up by Mr Harry Long, the well-known Yorkshire cycling champion, who has just completed a journey of 40,000 miles on a motor-cycle in ten months. To accomplish his ride he went round the whole of the coast-line of Great Britain, in addition to other mileage; and, carrying no head-light, he had necessarily to ride only between dawn and dusk.

What makes the trip all the more noteworthy is the fact that prior to setting out on his journey, which he anticipated would occupy twelve months, Mr. Long had only a week's tuition in looking after his mount. He had only ten punctures during his ride, but had the unpleasant experience of having to sleep twice in the open and to ride through a ten-days' downpour of rain while in Scotland.

Once, in the North of Scotland, Mr. Long almost had his attempt brought to a sudden end. Riding along a road skirted by a declivity of several hundred feet, he experienced a dry skid, and was thrown right off the saddle. Fortunately he fell on a ledge and was enabled to scramble back, remount his machine, which had simply fallen on the road and was unharmed, and continue his journey.

Not Room for Both.

"I know Ames comes in for a lot of praise because he has a camera instead of a gun," Forbes began, in a slightly acrid tone, "as there may be more than one way of brutality."

"What's the matter with Ames?" demanded one of the men on the club house porch.

"Up in Canada last fall, Fort readily resumed, "I went off by myself one day, when Ames was shooting over his kodak, and I stumbled on a black bear. Because I was the only thing in sight, very likely I became the immediate object of her attentions. I had only a slight lead, but I was going pretty well when Ames poked through the brush and took in the situation.

"'Hold on there, old chap!' he yelled. 'You're too far ahead. I can't get you both in.'"

Another Blacklister.

Another blacklister appeared before Police Magistrate Dumble yesterday morning and contributed $13.40 to the Police Court fund for 1912, this being the first case since the commencement of the year.

Laid at Rest.

The remains of Miss Mildred Mabel Johnston, who passed away at Gravenhurst, arrived by G.T.R. yesterday and were interred in the Little Lake cemetery at 3 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Currie, of Omemee, officiating.

Died at Fraserville.

The sympathy of their many friends will be extended to Mr. and Mrs. J. McCall, of 296 Sherbrooke street, their infant son having passed away at Fraserville. The funeral took place to Fraserville cemetery yesterday.

Plumbers Are Busy.

Owing to the cold spell many water pipes throughout the city, in the houses, were frozen, and the result was that there was a great demand for plumbers. It is an old and true saying that "it is an ill wind that blows nobody good."

A Good Appointment.

Mr. Finch Miller, the City Relief Officer on Water street, has been appointed Indian Agent for the Mississauguas of Rice and Mud Lake. This is a capital appointment as the Rice and Mud Lake Indians themselves requested that he be appointed.

No Smoking at Station.

C.P.R. officials have decided to enforce the rule of "No Smoking allowed" in the waiting rooms of the station. New signs have been put up and the local officials have received strict orders to see that the rules are strictly enforced. Smoking is no longer allowed either in the ladies' or general waiting rooms.

Pleaded Not Guilty.

At the Police Court yesterday Fred C. Carter, formerly representative of the Union Life Insurance Co. of this city, who was arrested in Toronto on Saturday, charged with the theft of $25.00 from the company pleaded not guilty. He asked for a remand until Friday, which was granted. The company's supervisor was present.

Eggs Cheaper In Toronto.

The price of eggs in Toronto are lower than Peterborough according to reliable reports. New laid eggs are being shipped into that city at 30 cents per dozen, in case lots from Western Canada. Our farmers and egg producers, as hen fruit has met with ready sale at 35 cents a dozen in this town for the past eight weeks. Who says hens don't pay.

The Knights of Columbus.

The Times has received an enquiry concerning the Knights of Columbus, who recently purchased James Stevenson homestead. For the information of the public as well as the general public we may add that the Knights of Columbus is, we believe, a distinctly Roman Catholic Institution, with branches throughout the country. It is not, therefore, open to Protestants.

Thrown From His Cutter.

Dr. Marshall had the misfortune to be thrown from his cutter yesterday morning. While driving along the tracks the runners caught on the rails, with the result that the cutter was suddenly turned over. The doctor pluckily hung on to the reins, and succeeded in preventing his spirited horse from getting away. Fortunately Dr. Marshall escaped without injury although he was dragged several rods. No damage was done to the cutter.

Barnado Girl Disappears.

[illegible] who came to Peterborough branch of the Barnado Home, and afterwards was a domestic in the employ of a Peterborough lady, and later on went to Smith and subsequently to Detroit, has disappeared from the Y.W.C.A., where she had put up in that city. The police who have made a general search are unable to locate the girl and it is feared that some evil has befallen her.

Another Projected Railway.

Ontario Gazette contains a notice of application to the Ontario Legislature by the Kawartha Transportation Company for a charter to build an electric railway in the City of Peterborough and surrounding district. The company applies for power to build a line in the city, and through several of the surrounding municipalities, touching most of the summer resorts on the Kawartha Lakes and terminating at Rice Lake.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The election of officers for the District Loyal Orange Lodge took place last evening, and was as follows:

W.D.M.—Bro. C. E. Wiley.
W.D.D.M.—Bro. E. Reid.
W. Chap.—R. B. McGill.
W. Rec. Sec.—B. Stinson.
W. Fin. Sec.—O. Girven.
W. Treas.—J. Garside.
W. Lecturer—Bros. J. Stewart.
D. of C.—Bro. Noyes.
Bro. J. B. McWilliams, P.D.G.M. O.E. conducted the installation.

The Commission System.

Peterborough has long felt an interest in the new system of government by commission, hoping some day perhaps to adopt it. It will therefore be pleasing to many who favor the new plan to learn that on Monday the people of Dundas are to vote on a by-law constituting an elective commission to manage the public affairs of the town. In our judgment management by a commission is the best form of management, providing the commissioners are of the right sort.

Poultry Show Opened.

The annual exhibition of the Peterborough Poultry Association opened yesterday morning in the city market hall, and everything is in full swing. The large room is well filled with the birds of exhibitors and some are yet to arrive, having been delayed by the snow blockade on the railroads. School children are invited to attend the exhibition after school, the small price of 5c being charged them for the price of admission. Mrs. Dawson will lecture this afternoon and evening in the market hall. Fire Chief Howard has an exhibit at the poultry show of one dozen pheasants and also a splendid exhibit of white rocks.

Terribly Sudden Death.

The death occurred very suddenly at 11.30 yesterday morning of Mary Ellen Hennesy, wife of Mr. Timothy Whaley, of 272 Westcott street. The deceased was 37 years of age, and a native of Chelsea, Que. She is survived by a sorrowing husband and four sons, namely, William D'Arcy, John Francis, Frederick Leonard and Daniel Joseph, a babe of 10 days old. Four sisters and three brothers also lament her demise in the persons of Annie of Montreal, Maggie, Charlotte, Mrs. M. J. Armstrong, of Ottawa; Michael, John and Thomas, of Ottawa. The funeral will take place to-morrow at 9 o'clock to the Sacred Heart Church and from thence to St. Peter's cemetery for interment.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

The Frazer Mission Band of St. Paul's Church met last night.

A meeting of the Board of Health was called for yesterday morning, but they did not get a quorum, so the meeting was postponed.

A few days ago Mr. J. W. Morden, an employee of the English Canoe Co., had his hand so badly lacerated with a circular saw, that Dr. Morgan had to amputate one of the fingers.

A prominent member of the Board of Trade, Toronto, writes to Grand Trunk Ry. System as follows: "The members of the Board that took advantage of the dining car on your railway on their return from Guelph last evening were delighted with the accommodation, and service given on the car, and we are sorry that our party did not include more members to take advantage of the splendid service we all enjoyed.

WEDDING BELLS.

Teatro—Brazel.

A quiet wedding took place in Lindsay on Monday, January 8th, when Mr. Lawrence Teatro was united in marriage to Miss Laura Brazel, by the Rev. Father Casey. After the ceremony a dainty wedding dinner was partaken of. The costly presents received, showed the high esteem in which the couple were held. They will reside in Lindsay.

Ministerial Association.

A social evening has been arranged for the Ministerial Association for Tuesday, January 16th, at the Y.M. Lakefield, will lecture on the Holy Land and the fifth Gospel.

Within a very short time Prince Rupert, the Pacific Coast terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, will not have any occasion to import its supply of cement from England, Germany, China or even Victoria. During the past summer there was located near Shames a large deposit of limestone, that is considered perfect for the manufacture of cement. Accordingly the locators staked the property, awaiting an examination by an experienced mining engineer.

PHYSICIAN CALLED TO RICHESON CELL

Reports That Clergyman Sentenced to Death for Murder Has Nervous Indigestion — An Appeal Being Prepared.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 10. — Rev. C. V. T. Richeson, awaiting death by electrocution at the State prison some time during the week beginning Sunday, May 19, passed a restless night and Dr Howard Lothrop, who attended him when he mutilated himself several weeks ago, was called to the minister-murderer's cell at Charles street jail shortly before 8.30 today.

Dr. Lothrop said the prisoner is in no danger, but that his condition is even better than could be expected considering the mental shock he suffered yesterday, when sentence of death was pronounced by Judge Sanderson. Nervous indigestion was the physician's diagnosis.

Richeson's counsel is already preparing the papers for the appeal to the governor's council to authorize the commutation of the sentence.

PROPERTY RIGHTS IN PERIL BECAUSE OF CHAOS IN LAWS OF MARRIAGE IN QUEBEC

Circumstances Easily Arise Where Children of an Apparently Regular Union May Be Declared Illegitimate, and Be Therefore Disinherited.

Montreal, Jan. 10. What are the effects of the present condition of the marriage laws of Quebec on property rights? The writer submitted this question to a lawyer who is at the moment engaged in litigation over a money claim arising from statements made regarding the standing of a married woman, and the consequent legitimacy or illegitimacy of her children. This was his answer:

"That is answered most readily by an illustration. Let us suppose that you and I are brothers. Both of us have been brought up as Catholics. You have prospered and become comparatively wealthy. I remain poor. In the course of time, you propose marriage to a Protestant lady, and are married by a Protestant minister You have children. One day you die I am your heir, I can prove it. You were never legally married, what your wife regarded as a solemn ceremony was no ceremony at all. It is null and void. She was never your wife and is not your widow. Your children are not legitimate. There is no will, what is to prevent me from acquiring the property as soon as I have proved in court what I have just outlined?"

FOUR CHILDREN AND HIRED MAN BURNED IN A QUEBEC FIRE

TERRIBLE CATASTROPHE IN RURAL DISTRICT—HOUSE BURNED IN THE NIGHT.

The Parents Are Alive—Tried to Save Children — Mother Badly Burned and She May Die.

Quebec, Jan. 10.—Word of a terrible burning tragedy has reached here in which the lives of five people have been lost, and a whole family of little children wiped out. The fire occurred at Notre Dame du Sacre Coeur County Lotbiniere, in the home of Joseph Desrochers. It is not known how it started, but it is presumed that a heated stove pipe was the cause.

Mr. Desrochers was awakened about one this morning by the smoke in his bedroom. One portion of the house was already in flames. Mr. Desrochers aroused his wife, who was partially suffocated, and without troubling to dress, made his way to the room where his four little children were sleeping. He found his way cut off by the flames, and had to make his way into the open air. The thermometer was ten degrees below zero. By this time Mrs. Desrochers had revived, and when she was told of the plight of her children, she rushed into the burning house and attempted to rescue them. She fought her way through the flames, and would have sacrificed her life had not the neighbors who arrived on the scene dragged her back.

The four children were burned to death, as well as the hired man, and so fierce was the fire that their bodies were practically incinerated.

Mrs. Desrochers' burns are so serious that her life is despaired of, while the husband is also in bad shape.

The fire could not be fought because no water was available.

It quickly spread to the house next door and destroyed it. A new church some twenty feet away was threatened, but it was saved by being covered with snow, which willing hands piled up its sides and roof.

Kingston Will Furnish Power to Grand Trunk

Kingston, Ont., Jan. 10.—Dr. A. E. Ross, M.P.P., interviewed the Hon. Adam Beck in Toronto yesterday relative to supplying the Grand Trunk with power to operate the granite drilling plant, and on Mr. Beck's advice, the city will give the Grand Trunk a temporary supply, consisting of 500 horse-power, until the Hydro-Electric power is brought to Kingston. Mr. Beck expects to get Trent River power here by July. The Seymour Company has power at Napanee, and a transmission line will be installed from there to Kingston.

THE POULTRY SHOW WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

Many Poultry Fanciers Were Present From all Parts of Ontario

The poultry show yesterday was a decided success, not only as regards visitors, but also in regard to interest manifested in the exhibition. The directors are certainly to be congratulated on the result. The show will close this evening, so that those who have not visited the market hall during the exhibition should do so to-day.

SOME OF THE EXHIBITORS.

Poultry fanciers from all parts of Ontario and Quebec are in attendance among the largest being G. K. Thompson, of Whitby; Vickery Bros of Oshawa; E. Lawless, Grafton, Ont.; Battrell & Son, Bowmanville; J. R. Hope, Villiers, W. C. Way, Lindsay, and others. Some of the Peterborough exhibitors are W. P. Dunnett, W. Mein, G. B. Tucker, J. Gattes, S. Newhall, W. A. Howard, J. Denno, J. Kelly, secretary of the Poultry Association; J. Perry, and Mr. J. Baptie, of Springville.

This list represents but a small portion of the exhibitors, there being somewhere in the neighborhood of 1,100 entries.

TO ABOLISH DEPOSITS IN DOMINION ELECTIONS

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Jan. 10. Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., brought up his bill to abolish deposits in Dominion elections, and thus bring Dominion Act into conformity with the Province of Ontario procedure.

Mr. Burnham spoke on the second reading of the Bill.

At the request of the Prime Minister the Bill was referred to a committee to investigate and to report to the House during the present session.

Cold on the Chest

Had Suffered for Weeks—Used Fourteen Different Remedies Without Effect.

CURED QUICKLY BY "NERVILINE"

No stronger proof of the wonderful merit of Nerviline could be produced than the letter of Miss Lucy Mosher, who for years has been a well-known resident of Windsor, N. S.

"I want to add my unsolicited testimonial to the efficacy of your wonderful liniment, "Nerviline." I consider it the best remedy for a cold, sore throat, wheezing tightness in the chest, etc., and can state that for years our home has never been without Nerviline. I had a dreadful attack of cold, that settled on my chest, that fourteen different remedies couldn't break up. I rubbed on Nerviline three times a day, used Nerviline as a gargle, and was completely restored. I have induced dozens of my friends to use Nerviline, and they are all delighted with its wonderful power over pain and sickness.

"You are at liberty to publish this signed letter, which I hope will show the way to health to many that need to use Nerviline.

(Signed) "LUCY MOSHER."

TESTIMONIAL NO. 3785

All sorts of aches, pains and sufferings—internal and external—yields to Nerviline. Accept no substitute; large size bottle 50c, sample size 25c. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

A CITY IN THE MAKING

Port Mann, B. C., Rapidly Becoming An Important Business Centre.

Smoking factory chimneys, huge warehouses, wharves crowded with shipping, fine homes by the hundred, where a little while ago was forest full of unmolested game—this is a change they have grown used to in the West.

Vancouver, a lusty young giant, with close on 150,000 people, was the home of a couple of sawmills and a few fishing boats a bare quarter of a century ago. The coming of the C. P.R. made Vancouver an important point, and this importance has increased until it is regarded as the chief city of the West, with a future second to none in the Dominion. Land that was bought 25 years ago for a few dollars could not be had to-day for a million in cold cash, and the end is not even in sight. The same thing is about to occur again, this time at Port Mann.

When the Canadian Northern Railway set out to build a transcontinental line, they figured on Vancouver as their Western terminus. But they hadn't reckoned on the coast when they made this decision. They came to Vancouver and looked over the city and district for a terminal site. They wanted a great big block with lots of room for freight sheds, car shops, miles of track and lots of waterfrontage. But they were too late to get it in Vancouver at anything like the price they would pay, so they had to look elsewhere.

Failing Vancouver, Mackenzie and Mann determined to establish a city of their own that would suit their purposes exactly, and be a model in every respect. Months were spent in searching for such a spot and their choice finally fell on what is now known as Port Mann. They bought 2000 acres with a frontage of 2½ miles to the deep waters of the Fraser. A finer site could hardly be imagined. At this point there is safe anchorage, and deep water for the biggest boats on the Pacific. Along the waterfront the land is level, and it rises gently, till at the back it is a couple of hundred feet above the water. The whole block has been cleared, and is now being laid out and sub-divided according to the plans of Mr. Tod, an eminent Montreal landscape architect. Parks, a big lake, wide boulevards, tree-lined streets—all these are provided for.

Port Mann is to be a model city in every way, and nothing can prevent its rapid growth. The Canadian Northern are to build their car shops and engine works there, and they will have the greatest freight distributing yards in the West. They are offering inducements to manufacturers to locate in Port Mann, and already a huge steel mill and many other factories are assured. Port Mann must have 40,000 people in five years.

Millions of bushels of the Prairie wheat will go through Port Mann on its way to England, via Panama. Great wharves, docks and grain elevators are to be built to take care of this traffic. The Dominion Government is to spend a million dollars next year to improve the navigation of the Fraser, so as to provide for the largest ships afloat.

Between the railway holdings and the only electric tram line in Port Mann is a particularly fine residential block known as No. 1 addition to Port Mann. It has been sub-divided carefully, 66 ft. streets and 20 ft. lanes provided for, and the lots are now being offered at low prices and on easy terms by the Colonial Investment Co. of Vancouver.

We believe that any man with a few dollars a month to spare cannot do better than invest in these lots. His money will work for him night and day seven days a week, and should double itself every year. A man never becomes wealthy by work alone, there is nothing like good real estate in a town that MUST grow to make him independent quickly, easily and safely. We commend this to our readers.

RUSSIA'S GRAB IS NO CONCERN OF BRITAIN'S

London, Jan. 10. The British press takes the view that Russia's action in regard to Mongolia is practically no concern of Britain's. Much is made of the Balfour Government's blunder in allowing Thibet to slip out of British control after Younghusband's expedition into that country.

The partition of Manchuria between Russia and Japan is predicted.

The Radical papers attack Sir Edward Grey for his pro-Russian policy, which they say, will result in the partition of Persia by Russia and England.

THE WESTERN OUTLOOK GOOD

Business Condition in Western Canada Very Promising

WORLD'S FAIR LIVE ISSUE

The Past Year Was a Big One, But 1912 Promises Greater Things — Boosting Home Industry — The Country Rapidly Developing.

Winnipeg, Jan. 10. WHAT Winnipeg has reason to rejoice few will deny. 1911 was a big year all around. In the West every body talks statistics this time of the year. Your correspondent has met many prominent business and professional men in the West in Winnipeg during the past week and following the usual hearty hand-shake has heard nothing but interesting facts of increased business, Bank Clearings, Building figures and of general development. C. N. Bell, Secretary of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange has announced the fact that Winnipeg is again in lead of all grain shipping cities as the largest market on the continent outclassing Minneapolis last year by 5,000,000 bushels of wheat and 15,000,000 bushels of oats, while on the other hand Winnipeg leads Chicago in the quantity of wheat handled in the year by over 60,000,000 bushels.

Railway officials are in the front rank as business builders with over 1500 miles of new railway built in the past year to their credit. Bankers claim an international record in increased Bank Clearings of over $200,000,000 for the year and are proud of classing Winnipeg among the Billion dollar clearing Cities of the Continent. In fact the curtain is already raised on what promises to be one of the best years in the history of the West.

Busy Year Ahead.

Interest in the Western Business Men's Excursion to Great Britain under the auspices of the Winnipeg Industrial Bureau in May and June is a live topic among the heads of big business houses who will make up the party. The Winnipeg Civic Planning Commission announce a world's congress on town planning to be held in Winnipeg in July, 1912. The Annual Western Canadian Industrial Exhibition at Winnipeg will be opened in July under the auspices of His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught.

Boosting Home Industry.

No event that happened in 1911 stirred civic pride more than the laying of the corner stone of the Winnipeg Industrial Bureau's New Permanent Exposition building on the afternoon of December 30, by His Honor D. C. Cameron, the Lieut.-Governor of Manitoba. Over one hundred prominent enthusiastic business men were present at the ceremony, and Ex-Mayor Sanford Evans, Mayor R. D. Waugh and President F. W. Heubach of the Industrial Bureau all made patriotic speeches on the occasion.

This building erected by the public-spirited business men to cost $50,000 will be the Industrial Bureau's future home offices. Twenty thousand square feet of floor space is set apart in units to hold exhibits of Winnipeg's factories—the product of Winnipeg labor. An Assembly Hall with a seating capacity of 400 will be thrown open for convention and other gatherings.

For National Good

When His Honor the Lieut.-Governor, in his speech on this occasion made reference to the importance of Canadian cities developing a patriotic spirit in purchasing the products of their own industries he sounded a national note of the most vital importance to the industrial development of Western cities as a whole, who are striving to build up their manufacturing interests.

His Honor even went further in saying that if Canadians were to receive their rightful share in national prosperity, it was essential that the products of Canadian muscle and material be given first consideration throughout the land.

Worlds Fair Live Issue.

An interesting point in connection with the ceremony was the fact that His Honor D. C. Cameron is President of the World's Fair movement proposed for Winnipeg upon which so much exploitation work has been done in the past two years. That the great international exposition project is not yet a dead issue is shown by the support the undertaking is still receiving from leading business men in Winnipeg and the West and it is a safe prediction to say that when the Dominion Parliament resumes its session the importance of Canada holding a World's Exposition of its splendid resources will be brought to the attention of the new government.

Technical Education Fostered.

Under the auspices of His Honor the Lieut.-Governor, another important and progressive step in the public good was made in the past week.

Invitations were issued and prominent men, members of the Industrial Bureau and the School Board authorities were guests of His Honor at Government House and took the initial steps inaugurating a plan of technical lectures to school boys and tradesmen in Winnipeg.

To Help the Boys.

Briefly the plan is, to have experienced and qualified men in different trades address the boys of the 5th 6th and 7th grade an hour and a half each week at the schools and to have these instructive talks prepared in advance and published in pamphlet form in order that the boys may carry the message home to their parents. The other feature of the plan is that the Bureau will get expert men in different trades to come to Winnipeg and address factory men on different technical subjects and to carry this out the Bureau has made provision in their new building for lecture room for the purpose. In short, the object of the movement is to arouse interest in the community, to develop the boy's ambition, and to show how essential is education to the success of the boy or man in no matter what work he chooses. W. J. Bulman of the Industrial Bureau, if Chairman of the Special Committee in charge of the work.

If you are trouble with chronic constipation the mild and gentle effect of Chamberlain's Tablets makes them especially suited to your case. For sale by all dealers.

CIVIL WAR THREATS IN LABOR STRUGGLE

British Mine Strike May Develop Into Greatest Crisis in History of Unions—Coal Only for Month.

London, Jan. 10. England is to-day on the verge of the greatest labor crisis in her history. Reports from the mining districts say that the men are voting almost unanimously in favor of the establishment of a minimum wage. The balloting began to-day and will close Friday night. It is the general opinion that there is no chance of averting a strike, as the operators have served notice that they will not consider the minimum wage demand.

The Cardiff collieries have already suspended domestic and commercial deliveries. There is not enough coal in England to last a month. Thousands of industries will be paralyzed and much suffering is sure to result in the event of a tie-up of the mines.

Radical Laborites are predicting that civil war will be the attitude of the Government attempts to operate the mines, as has been suggested.

The miners' organization had $8,000,000 in its treasury, and is well prepared for a long struggle.

In 1893, 250,000 miners stopped work for 17 weeks rather than submit to a reduction of 25 per cent in their wages. They had nothing like the "fighting fund" in their treasury that they have now.

The miners are preparing to strike on March 1 if the vote now on shows that two-thirds of the men are in favor of the minimum wage demands. The total number of persons employed in and about the coal mines of Great Britain in 1910 was 1,049,107. Of these 611,000 belong to the union.

FACED ZERO WEATHER IN NIGHT CLOTHES AT FIRE

Windsor Fire Department Rendered Helpless to Aid as Hydrants Were Frozen.

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 10. Sixteen persons in a double house at 118 Aylmer avenue narrowly escaped death last night, when warned by a passer-by that their home was going up in flames. They rushed out into the street, clad only in their night clothes, while the temperature was at zero. The fire department quickly responded, only to find all hydrants in the neighborhood frozen. They were forced to let the house burn. James Sharon, Herbert Wood, and Joseph Muhelheiser and their families were the occupants. The blaze originated from an overheated chimney.

THREE CARS LEAVE TRACK, OTHER TRAIN WAS STOPPED IN TIME

NLY TWO HUNDRED YARDS FROM WRECK WHEN ENGINEER BROUGHT IT TO A STANDSTILL.

Near Hamilton Yards—Train for Toronto Cancelled in Consequence of Accident From Bad Rail.

Hamilton, Jan. 10.—The Hamilton-Toronto C.P.R. train leaving Hamilton at 8.35 this morning was cancelled as a result of what might have been a bad railway wreck in the Toronto, Hamilton, and Buffalo Railway yards, just this side of Hamilton, about 8.45 this morning.

The Canadian Pacific T., H. and B. express, which left Toronto at 7.50, was traveling in through the Hamilton yards at about 12 miles an hour when the baggage car, the smoker behind it, and one of the other coaches jumped the track. The coupling between the engine and baggage car snapped, and the engine went on. Next the coupling between the baggage car and the smoker was broken, and the smoker swerved off to the side, almost turning over and stopping across the double tracks almost at right angles with the rails. Confusion reigned in the crowded train, and a panic was narrowly averted.

Many From Toronto.

The majority of the passengers were Toronto people destined for Hamilton and other points farther on. The local express had just left Hamilton at 8.35 for Toronto and was rumbling out through the yards at a slow speed. The locomotive of the outcoming train was not more than two hundred yards from the other train when the accident happened, and owing to the slow pace the engineer was able to stop before smashing into the derailed smoker standing directly across his tracks.

The Hamilton train backed into the station and was cancelled, preventing many residents of that city from coming to Toronto as was their intention.

Several of the occupants of the smoking car received minor bruises from the shaking up when their car left the tracks, but no one was seriously hurt.

A wrecking crew was sent to the scene immediately, and the tracks cleared. The cause is supposed to be from a bad rail, or possibly a broken flange on the baggage car.

A retired teacher has a curious hobby. He takes a great interest in tracing the history of everyday common words, and he finds an immense amount of amusement in this strange study. "Recently," he says, "I have been making inquiries into the number of words actually used by young children. Perhaps the result of my investigations may interest your readers. Children from sixteen to nineteen months use from 60 to 232 words, while two-year-old children use from 115 to 1,227 words. The vocabulary increases rapidly from that time on. It is perfectly safe to assert that the average three-year-old child makes use of 1,000 words. One three-year-old boy I know has a vocabulary of 1,771 different words."

Busy at the Bar.

At a certain junction on a Scottish Railroad two brakesmen were employed one night recently in the operation of wagon-shunting.

Feeling somewhat thirsty, they took advantage of a lull in their work to adjourn to an adjacent public-house for refreshment.

The "boss," appearing a few minutes afterwards, discovered their absence, and, suspecting their place of retreat, lost no time in making his way to the inn aforesaid. Opening the door of the bar-parlour, he caught the delinquents in the act of consuming a couple of pints of beer.

"Hallow," exclaimed he, "is this where you chaps do your shunting?"

"No," replied one of the culprits, without a moment's hesitation; "but it's where we shifts the pints!"

First Expert Chess Player: "Won't you sit down and play a game with me?"

Second Expert Chess Player: "I can't. I have an important engagement in six weeks' time."

Boots and Shoes.

Shoes are one of the expenses of toilet that [illegible] alone. A worn-out shoe cannot be renovated; no amount of skill will make it pass as new. The only possible way to save in shoe leather is to care properly for the shoes while wearing them. When they are taken off they should be wiped at once, if wet filled with paper and put in a dry place (nor near the fire) for some hours. We do not advise putting shoes into a bag, for the sake of meatness. If boot-trees are not convenient the boots or shoes should be stood where the air can get to them, as this will tend to harden the soles.

Bottled Gooseberries.

Cold Water Method.—Put in glass jars well washed gooseberries, or cut up rhubarb, fill the glass jars as full of water as they can hold, fasten on the lids under water. Gooseberries, rhubarb, huckleberries can be canned under water, not taking the jars out until rubber and cap are in place and fastened down tightly. They will keep in perfect state until time gooseberries will come again — in other words will keep a year.

An "Ear Telephone."

Differing from the various kinds of instruments which are used to assist persons of defective hearing, a new long distance hearing apparatus has recently been invented to assist the hearing of normal persons in much the same way that a telescope does the eye; that is, it enables one to distinguish sounds through a greater distance, besides amplifying those which would ordinarily be detected by the unaided ears. For this reason it has been facetiously called the "ear telescope."

ORDER FLEET FOR HALIBUT FISHING.

Mr. Geo. H. Collins, managing director of the Canadian Fish and Cold Storage Co., Prince Rupert, is at present in England, where he will call for tenders for building sixteen fishing vessels to be used in the waters of the Pacific adjacent to the plant next April.

The company will commence business and the vessels must be built and delivered by that time. The company is capitalized at $1,500,000 and the plant will cost when completed close on $500,000 and will be the largest of its kind in the world.

The buildings of the company at Prince Rupert are of reinforced concrete built at one end of the harbor, and will be fitted up with the most modern machinery.

The storage capacity will be fourteen million pounds of fish with a freezing capacity of 110 tons per day.

In an interview Mr. Collins said:—With the completion of the G. T. P. fish from the Pacific Coast will be put on the market three days quicker than now. This he explains by the fact that the greatest proportion of the fish is caught near Prince Rupert and thence has to be taken to Vancouver and Seattle for shipment.

The establishment will give employment to 500 men, none of whom will be Japanese. White men and Indians only will be employed.

The remaining directors of the company are:—Andrew Kelly, President of the Western Canada Flour Mills, Winnipeg; James Carruthers of Montreal, grain exporter, and Grier Starrett, former manager of the New England Fish Company.

ROBBERMAKES A CONFESSION

Aided in Robbery of the New Westminster Bank—Guilty of Two Murders.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 9.—Despite denials on the part of the detectives, it was learned to-day that a woman, said to bear the name of Grace Reynolds, from Portland, Ore., was connected with the arrest here of Charles Hoffmann, alias Dean, alias Howard, alleged member of the gang which dynamited the vaults of the Bank of Montreal at New Westminster, B.C., Sept. 15, 1911. It was stated that this woman was used to trace the man credited with having been one of the three who took $375,000 in cash and securities from the bank.

Miss Reynolds is said to have posed as Hoffmann's wife, using the name of Mrs. Chas. Dean among the society people whose acquaintances she made while living in a fashionable part of Los Angeles.

Dean, the detectives say, was arrested here last Friday and is held awaiting extradition.

A CITY IN THE MAKING

Port Mann, B. C., Rapidly Becoming An Important Business Centre.

Smoking factory chimneys, huge warehouses, wharves crowded with shipping, fine homes by the hundred, where a little while ago was forest full of unmolested game—this is a change they have grown used to in the West.

Vancouver, a lusty young giant, with close on 150,000 people, was the home of a couple of sawmills and a few fishing boats a bare quarter of a century ago. The coming of the C. P. R. made Vancouver an important point, and this importance has increased until it is regarded as the chief city of the West, with a future second to none in the Dominion. Land that was bought 25 years ago for a few dollars could not be had to-day for a million in cold cash, and the end is not even in sight. The same thing is about to occur again, this time at Port Mann.

When the Canadian Northern Railway set out to build a transcontinental line, they figured on Vancouver as their Western terminus. But they hadn't reckoned on the coast when they made this decision. They came to Vancouver and looked over the city and district for a terminal site. They wanted a great big block with lots of room for freight sheds, car shops, miles of track and lots of waterfrontage. But they were too late to get it in Vancouver at anything like the price they would pay, so they had to look elsewhere.

Failing Vancouver, Mackenzie and Mann determined to establish a city of their own that would suit their purposes exactly, and be a model in every respect. Months were spent in searching for such a spot and their choice finally fell on what is now known as Port Mann. They bought 2000 acres with a frontage of 2½ miles to the deep waters of the Fraser. A finer site could hardly be imagined. At this point there is safe anchorage, and deep water for the biggest boats on the Pacific. Along the waterfront the land is level, and it rises gently, till at the back it is a couple of hundred feet above the water. The whole block has been cleared, and is now being laid out and sub-divided according to the plans of Mr. Tod, an eminent Montreal landscape architect. Parks, a big lake, wide boulevards, tree-lined streets—all these are provided for.

Port Mann is to be a model city in every way, and nothing can prevent its rapid growth. The Canadian Northern are to build their car shops and engine works there, and they will have the greatest freight distributing yards in the West. They are offering inducements to manufacturers to locate in Port Mann, and already a huge steel mill and many other factories are assured. Port Mann must have 40,000 people in five years.

Millions of bushels of the Prairie wheat will go through Port Mann on its way to England, via Panama. Great wharves, docks and grain elevators are to be built to take care of this traffic. The Dominion Government is to spend a million dollars next year to improve the navigation of the Fraser, so as to provide for the largest ships afloat.

Between the railway holdings and the only electric tram line in Port Mann is a particularly fine residential block known as No. 1 addition to Port Mann. It has been sub-divided carefully, 66 ft. streets and 20 ft. lanes provided for, and the lots are now being offered at low prices and on easy terms by the Colonial Investment Co. of Vancouver.

We believe that any man with a few dollars a month to spare cannot do better than invest in these lots. His money will work for him night and day seven days a week, and should double itself every year. A man never becomes wealthy by work alone, there is nothing like good real estate in a town that MUST grow to make him independent quickly, easily and safely. We commend this to our readers.

DOCTORS CONDEMN OILY LINIMENTS

The Public Are Warned to be Careful of These Strong-Smelling Oily Liniments Containing Harmful Acids, Ammonia, Etc.

Many people have clung to the old-fashioned idea that a thick, greasy liniment is the best kind. Doctors say not—and they know.

Recently a number of these white, oily liniments were analyzed, and they were found to contain an enormously high percentage of harmful acids, and such irritating chemicals as ammonia, etc. For the moment they may cause a warm sensation when first applied, but their continued use never cures rheumatism, and only deteriorates the skin, sets up inflammation and causes endless trouble.

When a doctor warns you to quit using a white, oily liniment—do so. He knows that a thick liniment can't penetrate, can't sink through the pores and reach the seat of the pain.

When asked his opinion a few days ago, Dr. Roberts stated that he considered a strong, penetrating, pain-subduing liniment, such as "Nerviline," to be superior to any of the white ammonia liniments. In his twenty-five years of practice he had witnessed cases of rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago that simply would not respond to ordinary treatment—but Nerviline cured them. The same physician also spoke of the great advantages of keeping a preparation like Nerviline in the house always, because of cramps, diarrhoea, stomach disorders, earache, toothache, headache and such minor ailments. Nerviline is a first-class cure. There is scarcely an ache or a pain, internal or external, that Nerviline won't cure. In thousands of homes no other pain-relieving medicine is used. Fifty years' continued success and the endorsement of the profession are proof that Nerviline is the liniment for the home.

PROFESSIONAL ETIQUETTE

Some Barristers Curious Customs and Traditions Belonging to the Old Country.

From the day when he eats his first student's dinner to the day when he pockets his last professional fee, the man of wig and gown in England has to observe customs and to obey traditions such as the members of no other learned profession have any knowledge of and which are not even known in Canada amongst the lawyers.

The Temple, where for the most part the would-be Lord Chancellor has his legal nursery, is an effect nest of old-world observances, tinking it with the far-off time when it was the home of Crusading Knights, who feasted, six and more centuries ago, on the very spot on which the young Templar of our day eats the dinners that go some way towards qualifying him for his wig.

Brothers All!

The very grace that heralds his meal and the grace that concludes it are the same, in the Inner Temple, that the Knights of the Cross listened to when the Plantagenet Kings were wearing their crowns. Like their martial predecessors, the Benchers file into the Middle Temple Hall preceded by the mace, the substitute for the old-time battle-axe. Their entry is heralded by a loud blow of the mace on the floor, as was that of the senior Knights Templar of old by a similar blow with the butt-end of a lance; and the grace is preceded by three blows with a wooden mallet, the ancient knightly form of invoking the Trinity.

Barristers and students mingle and feast together at the same tables, without any regard to seniority — a survival of the ancient Templar practice of the essential principle of brotherhood. If one of them is dissatisfied with his food, he may send a sample of it to the Treasurer for his verdict, just as the most junior Templar in King John's time would submit any food of which he disapproved to the Senior Knight; and the fragments of the modern Grand Day banquet are given to the servants of the Inn just as the surplus food was always given by the Knights of old to the poor.

The Knights Templar were summoned to the hall of feasting by the blowing of a horn, and to-day the Middle Templar is similarly called to the table by blasts of the very horn which summoned his predecessors in Elizabethan days. These, and the arrangement of messes, the ceremonials of bowing, the circulation of the loving-cup and many another custom, all serve to link the Templar of to-day, with his martial "forefathers" of long-dead centuries.

Briefs and Fees.

And these are but a few of the many quaint customs and regulations which the man of wig and gown must observe, if he does not wish to get himself into trouble with the authorities. When he is qualified to accept briefs and to play the part of a counsel "learned in the law," he must walk very warily to avoid the countless pitfalls of etiquette that mark his path to the Woolsack.

However an empty purse may tempt him, he must not accept a professional fee that falls short of the irreducible guinea, with a half-crown added for his clerk, whether he has one or not. Nor must he accept less than the fee, however big it is, that is marked on his brief for all to see.

However much he may yearn for clients, he cannot even see one unless through the introduction of a solicitor; and the solicitor must be present at the interview. Between him and the litigant whose cause he is to plead there is a gulf which only a solicitor can bridge. And when the solicitor appears at his chambers, bearing the coveted brief, it must be handed, not to Mr. "Wig," but to his clerk, and it is the clerk, and not the master, who arranges the delicate matter of fees.

No Touting Allowed.

Some professional men may tout for clients; but not so the barrister. It will be an evil day for him when he starts brief-hunting, though he may be starving for lack of golden guineas. If he calls at a friendly solicitor's office for a gossip, or accepts an invitation to a dinner or a dance at his house, he is going perilously near the danger-line. If he is a wise man he will avoid the company of solicitors and pass them by, like the Levite, "on the other side."

On circuit the watchful eyes of Etiquette are always on him. Even for the sake of company, if he be a sociable man, he must not travel there by any class but the first; nor may he reach an Assize town earlier than the day before the list opens.

However much his services are wanted on another circuit than his own he must turn a deaf ear, unless his brief comes to him marked with a special fee of at least fifty guineas, in addition to the fee he would receive on his own circuit. If he is unable to appear in any case for which he is retained, he must provide a substitute; for whose services, however, he may pay what he pleases. The fee he puts into his own pocket.

Even his professional dress is regulated for him to the extent that he must not appear in court in any coat but one of sober black; nor must he show his face in court if he is carrying the blue bag which may be his familiar companion in the street and train. Unless he is entitled to carry a red bag (and this he may not buy—it must be given to him by some friendly senior), he must be content to make his appearance with his briefs and papers under his arm.

From Generation to Generation.

Grandfather Billings smiled covertly when Billings junior wondered where Billings third, aged seven, got his "trickiness." "If I didn't keep my eyes open," said Billings junior, hotly, "Billy would outwit me every time."

"This morning," he continued, "I promised him a whipping to-night. When the event came off just now he never flinched or yelled. DEATH OF MR. HYDE

Remarkable Incidents in Real Life of the Dual Existence in One Man — Bad and Good.

In Springfield, Massachusetts, a murder trial is engaging attention, chiefly because of the remarkable Jekyll and Hyde existence which is attributed to the accused, Bertram Spencer. He, it is alleged, was a quiet clerk by daytime, a young man of model habits, teetotaller, non-smoker, Scripture reader, a devoted husband and father, and with no more serious weakness than post-card-stamp collecting; and yet at night, according to the evidence, he was a robber, burglar, despoiler of women, and murderer.

USEFUL IGNORANCE

Brayson: "Come out with me for a ride in my motor-car?"

Wise: "How long have you had it?"

"Just got it."

"Had any experience with cars?"

"No."

"Going to run it yourself?"

"I am."

"Can you mend a punctured tyre?"

"No."

"Wouldn't know the first thing to do?"

"Not the first thing."

"Have you studied, read, or been given any advice?"

"No; I tell you I don't know anything about them."

"How far do you want to go?"

"Just as far as the thing will go."

"All right. I'll come with you."

"What! Why, I didn't dream you'd accept my invitation."

"Why not?"

"I didn't think you'd care to go out in a motor-car with a man who doesn't know anything about it."

"Nonsense! You're just the man."

"How's that?"

"Simply because, my friend, if we break down, we'll drop the machine and get home by train. But if you thought you knew anything about it, you'd spend the rest of the day trying to put it right, while I'd have to stay and suffer with you as a matter of common courtesy."

Miss Elder: "You fancy yourself very clever, I dare say; but, I could give you a wrinkle or two."

Miss Younger: "No doubt; you could and never miss them."

WOOD PULP AND PAPER TRADE MEET

Home Market Club Against Its Free Importation Into American Markets Especially from Canada.

(Special Cable Service.)

BOSTON. — Just before adjournment of its meeting here, the Home Market Club went on record as favoring the free importation of wood pulp and print paper from Canada, and the possibility of the extension of the policy to other pulp and paper producing countries. The resolution, which was adopted unanimously, was as follows:

"Whereas, wood pulp and print paper have been placed on the free list so far as Canada is concerned, notwithstanding that [illegible] concessions on the part of Canada have been denied us, [illegible] demands are now being made under the favored nation clause by all paper exporting countries for the same tariff privileges which have been extended to Canada:

"Be it resolved, that we protest against this unjust treatment of American paper manufacturers and respectfully petition Congress to repeal this legislation."

Secretary Martin, after the adoption of the resolution, pointed out that in 1906 and 1907 the paper producing countries of Europe, held by Norway, Germany, the Netherlands, Austria and Great Britain, had a surplus for export amounting to $337,127,000, or nearly twice as large as the entire paper and wood pulp production of the United States.

THE GOLDEN ROSE MINING COMPANY

LIMITED OF ORILLIA

Capitalization $500,000; Divided into 500,000 Shares; Par Value $1.00

Have decided to mine a large quantity of the Very Rich Ore shown up by recent developing work, and also intend to erect a mill to crush from 20 to 25 tons a day. This will enable the Company to pay dividends next summer. In order to provide funds for this purpose the Company now offer the balance of the 50,000 shares offered to the public in the Prospectus dated 26th day of September, 1910, filed with the Provincial Secretary, Sept. 27th, 1910. These shares are now selling at $1.25 per share until Nov. 25th. They will then advance to $1.50 per share. They will continue to advance in price as developing work proceeds. Assays got from this property run from $22.00 in gold per ton to $86,-240.40 (eighty-six thousand two hundred and forty dollars and forty cents). Part of the machinery is now at the mine—the balance will be taken in on the snow roads this winter.

The Golden Rose Mine is forty miles from Markstay Station by winter roads, and in summer it is reached by boat from Temagami Station on T. & N. O. Ry.

MILL RUN

Four and a quarter tons of ore was sent to Kingston. It averaged $50.00 in gold to the ton.

71.7 PER CENT. FREE MILLING

Four assays obtained from Hendley & Parker, Sudbury, gave, respectively, gold values of $2,419.01 $1,020.68, $787.63, $102.72. Two just recently assayed $607.20 and $393.60.

This stock is closely held, and will not be listed with any broker till the mill is installed and the first dividends paid. A small block will then be listed to make it liquid. As an investment this is second to none.

Applications for shares should be sent to

TIED DOWN

20 Years' Slavery—How She Got Freedom.

A dyspepsia veteran who writes from one of England's charming rural homes to tell how she won victory in her 20 year's fight, naturally exults in her triumph over the tea and coffee habit:

"I feel it a duty to tell you," she says, "how much good Postum has done me. I am grateful, but also desire to let others who may be suffering as I did, know of the delightful method by which I was relieved.

"I had suffered for 20 years from dyspepsia, and the giddiness that usually accompanies that painful ailment, and which frequently prostrated me. I never drank much coffee, and cocoa and even milk did not agree with my impaired digestion, so I used tea, exclusively, till about a year ago, when I found in a package of Grape-Nuts, the little book, 'The Road to Wellville.'

"After a careful reading of the booklet I was curious to try Postum and sent for a package. I enjoyed it from the first, and at once gave up tea in its favor.

"I began to feel better very soon. My giddiness left me after the first few days' use of Postum, and my stomach became stronger so rapidly that it was not long till I was able (as I still am) to take milk and many other articles of food of which I was formerly compelled to deny myself. I have proved the truth of your statement that Postum 'makes good, red blood.'

"I have become very enthusiastic over the merits of my new table beverage, and during the past few months, have conducted a Postum propaganda among my neighbors which has brought benefit to many, and I shall continue to tell my friends of the "better way' in which I rejoice." Name given by Canadian Postum Co. Windsor, Ont.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

The Commission System.

Peterborough has long felt an interest in the new system of government by commission, hoping some day perhaps to adopt it. It will therefore be pleasing to many who favor the new plan to learn that on Monday the people of Dundas are to vote on a by-law constituting an elective commission to manage the public affairs of the town. In our judgment management by a commission is the best form of management, providing the commissioners are of the right sort.

A Des Moines man had an attack of muscular rheumatism in his shoulder. A friend advised him to go to Hot Springs. That meant an expense of $150.00 or more. He sought for a quicker and cheaper way to cure it and found it in Chamberlain's Liniment. Three days after the first application of this liniment he was well. For sale by all dealers.

Another Projected Railway.

The Ontario Gazette contains a notice of application to the Ontario Legislature by the Kawartha Transportation Company for a charter to build an electric railway in the City of Peterborough and surrounding district. The company applies for power to build a line in the city, and through several of the surrounding municipalities, touching most of the summer resorts on the Kawartha Lakes and terminating at Rice Lake.

A prominent member of the Board of Trade, Toronto, writes to Grand Trunk Ry. System as follows: "The members of the Board that took advantage of the dining car on your railway on their return from Guelph last evening were heighted with the accommodation, and service given on the car, and we are sorry that our party did not include more members to take advantage of the splendid service we all enjoyed.

The Knights of Columbus.

The Times has received an enquiry concerning the Knights of Columbus, who recently purchased James Stevenson homestead. For the information of our friend as well as the general public, we may add that the Knights of Columbus is, we believe, a distinctly Roman Catholic Institution with branches throughout the country. It is not, therefore, open to Protestants.

Plumbers Are Busy.

Owing to the cold spell many water pipes throughout the city, in the houses, were frozen, and the result was that there was a great demand for plumbers. It is an old and true saying that "it is an ill wind that blows nobody good."

Proclaimed a New Sultan.

Sir Rennell Rodd, the British ambassador in Rome, has seen an enormous amount of diplomatic service, having served in Berlin, Paris, Athens, Cairo, and Stockholm. Of him Queen Victoria said: "Rennell Rood has a suavity of manner which would get over anyone."

This was on his return from Abyssinia; whither he was sent on a special mission to Menelik, and not only succeeded in arranging affairs satisfactorily, but brought back some gorgeous presents from the Emperor to the Queen, as well as an Ethopian star and various orders for his own adornment.

It fell to his lot in 1893 to proclaim a new sultan of Zanzibar, Mr. Rennell Rodd, as he then was, being British agent.

Fortune In Stamps.

A lady living in Sydney for many years has inherited a collection of postal stamps left by her father, who had pursued his hobby of collecting for fifty years. The daughter was ignorant of any knowledge of philately, and threw the stamps into an old trunk.

Recently she visited a stamp exhibition, and for the first time awoke to the value of the stamps in her possession. She secured the assistance of experts, who estimated the value of the collection at $100,000.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Cox and their daughter of Edmonton, are visiting with Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Morgan, Park street.

Mrs. H. P. Morgan, 295 Park street, will receive with her guests, Mrs. W. E. Cox, of Edmonton, to-day afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock.

I Am Willing To Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10,000 Worth of Medicine

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this medicine, and anyone suffering from these diseases can get a box of it absolutely free. All that is necessary is to send me your address.

I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and pay me if cured. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the Uric Acid sufferers of the world, so I can show them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, nor would I accept it now or later if you sent it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying calls to urinate. But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to listen to anyone thereafter. Happily, I am in a position now to demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to spend any money to find out; I don't ask them to believe me, nor even to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my own cost. That is surely fair.

To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars, which will be used to compound my medicine. Much of it is ready now to be sent out, all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there be thousands of them. And anyone who needs it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have a disease for which this medicine is intended, I ask you to send me some of your leading symptoms. If you have any of the symptoms in the list printed here you need my medicine and if you will write me I will gladly send you a box of it free with full directions for your use. Look the symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, then write me about as follows: "Dear Dr., I notice symptoms number"—here put down the numbers, give your age, full address, and send it to me. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 837 Franklin Building, Toronto, Can.

The ten thousand dollars I am spending for the compounding of my medicine is only a part of the money I am devoting to this cause, for the package of medicine I send you will be fully prepaid at my expense. From any standpoint you view it, YOU incur no expense or obligation. Just tell others who you know are suffering who sent you the medicine that cured you.

I am promising to give away ten thousand dollars' worth of medicine, and I will do that; I am promising to send any sufferer who writes me a box of this medicine and full directions free of charge, and I will do that.

who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

I can say further that this medicine has been vouched for according to law as complying in every detail with all requirements. It will stop rheumatism, it will stop pain and backache, it will stop too frequent desire to urinate; it will heal, soothe and strengthen. You will be better in every way for having taken it. There is not an ingredient that can injure; not one but will benefit. All that I ask is that you use it yourself so that you may be personally convinced.

Owing to the large number of requests, I have had ten thousand more copies of my medical book printed. This book is new and up to date and contains complete descriptions, symptoms, causes, effects and cures of kidney, bladder and rheumatic diseases. All who write for the free medicine will be sent a copy of this grand illustrated medical book—the largest ever written on these diseases for free and general distribution.

If you need medicine such as I have, if you are anxious to be cured and don't want to spend any money LOOKING for cures, write me. Read the symptoms over and let me hear from you today.

These Are the Symptoms:

1—Pain in the back.
2—Too frequent desire to urinate.
3—Burning or obstruction of urine.
4—Pain or soreness in the bladder.
5—Prostatic trouble.
6—Gas or pain in the stomach.
7—General debility, weak nerves, dizziness
8—Pain or sore—under right rib.
9—Swelling in any part of the body.
10—Constipation or liver trouble.
11—Palpitation or pain under the heart.
12—Pain in the hip joint.
13—Pain in the neck or head.
14—Pain or soreness in the kidneys.
15—Pain or swelling of the joints.
16—Pain or swelling of the muscles.
17—Pain and soreness in nerves.
18—Acute or chronic rheumatism.

NAVAL SECRETS

Every Workman Employed on a New Warship aHs to Take An Oath That he Will Reveal Nothing He Sees.

The recent appointment of Mr Winston Churchill to be head of the Admiralty recalls the fact that there is no more jealously-guarded department than that over which he now presides. The head of the Navy is the most reticent man in the Cabinet — when question time comes round. Whenever an answer is given you may be quite sure that it doesn't give very much away.

All new ships are built with the greatest possible secrecy. To begin with, every man who is employed, in whatever capacity, on a new warship has to take an oath that he will never reveal anything he may learn. No outsider is allowed anywhere near the building yards. When the first Dreadnought was being built, for instance, the great vessel was guarded so jealously that no one, save those actually employed on her, were allowed within forty yards. To show how strictly this order was carried out, two post-captains of the Navy, in uniform, were turned back by the police and private detectives on guard.

The actual plans of a new battleship are the most carefully guarded of all the Admiralty's secrets. They are kept in rooms which rival any strong-rooms of a bank. The draughtsmen never have the whole plans in their possession. Parts are given out at a time to different men, and every draughtsman is carefully watched in order that he can take no copy of the part of the plan in front of him. So well are the complete plans divided up that even if three or four men agreed to act together they would be unable to find out much about Britain's latest Dreadnought. Whenever any portion of the plans goes out of the strong-room its movements are as carefully watched and checked as those of the keys of the room.

When the German Emperor visited Gibraltar a few years ago the greatest precautions were quietly taken, in the politest possible way, to prevent members of the Emperor's suite seeing too much. Sentries were placed at all sorts of odd corners on board all the men-of-war. Every part of the vessels was carefully guarded, and more than one German officer who had 'wandered' below was politely shown the way up to the deck.

A GOOD HAND

A young fellow had popped the question, and anxiously awaited the answer that was to decide his future.

"Do you ever gamble at cards?" the fair one asked.

"No," he answered; "but if I did now would be the time."

"Why?" she inquired.

"Because," he answered, with a deep sigh, "I hold such a beautiful hand."

A Skin Tightener To Reduce Wrinkles

(From Popular Medicine)

In beauty culture, as in the treatment of disease, the tendency nowadays is to seek the removal of causes, rather than to treat symptoms or effects. In the matter of wrinkles, for instance, we know that the lines or furrows are caused by the skin becoming loose in places, so it does not perfectly fit the flesh beneath. The skin then "wrinkles" or sags. Naturally the proper thing to do is to tighten the skin, make it fit—then there's no room for lines, wrinkles and folds, and no surplus skin to sag or bag.

The best known formula for the purpose is: Saxolite, 1 oz., in 1 pint witch hazel. Use as a wash lotion. The effect is truly remarkable, especially as results are immediate. Ask the druggist for the powdered saxolite, which dissolves more quickly than any other form.

DEFIED THE KING OF SPAIN

Horrah for Princess Eulalie! She Defies a King; She "Won't Be Sat On" By Her Royal Nephew.

(Publishers Press, Now Service.)
Madrid.—Princess Infanta Eulalie has written a book advocating divorce. King Alfonso of Spain, on hearing of it, instantly telegraphed the princess, his aunt: "I order you to suspend publication until I have taken cognizance of the contents and given my permission to publish." The princess wired back that "I consider myself, so far as my private life is concerned, free to act as I deem fit," and to her friends she declares she will sell her property and leave Spain forever rather than suppress the publication of her book. "I will not be sat on," she adds. "The only things I value are my personality and my work. I do not attach any importance to my birth, because I cannot help it."

The Princess, who lives in Paris, was the guest of Chicago and U. S. A. in May, 1895, during the world's fair, to represent the Queen of Spain in the Columbian celebration.

The Best Helpmeet.

All men, as well as women, like to be understood. Sympathy is their greatest help, and no woman who is self-centred, who is vain and thinks only of herself will gain the highest regard of man. She may be exquisitely beautiful, have a crowd of admirers at her feet, but she cannot bestow that wonderful happiness a plain little woman full of sympathy gives to her husband. If she understands him, is interested in him and his life-work, whether it be planting vegetables, composing music, or building towers, she will encourage him to reach his highest aim. Being beautiful will not make up for selfish indifference.

Fun and Fresh Ideas.

To remain young one must have company and enjoy it. Not a big dancer party one day, an afternoon reception the next, a late card party the following, and so on. This, for the hostess, is hard work that will quickly bring the appearance of age in its train, and, indeed, no work is more arduous. To attend to the wants of guests, to anticipate their desires, to have the whole responsibility of the success of a party is an utterly differtn thing to the bright company necessary to the well-being of the woman who leads too monotonous a life.

The limiting influence of four walls is what so many women who are housewives and mothers have to fight against, and they need company as a recreation.

THE GOLD SHIP

THE GOLD SHIP
The Way Treasure Is Transported From One Country to Another and the Precautions Taken To Protect It.

Of the many romantic happenings which relieve the drabness of modern [illegible] more surely for the imagination than the conveyance to and fro, of the great quantities of gold — whether bullion or specie — which, week in, week out, form an ever-flowing golden stream round the civilized world.

Perhaps the largest quantities of the precious metal are those conveyed weekly from South Africa, the output of the mines, which in bars, not unlike exaggerated cakes of yellow soap in appearance, find their way to the Bank of England and the other great banks. The value of these weekly cargoes frequently runs into millions.

Then, too, every mail steamer which leaves the docks carries its quantum of gold. Gold in bars, gold in sovereigns, gold in the coinage of every nation.

The casual passer-by who wanders through the long corridors of the Bank of England may happen on a little stone-paved courtyard, completely shut in by several sets of iron gates. Here he may see gold "bricks" being thrown into very ordinary-looking vans by sturdy porters, who handle the precious metal as if it were mere clay.

A Big Responsibility.

The van being full, a couple of individuals, also very ordinary-looking, climb in and seat themselves on its gold-paved floor, and off it goes to the docks or the railway-station.

Arrived at the docks, the gold, whether in bars or coin — which latter is packed in bags containing 1,000 sovereigns or their equivalent, which in turn are enclosed in iron-bound boxes, sealed with an official seal at the Bank of England on every joint — goes straight on board the ship it is to voyage in.

The bars, or boxes, are received by one of the ship's officers, and, with the assistance of a couple of quartermasters, are carefully checked and tallied. The officer — usually the second officer — signs a receipt for them, and they are placed in a special hold, to which access is obtained by only one entrance, and that is locked and sealed.

From the moment that he has signed the receipt the officer is personally responsible for the bullion and specie and its safe custody and delivery, and access to the treasure-hold can only be had — legitimately — by means of the key, which remains in his possession.

When Silence is Golden.

As to the exact precautions taken to guard the bullion-hold and its contents, and its precise situation, representatives of the various companies preserve a complete, and very wise, reticence, and even sailors and officers on the actual vessel seldom know where the gold is kept during its transhipment, so well is the secret kept.

Probably not more than three or four people in the ship are in possession of the information. The truth is that, surprising as the statement may sound to the uninitiated, there are in existence very highly organised gangs of international thieves, whose special work is the theft, or attempted theft, of gold while in the charge of the steamer companies.

BENEFICIAL WARS

Some People Argue That Wars and Industrial Calamities Benefit Mankind in the Long Run.

Few calamities in the world's history have been unattended by some advantage to humanity. The late Lord Palmerston is credited with having stated that even a great war had its benefits for the English people inasmuch as it induced them to study geography. There are people who go much further, and seriously argue that the horrors of war are afterwards compensated by reforms and discoveries which mankind at large would never have enjoyed but for the drastic chastisement which war inflicts. Among the arguments of this kind deduced from history is the statement that all the wealth and luxury the world has enjoyed from the industry of brass-working would probably have been lost but for the sacking and burning of the city of Corinth in the year 146 B. C. In Corinth there were immense quantities of gold, silver, and copper, and it is said that the violence of the conflagration was so great that these precious metals were melted and ran together, and thus the famous Corithian brass was first manufactured.

NEW BATHING SUITS

New York.—Sports on bathing suits are easy in the Ant think. Miss Dorothy Taylor, the young New York society woman who abbreviated costume on Europe's bathing beaches last summer, says it keeps American visitors. Trousers or trunks are too clumsy. Only prudish, silly people with naughty minds see the harm in a "skirtless bathing suit," she says. "When I go swimming, I go into the water, and I wear silk trousers, or trunks and a long silk jersey, which reaches almost to my knees."

CURES ACHES AND PAINS LIKE MAGIC

Hodgeck, Sask., Jan. 10.—(Special.)—Among the many on the prairies who are shouting the praises of Dodd's Kidney Pills none speak with more enthusiasm than Mr. Matt. Syverson, a well-known resident of this place.

"I suffered from rheumatism for three years," Mr. Syverson says; "and I was also troubled with an acute pain around my heart. My case was a severe one and several times I doubted if recovery was possible. But seven boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me completely.

"I can truly and honestly recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills as a remedy for cases like mine. They surely cleared out all my aches and pains as if by magic."

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. When the kidneys are right they strain all the uric acid out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills make the kidneys right. That's why they never fail to cure rheumatism and kindred diseases.

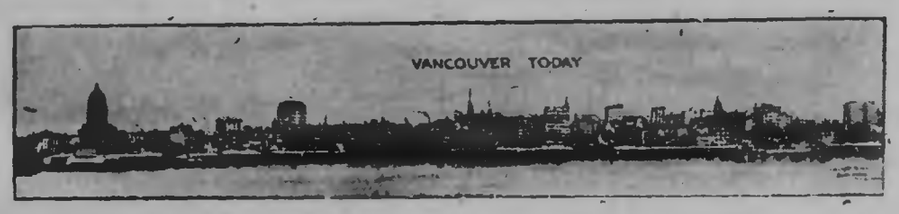
100,000 SHARES AT $1.00

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has been organized recently with an authorized capital of $500,000, to do a general building, real estate, and insurance business, and is actively engaged in Vancouver and Victoria—two most promising fields. The profits from building houses for cash and selling on instalments is well known, and will be one of the principal channels from which profits will be derived. BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its own building department and architect, and does its own construction. In addition to building houses, BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its real estate department, where it carries on a general real estate business, discounting agreements of Sale, subdividing and transacting a general insurance business.

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS LIMITED, is a new concern, having been in business less than two months in Vancouver, but is becoming well known as the Company without any promotion shares and with a strong board of directors, made up of well known Vancouver and Victoria business men.

Shareholders may conservatively look for a 10 per cent dividend the first year, increasing thereafter and a steady advance in the value of their shares caused by the substantial reserve it will always be the policy of the directors to build up.

Companies run on similar lines, notably the Los Angeles Investment Company and "Home Builders," both of Los Angeles, have proved phenominally successful, the former, which has been in business some sixteen years, having accumulated assets of over $6,000,000, and paying 28 per cent. dividends; and the latter, which started business three years ago, with only $1,250 capital, has assets to-day of over $1,089,000, a surplus of over $308,000, is paying 17 per cent. dividends, and its $1.00 shares are selling at $2.30.



FIRST ISSUE OF SHARES

100,000 Thousand Shares are offered at $1.00 per share, 44,500 of which have been subscribed. These shares may be purchased for cash or on the instalment plan. $10.00 cash and $5.00 per month handles 100 shares. Mail your subscription To-day.

"Silver Greyhounds."

Cause of Rheumatism

Many physicians believe that rheumatism is the result of over-feeding, followed by putrefactive changes in the foodstuffs in the alimentary canal; that the action of certain bacteria produces specific toxic (poison) substances which, when introduced into the blood, cause a deviation from the normal oxidation process, thus causing the condition that is designated rheumatic. In the majority of instances it is probably due to eating too much of the vegetable class of foods; in other cases it is the result of eating too much meat.

Highest on Earth

The Loa Bridge in the China Andes is the highest bridge in the world. This wonderful construction is four hundred feet high, eight hundred feet long, and stands ten thousand feet above sea-level. It crosses a great ravine some three hundred miles from Antofagasta, on the railway running from that port into Bolivia. This line is also of interest from the fact that it is the highest railway in the world, climbing at one point up to over sixteen thousand six hundred feet above sea level.

SOCIETY DEALERS

Society People By Art Dealing Make Good Money on the Side And Many Make Their Living By It.

Although there are many owners of art treasures and antiquities who are scrupulously honest and have never intentionally sold an object which was not exactly what they described it to be — and who to-day, in quite a number of cases, are prepared to give 10 per cent. profit upon the return of almost every article they have sold during the last ten years, so greatly has the value of these increased within that period — it is a fact that there are many others who, taking advantage of the modern craze for collecting, resort to all sorts of dodges in order to impose upon the ignorant.

For instance, in Great Britain, it is quite a common trick for dealers to distribute part of their stock in farmhouses and cottages, in the hope that enthusiastic strangers will assume that they have been there for generations. After thus stocking a cottage the dealer casually mentions to customers that he has been told of a certain cottager who has some very good antique "stuff," and that he himself has had no time to verify the report. Of course, the address is promptly asked for by the enthusiastic collector, who is thus led to purchase goods which he might not otherwise think of buying.

An Ingenious Method.

This is a somewhat common and fairly well-known trick, and the consequence is that some dealers have hit upon a more ingenious method. They arrange with some well-known man or woman in "society," who is furnishing a new house, to decorate it with fine furniture, pictures, and prints, supplied free on the understanding that should a visitor admire any of them they are to be sold if possible, and that a handsome commission will be given on the transaction. "There are certainly in society, many who add to their diminished incomes by either selling works of art themselves or acting as agents for dealers.

"A well-known connoisseur, when recently visiting a Duchess, had the following experience:—

"The lady was delighted to see him; she particularly wished for his advice and assistance. 'Algy has run terribly into debt; he may have to resign his commission in the Guards. I cannot ask his father for money, as he is badly hit by the depression in agriculture. You know all the rich Americans and the value of fine furniture; could you possibly help me to sell that magnificent Louis Seize piece? It was given to a former Duke by the Emperor of Russia, and it was always said to be worth many thousands of pounds.' The visitor looked at the bit of furniture — it was one he had seen at the shop of a celebrated dealer, who had had it for years on his hands and had resorted to this device to try to get rid of it."

SILENT HUSBANDS

While Chinamen Have Risen in Chinese Revolt Women Have Determined to Assert Themselves Too.

While Chinamen have risen in revolt against the Manchu dynasty, their women-folk — at any rate some of them — have come to the conclusion that the time has arrived when they should make a strong protest against the custom which forces a girl to be betrothed to a boy in her infancy and ultimately marry him, although they may be scarcely acquainted with one another and have nothing in common. Such is the determination of Chinese women to stamp out this custom that some years ago nine Cantonese maidens drowned themselves together one night in the Pearl River rather than accept the lot of wife under these conditions.

"In three districts in Central Kwangtung, where a girl can always get work at silk-winding, thousands of girls have formed themselves into anti-matrimonial associations, the members of which refuse to live with the husband more than the customary three days.

"Then they take advantage of their legal right to visit mother, and never return, save on certain days or after a term of years. If the parents attempt to restore the runaway bride to her husband she drowns herself or takes opium; so parents and magistrates have had to let the girls have their way. By presenting herself in her husband's home on certain festival days the bride keeps her wifely status."

Dr. Ross also mentions a very curious practice observed between husbands and wives in certain districts of China. Etiquette, it appears, forbids husband and wife to be seen talking together. Thus, a young man and his wife meet in an empty lane and, supposing themselves unobserved, he asks her for the key of the garden gate.

She throws it on the ground without looking at him, and, once indoors, rates him soundly for speaking to her in public.

"Suppose," she says, "someone had seen us!"

Musician and Scientist.

There is no more brilliant scientist in the world to-day than Sir William Ramsay, who has been warning Britain that, at the present rate of consumption, her coal supply will only last another 175 years. His most wonderful discoveries have been in connection with new gases in the atmosphere, upon which such names as argon, neon, and xenon have been bestowed, and the experimental work which led to these discoveries ranks as the most refined ever carried out. Of xenon, for example, there is only about one part in 70,000,000 parts of air. Sir William devotes his leisure to music. He plays both the piano and violin and has written the words of not a few songs. The collecting of curios is another of Sir William's hobbies, and at his house at Regent's Park may be seen many queer treasures thousands of years old.

Absorption Process Makes Faces Young

(From The Home Maker)

Success has at last come to scientists who for years have sought some effectual method of removing the outer facial skin in cases of unsightly complexions, which would be both painless and entirely non-injurious. The new process is so simple, the means so ordinary, so inexpensive, the wonder is that no one had discovered the same long ago.

It has been amply demonstrated that common mercolized wax, to be had at any drug store, completely removes, by gentle absorption, all the withered, lifeless cuticle, showing the youthful, rose-like skin underneath. The mercolized wax is applied at night—like cold cream, but not rubbed in—and washed off in the morning. The absorption also cleanses clogged pores, increasing the skin's breathing capacity and capillary circulation, preserving the tone, color and natural beauty of the new skin.

Duel Up To Date

A contest in the air between rival aviators for a girl's hand was the feature of a one-day aviation meet arranged for at Lima, Ohio. Two of the aviators, Jack Bachelor and Bert Chambers, had been laying siege to the heart of Miss Dorothy Dale, of Tiffin, Ohio. Miss Dale refused to choose between them, and in a recent meet in that city made a trip into the clouds with both. She promised to make her decision and intimated that she would accept the one who made the highest altitude record during the day.

A Startling Revelation

The friends of Miss Mary McKenzie, of London, were astonished to hear that she had gone into consumption.

This sad intelligence came as a shock to Miss McKenzie's many friends. In the early fall she contracted a heavy cold which developed rapidly into Catarrh, and finally made such rapid advances that the bronchial tubes and lungs became affected.

Although the doctors said nothing short of a change of residence to the south would benefit, on the advice of a Dundas Street druggist Miss McKenzie decided to thoroughly test Catarrhozone, which is warranted to cure all diseases of the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes.

Miss McKenzie says: "After my druggist had recommended Catarrhozone I spoke to my friends about it and they all said it was such a good remedy that I commenced forthwith to inhale it five or six times each day. I breathed it deeply into my lungs, and felt its beneficial action very quickly. It seemed to go where other remedies did not reach, and was so pleasant and convenient that I did not mind using it very frequently, which, probably, was the cause of it curing my obstinate case so quickly. Certainly no case of Catarrh or Bronchitis should go uncured if the sufferer can get Catarrhozone, which is a sovereign remedy, worthy of the highest recommendations."

Miss McKenzie's case needs no enlargement. She was in a critical condition, apparently beyond the aid of doctors' medicines.

Catarrhozone has cured her, and others in her condition should no longer experiment with uncertain, untried treatments, but should turn at once to catarrhozone, and in it they will find relief and cure unobtainable by other means. Remember the name, Catarrhozone. Complete outfit guaranteed to cure. Price $1.00. Small size 25 cents. Druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

WIFE SEARCHING

Confessions of a White Man Who After Searching the World Found His Eden and His Eve In Tahiti.

At last the right Utopia has been discovered. The ideal wife, the ideal home, the ideal life, and ideal work are now awaiting any man who cares to follow the example of Mr. John Darling, known among the natives of Tahiti, the principal island of the Society group in the South Seas, as "the wise man on the mountain."

Darling lives on berries, has discarded clothes, and spurns all the institutions of civilization in his habitations, which he has described as "Eden." The circumstances which led Darling to his "Eden" are somewhat remarkable. As a young man he was a keen student of the Bible, and the more he read and pondered, the more he was led to believe that the modern present-day man did not live naturally.

Darling decided to go out into the world and live the life that according to his ideas, the Scriptures said he should live. He visited many parts of the world in search of an "Eden," and at last decided that Tahiti fulfilled all his demands. The French authorities of the island, however, strongly objected to his eccentric habits. In fact, they led him to jail. The governor tried to persuade him to search for another "Eden" elsewhere, or, if he insisted on staying where he was, to conform to the sartorial rules of civilization. Mr. Darling was obstinate, however. Tahiti was the one spot on earth for him, and all the governor's men could not make him wear clothing.

Finally the governor had an inspiration, and presented Darling with a piece of land high upon the mountains, with a clear understanding that he would stay there with his ideas and minimum of clothing. Fruits and herbs grew there in plenty. The air was balmy and fine, and the view delightful. There he could play "Adam in Paradise" to his heart's content.

Darling readily accepted the offer, and in a short time on the top of his mountain he built a simple hut of palm leaves and branches.

Ultimately Mr Darling took as his wife a Tahiti maiden, in whom he declares he has found a wife who helps him to lead his happy, ideal life. That this is no passing whim on his part is evident from the fact that a relative recently died and left him a fortune of some $200,000, on condition that he returned once more to the ways of civilization; but Darling declined the fortune.

"Why," he exclaimed, "what do I want with money? What could money procure me better than I've got — happiness, health, and peace of mind from the knowledge of leading the life that I know man was intended to live!"

THE CELESTIAL

John Chinaman Not Taking Any Risks Even from Brithers Who Have Just Been Married.

An Englishman who was appointed to an important post in China got married soon after. Among the recipients of the usual little card boxes containing a piece of wedding-cake was a Chinese merchant with whom the bridegroom had an outstanding account for goods supplied.

After the honeymoon, one of the first persons the newly-wedded husband met was the Celestial creditor.

"And how did you like the cake?" said the Englishman, laughing, after the usual congratulations.

"Ah, ah," returned the Chinaman, with a cunning leer, "me no much big fool to eat him, sah. Me put cakes in fire. Burn him up. He, he!"

"Oh, that's too bad," said the Englishman, very much hurt. "You might have tasted it at least, out of compliment to my wife and myself. Why didn't you?"

"Me too clute, sah," said the Celestial, with the same winning smile. "You owe me money, sah; sendee poison cake; I eat him? I die; you no payee up. Houp-la! He, he, he! I know you Inglesh!"

A CLEVER WINDOW-SMASHER

A well-dressed man was hurrying along the Rue de Passy, in Paris, the other day. The pavement was wet, and the man slipped and fell, knocking against and smashing in his fall the window of a wine-shop.

Frantic excitement! The man groaned, the proprietor of the wine-shop rushed forth to demand amidst wild gesticulation, compensation for his broken window; a crowd gathered round to see he got it.

"But I have no money," wailed the unfortunate man.

"Search him!" screamed the proprietor.

No policemen was to be found at the moment so the crowd took the law into their own hands and went through the man's pockets. They hadn't gone far when they came upon a five-hundred-franc note.

"No money!" gasped the proprietor, in tones of mingled triumph and derision.

"No money!" jeered the crowd, who were lamentably lacking in sympathy with the poor man who had bumped himself on the hard, hard pavement.

"I shall take," said the proprietor of the wine-shop, "a hundred francs to repair my broken window." The crowd cheered, and the proprietor stuffed the four-hundred-francs' worth of change which he thrust into the hands of the man who had caused all the trouble.

The man hurried away, and when he was well out of sight and sound he laughed long and loud, for the five-hundred-franc note was a forgery which he with his own wicked hands had manufactured!

Letter Delayed in Delivery

A letter written in December, 1668, by a prominent member of the Body of Friends in Durham, Eng., has just been found in the Public Record Office having been misdirected. A copy of the letter has been forwarded to the descendants in the eighth generation of those for whom it was intended. The letter was addressed: "For My Loving friend [illegible] Butcher in Durham [illegible] to William Bywater [illegible] paid [illegible]"

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

THE CHINAMAN

What a Late Chaplain to the Forces at Hong-Kong Thinks of the Chinese.

Napoleon said that when China was moved the face of Europe would be changed. Yet, as the Chinese are naturally peaceful, we think that the Yellow Peril is a commercial one. The peril is that China will manufacture things cheaper than Europeans can and dismiss us from the trade of the Far East. How can we, with our high standard of comfort, strikes, and unrest generally, compete with the Chinese, combining, as they do, the active industry of the most civilised people with the passive patience of the North American Indian? Far more than we do the Chinese believe in the power of character and intellect. With this, rather than with armies and navies, they will conquer.

A Chinese is nearly always a person of resource. A young man was accused of knocking out his father's teeth, and was in danger of being put to death. A friend visited him and whispered in his ear, "It's a bad case."

Suddenly seizing the ear between his teeth, he gave it a severe bite.

"What do you mean?" asked the young man, raising his voice.

"I mean," was the answer, "that you are saved! You have come to show the marks of my teeth and say that they were made by your father, whose teeth, being shaky, dropped out."

Business Before Sentiment.

Two small things impress foreigners with the skill of the Chinese. One is the way they carve ivory balls, one within the other, to the number of seven or eight; and the other the inscription of minute characters inside agate or crystal snuff-bottles.

A Chinaman always appears to be looking round the corners of his eyes at you, and to have a meaning that you cannot get at. He gives you the impression that somebody, when he was born, sat on his nose, and that he has been lamenting the calamity ever since. And yet, though he never lays aside this expression of resigned wretchedness, the average Chinese is not at all more miserable than the average Britisher.

Speaking of Britishers, we may say that they and Chinamen have much in common. Both have a great capacity for making and enjoying money. Both have business aptitude and integrity, do their work well, and appreciate a good dinner. Equally with Englishmen, Celestials have common sense and respect for law, and do not allow sentiment to interfere with business. The Chinese are the British of the Far East, and the Japanese are the French.

Food of Sport.

The Chinese are not less conservative than the English. They dread any change that may cause trouble or disorder, and this is why they have put up so long with their wretched government. "Better be a dog in peace," they say, "than a man in anarchy." The "dog in peace" has now risen to war; let us hope that the splendid empire of China will not remain in anarchy.

Like the British, also, the Chinese are fond of sport, though their idea of sport is peculiar. They train quails, thrushes, and even fish to fight, and they bet on these, and on almost every other event.

The Chinese contrivances for the management and capture of beast, bird, and fish are as ingenious as they are simple. If, for instance, a donkey disturbs by braying in the night, a big stone is tied to his tail, and this humiliates him into silence.

When a Chinaman wishes to catch wild ducks he mixes an intoxicating spirit made of rice with corn and leaves the mixture for the birds. They become intoxicated, and are taken in their cups, so to speak. Another way is to put a gourd on his head and swim gently among the ducks. They are not frightened, because they only see the gourd and are accustomed to that, and the artful John pulls one duck after another by the legs into a bag attached to him. Everyone knows that John Chinaman trains cormorants to catch fish, not for themselves, but for him.

After cold water, there is nothing the Chinese so much fear as ridicule and disgrace, or the "loss of face." A magistrate who was to be beheaded asked that, as a special favour, he might wear his robes of office in order to save his face!

The Chinese are great at organising. The trade guilds which are established in every town are quite as powerful as our trade unions. Even beggars and thieves have guilds. Every morning the king of the beggars sends a detachment of his rag-clothed or nearly uncled subjects to collect poor-rates in the districts assigned to them. Owners of property pay so much a year to "the honourable guild of thieves" in order not to be robbed.

SHAM BATTLE SHAMS

The military manoeuvres were in a muddle. The "Purples" were supposed to be invading the territory of the "Greens," but why they were or what they were they didn't exactly know.

A large detachment of the 'Purples' began to cross the river by a wooden bridge to attack a small detachment of 'Greens.'

"Hi!" roared the 'Greens.' "Hi! You mustn't cross here! Can't you see the notice? This bridge is supposed to be destroyed."

"H'm! Is it?" responded the captain of the 'Purples,' grimly. "Well, then, we're supposed to be swimming across."

Costly Panama Hats

Even in modern times there have been men's hats which cost far more than anything worn by the ladies. That, for instance, presented to General Grant when he was in Mexico cost $1500, and justly claims to be the finest sombrero ever made. The admirers of Mr. Steward, a member of President Lincoln's Cabinet, too, paid $1000 for the Panama with which they presented him.

Big G For 30 Years the Standard Remedy for

Diseases of Mucous Membranes

Experienced pharmacists will tell you Big G is the accepted standard remedy for diseases of mucous membranes—discharges from the nose, throat and urinary organs. Avoid substitutes. To experiment is dangerous. Big G, used everywhere since 1889, has proved safe and reliable. Non-poisonous, antiseptic and basic in its properties, containing no silver nitrate, zinc sulphate, alcohol, cocaine, or any narcotic. It may be used full strength without fear. Why not cure yourself? Sold by druggists, or we will express prepaid, upon receipt of $1. Full particulars cheerfully given. Trade in sealed sealed in plain envelopes on request.

ILLUSTRATION OF PUBLIC OWNERSHIP.

The United States Government is Running Department Stores, Hotels and a Steamship Line in Panama.

The United States government, as everybody knows, is engaged in building as a public enterprise, a canal across the Isthmus of Panama. What the world does not generally understand is that as part of this operation the government is also running lines of railway, a departmental store, hotels and a steamship line. At this government departmental store it is possible to buy almost everything, including ladies' patent leather shoes, briar pipes, teething rings for babies, sugared almonds etc. No less than fifteen hotels are operated, besides 18 mess halls. During one month these places served nearly 1,000,000 meals all told.

This has led a writer to suggest the possibility of the United States government developing Alaska by means of railways operated by the government itself.

Does not what has been accomplished suggest something more—the possibility of solving the trust problem by means of public ownership? It seems futile to talk of going back to the old days of small industries and free competition. The economy in large operations is something the public will not readily consent to surrender. Neither does it seem altogether easy to solve the problem by public control of corporations. The only easy way out would seem to be going the whole length and providing for public operation, something which does not, in view of what is being accomplished in Panama, appear so very difficult after all.

ENORMOUS EATERS

Some Great Gastronomic Feats Performed at Different Times by Gluttons for Wagers, and Then Boast.

Not long ago a Berlin market porter undertook, for a wager, to put away, at one sitting, six mutton chops, twelve eggs, a goose, a duck, 6 lb. of potatoes, and 12 lb. of hay. Difficulties were anticipated with the last course, and large sums were laid against the accomplishment of the feat. The ingenious porter solved the difficulty by calling for a cigarette after he had finished the duck. He then set light to the hay, pounded the ashes up with the potatoes, and swallowed the lot. After a heated discussion the referee declared him the winner.

A certain Mr. Jerry Eke, of Norfolk, on one festive occasion had a small calf prepared and cooked for his special delectation, and deliberately consumed it, all but the bones, during the space of seven hours; and so little did this interfere with his excellent digestive powers that he joined his boon companions in a hearty repast the same night, and appeared to be none the worse for it.

Perhaps the smartest gastronomic feat on record was that performed by Vicomte de Viel Castel, who, to decide a wager, disposed of the following items in 2 hr. 40 min: Twenty-four dozen of oysters, a soup, a beefsteak, a pheasant stuffed with truffles, a salmis of ortolans, a dish of asparagus, another of peas, a pineapple, a dish of strawberries, five bottles of wine, ending with coffee and liqueurs. The meal was valued $125.

A Siberian soldier, notorious for the insatiable appetite he possessed, once disposed of a meal in the presence of an English officer, consisting of 10 lb. of bread and butter, 10 lb. of beef, and a bundle of tallow-candles as dessert. A young Russian soldier, seventeen years of age, named Tarone, ate 34 lb. of beef in twenty-four hours, and on another occasion disposed of a repast prepared for fifteen people.

A GOOD HAND

A young fellow had popped the question, and anxiously awaited the answer that was to decide his fate.

"Do you ever gamble at cards?" the fair one asked.

"No," he answered; "but if I did now would be the time."

"Why?" she inquired.

"Because," he answered, with a deep sigh, "I hold such a beautiful hand."

What poverty is like that of moral penury? When the head is poor, what mockery is money wealth!

Few people regret the times when they were silent, but many regret and often suffer because of imprudent speech.

People who pray on their knees on Sunday, and prey on their neighbors on Monday, need simplicity in their faith.

The essence of all good work is timeliness. For the right thing done at the wrong time is as bad as the wrong thing at any time.

Two Days to Make a Town

The largest single building ever moved bodily was a block of dwelling-houses known as Normandy Apartments in America. The building weighed 5,000 tons, yet it was decided to shift it as it stood, in order to make room for an elevated railway. It was done, however, without any mishaps, though the move took ten weeks' hard labour to accomplish.

In 1890 the inhabitants of Tipperary had a dispute with their ground landlord, and gave notice to quit in a body. At a spot some miles distant they were provided by the Land League with a brand-new Tipperary. Unlike the inhabitants of Pisgie they decided to leave the houses standing, though everything else portable was taken. It was lucky they did so, for New Tipperary proved a hopeless failure, and after a few months the inhabitants had another huge flitting back to their old homes.

Milking by Electricity.

We have had milking machines for some while; now comes the American electric machine which jealously watches the milk from cow to pail, from pail to dairy, from dairy to sterilizer, from sterilizer to separator, from separator to churn, from churn to refrigerator, usually packed up as germless butter.

You press a button. Four cows are electrically milked simultaneously, and all this happens. And not a germ, not a molecule of contamination. This is an era of hard choices for the man who loves health and beauty equally. The farmyard of the future is not an inspiring speculation, but the most aesthetic person cannot preserve a blind eye to the sediment in his glass of milk.

ULSTER'S DEFIANCE.

The political air in Great Britain is thick and troubled. This new year of 1912 will see the advance of radicalism continued. With the insurance bill passed nothing seems too hard for the triumphant coalition of Liberals, Labor members, and Irishmen. They are now pushing forward to the disestablishment of the church of England and Wales. Before long they will try to put through the home rule measure for which the Irish contingent have so patiently waited.

But before home rule becomes a fact there promises to be the biggest struggle that has ever been witnessed in Great Britain since the days of King William of Orange. Even now, months before the bill is introduced into the house of commons, the men of the North of Ireland stoutly declare that before they will submit to self-government for Ireland they will defend themselves as their fathers did of old in Derry. They promise to set up a provisional government of their own and defy the British government to do its worst. The determination of character always shown in the past by Ulstermen forbids the English public from receiving this threat as a piece of political bluff. Nowhere in the world are religious lines more tightly drawn than in Ireland, and armed rebellion on the part of the men of the north would be followed by one of the bloodiest chapters in English history.

But what can the British government do? Can it revoke its long given promise? Can it so far forget its dignity as to receive the dictation of the Ulster insurgents? If the Protestants of the north of Ireland proceed to extreme lengths and fortify the town of Derry, patch up the old walls, and take down the weapons of old, there will come to pass one of the strangest reversions of history in our annals.

The British government will surely exhaust all methods of settlement before they bring about even the possibility of such a dire event. But it is very hard to see how a solution of this dark problem is at all possible.

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway System announces that Mr. A. E. McMaster, recently Grand Trunk Pacific agent at Prince Rupert, has been appointed General Agent in charge of Passenger and Freight Traffic of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, the Grand Trunk Pacific Coast Steamship Co., Ltd., and the Grand Trunk Railway System in Western British Columbia, North of Rivers Inlet, and including Queen Charlotte Islands. The appointment will be effective January 1st, 1912, and his office will be at Prince Rupert, B.C.

How Wrinkles Are Caused—And Removed

(From The Family Physician)

It is well known that the human skin is constantly undergoing a tearing down and building up process. With advancing years or waning vitality this tissue-change lags; the lifeless, soiled surface skin stays on so long that its owner gets a poor complexion."

Common sense tells us this dead skin cannot be enlivened or beautified by any cosmetic, lotion or powder. The rational thing to do is to remove the offensive skin—remove the bad complexion. It has been found that ordinary mercolized wax completely absorbs the devitalized skin, in minute particles, so gently, gradually, as to cause no inconvenience. Mercolized wax, which any druggist can supply, is put on at night like cold cream, only not rubbed in, and washed off in the morning. If you would have a brilliantly beautiful complexion, just use this simple treatment.

KING EDWARD VACUM CLEANER

You cannot clean carpets, rugs and furniture by beating. If you think you have, just try a KING EDWARD VACUUM CLEANER and you will find the article full of dust, which breeds disease.

The KING EDWARD HAND MACHINE has no equal as compared with other hand machines. It is lighter to operate and its suction is much stronger. Its suction is stronger than many of the power machines, and the dusting is done away with. On account of the short stroke one person can operate it on carpets, and rugs equally as well as two, and it is about half the weight of other hand machines to carry up and down stairs or from one room to another. It is sold for less money than any of the hand machines. All machines are guaranteed.

The following is the track-laying situation on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway West of Winnipeg, period ending December 24, 1911:—Main Line, end of track 1071.2 miles West of Winnipeg; Alberta Coal Branch, end of track 25.6 miles South of Balcarres; Tofield-Calgary Branch, end of track 105.3 miles south of Tofield; Young-Prince Albert Branch, end of track 67.3 miles north of Young; Moose Jaw Branch, end of track 1.1 miles from Regina; Mountain Division, Steel laid to mouth of tunnel at Mile 104 East of Prince Rupert. In addition to the above the branch from Fort William to Graham, Ont., a distance of 200.6 miles is completed and in operation, connecting at Graham with the Main Line of the National Transcontinental to Winnipeg.

Within a very short time Prince Rupert, the Pacific Coast terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, will not have any occasion to import its supply of cement from England, Germany, China or even Victoria. During the past summer there was located near Shames a large deposit of limestone, that is considered perfect for the manufacture of cement. Accordingly the locators staked the property, awaiting an examination by an experienced mining engineer.

A few days ago Mr. J. W. Morden, an employee of the English Canoe Co., had his hand so badly lacerated with a circular saw, that Dr. Morgan had to amputate one of the fingers.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

ANY person who is the sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Enter by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

CLEVER INVALIDS

Tom Hood — One of the Greatest Humorous Writers Wrote Most of His Best Verses While in Torture.

By the death of W. Clark Russell we lose one of the finest writers of sea-stories that this century ever possessed. His romances throb with such vitality that it is hard to realise that for many year their author had been virtually a cripple. Yet such was the case, and his latest works were dictated to his son while he himself was stretched on a couch of pain.

What wondrous results can be effected by strength of will the life of Herbert Spencer pre-eminently shows. Of delicate constitution, he set himself to accomplish a task the magnitude whereof would have appalled the most robust, and wrestling manfully with the demon of ill-health, which sometimes for months together totally incapacitated him from work, never wavered in his stern resolve until, in 1896, he brought his stupendous "System of Synthetic Philosophy" to a triumphant conclusion.

His fellow-worker in the field of evolution, Charles Darwin, for over forty years knew not the joy of a day without pain. Dyspepsia, allied maybe to gout, held him in thraldom, so that his life was one long and continuous struggle against illness. Yet he bore his unenviable lot with cheery patience, and, though his poor health at times compelled him to cease from his arduous studies and researches, the work that he left accomplished is proof sufficient that no physical ills could subdue the indomitable energy of his mind.

In pain and torture, too, lay Tom Hood when he penned some of his most humorous verses. Even in boyhood his health was delicate, and with increasing years his weakness became more alarmingly apparent. Yet he gallantly struggled on until, in the winter of 1844, he finally broke down and took to his bed. Even there his fertile brain refused to rest, and not till death took him in the following spring did the world cease to enjoy the dying poet's witty words.

Over Keats, the while he was composing those poetic gems that have given him place among the immortals, was posed the hand of death. A victim to consumption and consequent haemorrhage from the lungs, he resolved, "as a soldier marches against a battery," to try the effect of a winter in Italy. Thither he went, and lingered on in Rome, where, on February 23rd, 1821, his brief life of twenty-six years came to a peaceful end.

NATURES WARDROBE

Dame Nature Allows Her Children a Complete Change of Clothes At Least Once a Year

Dame Nature allows her children a complete change of clothes at least once a year. In some instances she is more liberal. This change of raiment does not always meet with man's approval, and, because of the petty annoyances it may cause, the fact that the whole matter is not without points of interest is generally overlooked.

During the autumn the canary has a most irritating way of casting its feathers, and causing what the housemaid calls a "litter" all over the room for their tiny yellow feathers get blown about, and they are extremely difficult to pick up. The sweeping brush is no good at all for the purpose; every feather must be taken up separately, and really, considering that they are from one little bird, their number is extraordinary. "Drat that canary!" remarks the lady of the broom and duster.

The poultry yard is dreadful. Feathers lie everywhere, giving the whole place a desolate, uncared-for look, which is quite in keeping with the miserable appearance of its inmates.

But it is not only the feathered family which cause trouble by leaving their discarded clothes tossing about. Never drive behind a white horse in the spring unless you have a mind above being disturbed by horse hairs. In the pre-taxi days the point was worth remembering, for a white horse between the shafts of the hansom at certain times could make the "fare's" black coat unsightly. A horse sheds his coat — but not his tail or mane — in the spring, and grows a short, glossy, summer coat, which is the delight of the groom. As the winter approaches the animal's appearance undergoes a change. His coat grows long, and is extremely dense, so that if he is out in the fields he can stand severe weather.

It is worth while examining the coat of the horse cat in the summer and then in the winter. The animal's appearance may have undergone no change, yet the increase of hair is there all the same. The long-haired cat cannot make her toilet so unobtrusively, and the owner must be very blind who does not know when puss is "moulting" and when she is "in coat."

BIG REMOVALS

In These Days of Progress Many Large Buildings are Moved Bodily to Other Cities for Different Reasons.

A remarkable moving feat was successfully carried through just over a year ago at Bocholt, a little town in Belgium. It was found necessary to enlarge the church, and to do this it meant moving the church tower. New foundations were prepared about 30 ft. away, and along the machinery constructed for its transport the tower, which dates from the fourteenth century, was slowly moved. It wasn't a "moonlight flit" either, for it took the best part of a week to move it the necessary 30 ft. Not only had the engineers to face the possibility of the tower toppling in the move, but they had the task of lifting 2,700 tons.

Moving a Glasgow Church

Whole towns have been moved bodily. Some years ago the town of Platte, in South Dakota, was declared to be insanitary. It was decided to move to a more convenient spot, some miles away. The first building moved was the Platte Hotel. One great obstacle that had to be overcome was a broad creek. This was successfully managed, however, with the help of 120 horses. The town church followed, and then the rest of the buildings, shops, houses, everything, lock, stock, and barrel.

This is certainly one of the most extraordinary moves that have ever taken place. Shifting houses in America is not thought half so much of as in England, where it is rarely done.

In 1899, however, Glasgow people witnessed the removal of St. Bride's Episcopal Church from its old site in the Beaconsfield Road to a new one about half a mile away. It was found to be considerably cheaper to shift the church as it stood than to pull it to pieces and reerect it. The church was moved on a Saturday, and on the Sunday services were held in it as though nothing out of the ordinary had happened.

BIG FISH HATCHES

The World's Largest Salmon Nursery Is In Canada. — Fish-Hatching Is An Extraordinary Business.

From the Fisheries Department of the Canadian Government, whose duty it is to replenish the Canadian rivers with the commercial varieties of fish, come some interesting facts concerning fish-hatching. The work is carried out by a series of hatcheries established throughout the country at points both on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and on the Great Lakes.

The largest of these — indeed, it is said to be the largest of its kind in the world — is the hatchery at Harrison Lake, drained by the Fraser River in British Columbia, which deals exclusively with the hatching of salmon. There are always 10,000,000 fish in the building — 7,000,000 sockeys salmon eggs and fry (the fish principally used for canning purposes), and 3,000,000 spring salmon.

The building contains 160 hatching troughs, each averaging 90,000 fish. During September and October the eggs of the female are expressed into a pan and the fertilizing "milt" of the male thoroughly mixed with them. The eggs are then carried to the hatchery and placed in troughs set in flowing water.

When ready to be liberated the fish are placed in a specially-constructed semi-submerged boat. This is towed to a chosen spot, and when in proper position is allowed to sink below the water.

OPIUM CONFERENCE

Resolutions Presented by British Delegates Adopted by International Conference.

The Hague. — The International Opium Conference adopted two resolutions presented by the British delegates. The first resolution declares that it is desirable that the governments decide whether it is possible to punish those having morphine illegally in their possession. The second resolution urges the governments to restrict the traffic and use of such substances to medical and other legitimate purposes.

The Dutch delegation referred to a future conference a proposal that the governments interested in the production and consumption of raw opium should arrive at an agreement to limit the trade therein, in view of international measures already taken.

HANGED IN THE THEATRE
Jail Yard to Theatre of Institution.

Scene of Execution Shifted From the Jackson. — The scene of a legal hanging was hastily changed from the local jail yard to the town opera house here lately to prevent possible race trouble.

Will Turner, a negro preacher, was to pay the death penalty for killing James Singley, a white man, last August. A large crowd gathered in the jail yard, and, fearing serious trouble, the authorities quickly moved Turner to the theatre and he was hanged on the stage there but few witnessed.

A WOMAN BUILDS HER OWN HOME

Eight Years Ago Mrs. Klingebiel Started Out to Build a House on $10 Per Week's Wages — Which is Now Worth $5000.

(By special cable)

Des Moines.—Eight years ago Mrs. Nettie Klingebiel of Des Moines started out with a lot of courage and one bill.

She owns her own home today and a tract of land valued at $5,000.

Mrs. Klingebiel is a widow and eight years ago was working in an office at $10 per week.

One day when the future looked unusually dull she made a resolve. She took five dollars from her week's salary to a real estate man, bought a fifty-foot lot, and made weekly payments of $5 until the lot was paid for. She bought $40 worth of lumber in the same way.

To avoid paying rent, she then had a little shed built and lived in it until the lot was paid for. Then she borrowed $200 and put up a two-room cottage. Soon after there was a boom in another suburban section. She traded her property for a better lot and borrowed $400 to build a four-room cottage.

After office hours Mrs. Klingebiel slapped paint on her house, or cemented the cellar floor and the sun's early rays found her setting out trees and vines.

While she was paying for her home SHE NEVER EARNED OVER $10 A WEEK.

Again there come a boom in another suburban district. Mrs. Klingebiel looked at her neat little home, and plunged again. This trade brought her a beautiful property valued at $5,000. She built another cosy little home and vows she will never leave it.

Peking. — Thirteen vessels of the Imperial Chinese fleet surrendered to the revolutionists at Shanghai. Admiral Sah gave up because of lack of coal and munitions. He is now in hiding.

LLOYD GEORGE'S MESSAGE

London. — The Chancellor of the Exchequer, David Lloyd George, has addressed a message to the National Union of Woman's Suffrage Societies, in which he says:

"The Premier's pronouncement on the attitude which the Government is adopting towards the question seems to me to make the carrying of a man's suffrage amendment, on broad democratic lines, to next year's franchise bill a certainty. I am willing to do all in my power to help those laboring to reach a successful issue in the coming session next year, which provides a supreme opportunity, and nothing but unwise handling that can compass failure."

"Your position must bring you a large salary?" said the children interviewer.

"Oh, yes," replied the prima donna complacently, "And, besides, think of the enormous sums I save by getting to hear myself sing for nothing."—Washington Star.

Another Rural Mail Route.

Word was received from Mr. Burnham, M.P., to the effect that another rural route would be established, this time to Selwyn and through North Smith. This cannot but be satisfactory to those who will be served by the daily postman.

Seeking Damages.

A writ has been issued through E. L. Goodwill by W. Everett Taylor against the Grand Trunk Railway company for unstated damages. Taylor is the young man, who suffered the loss of an arm while in the employ of the company as brakesman last summer, and who since then has been incapacitated for work. The accident occurred near Blackwater.

Roads Badly Drifted.

The country roads are so badly drifted, that in some places they are quite impassable. Yesterday The Times was called up by several of its subscribers on the Rural Routes, who stated that The Times had not reached them, no doubt on account of the snow drifts. Gangs of shovellers are at work, so that in a few days traffic will be resumed.

Getting Up a Petition.

It is said that a certain light weight government office holder, who is likely to lose his job, is getting up a petition setting forth that he was not an "offensive" political partisan. This is a good deal like the man who was charged with stealing a pig. There were several witnesses who swore they saw him get away with the porker, but the defendant had twenty witnesses ready to swear they didn't see him commit the theft.

Died at St. Joseph's.

There passed away yesterday morning at St. Joseph's Hospital, Miss Hannah Hayes, daughter of the late James Hayes, "Skibbereen Farm," Otonabee, after only a week's sickness. Deceased lived for many years in Denver, Col., but during the last few years, since the death of her father, has resided with her brother, Mr. James Hayes, on "Skibbereen Farm". Miss Hayes was well known in Peterborough, and was highly esteemed by all who knew her, and the sad news of her death will occasion deep regret among her many friends. She leaves to mourn her death three brothers and two sisters. The sisters are: Mrs. Daniel Kelly, Lyndoch, and Miss Nellie Hayes at home. The brothers are: Messrs. James and Daniel Hayes, of Otonabee, and Cornelius, of Sudbury. Funeral announcement in to-morrow's Times.

FINAL VOWS TAKEN

Interesting Event at Mount St. Joseph Yesterday.

An interesting event to our Roman Catholic friends took place yesterday at Mount St. Joseph, when five young ladies made their final vows as nuns. The proceedings began with mass by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, the following priests being present: Ven. Archdeacon Casey, of Lindsay; Fr. Dewdell, of Eganville, Fr. Guilty of Douglas, Fr. Latang of Pembroke, Fr. Galvin of Galway, Fr. Kelly of Norwood, Fr. McFadden of Wooler, Fathers McColl, F. O'Brien and McCarthy of St. Peter's Cathedral; Fr. O'Brien and Fr. McCauley of the Sacred Heart Church. The Rev. Fr. ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

Apply Zam-Buk to all wounds and sores and you will be surprised how quickly it stops the smarting and brings ease. It covers the wound with a layer of protective balm, kills all poison germs already in the wound, and prevents others entering. Its rich healing herbal essences then build up from the bottom, fresh tissue; and in a wonderfully short time the wound is healed!

Zam-Buk's popularity is based on merit. Imitations never work cures. Be sure and get the real thing. "Zam-Buk" is printed on every packet of the genuine. Refuse all others, 50c all druggists and stores or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

ZAM-BUK

GREAT CANVASSERS

Napoleon, and George Washington and Many More Great Men Were Successful Book Agents In Their Youth.

Books. — Well-known firm of London publishers require the services of country gentlemen to act as agents. Liberal commission. Districts apportioned. Hunting and shooting men preferred. Members of good families, younger sons who have been at the Varsities or public schools, will find this a first-class opening. Apply, etc.

When the above appeared in the advertisement columns of the English papers recently, no doubt many people who read it would ask themselves what things were coming to.

Country gentlemen taking to book-canvassing!

Certainly it reads revolutionary, even in these days of trading "nobility and gentry."

But greater men than country squires have, before now, been engaged in canvassing books.

Napoleon Bonaparte, Emperor of the French, the world's greatest military genius, was once a book-canvasser.

The future conqueror, while yet a lieutenant, and with nothing to live on but his scanty pay, undertook to "push" for Messrs Boilanger and Co., the Paris publishers, a work called "The History of the (French) Revolution." And apparently he liked the work — with its emoluments — for after a short trial he applied to be given the sole agency for the Department of La Vendée. He had, however, to be content with a restricted district in suburban Paris. With what zeal he "worked" this may be seen to-day at the Louvre, where there is exhibited his canvasser's outfit, together with the long list of subscribers' names which his industry secured.

Almost at the same time, in a different part of the world, another future ruler was partly earning his bread as a book agent. This was none other than George Washington, "Father" of the United States. The particular book that Washington canvassed here the somewhat lengthy title of "The London of Stoke-on-Trent Square, American Savage; How He May be Tamed by the Weapons of Civilization."

To "get off" such a mouthful as this would surely require more than average ability and persuasiveness, and if, as he recorded, Washington's sales were eminently satisfactory, small wonder that in later life he accomplished so many things.

Propriety.

They waltzed and waltzed to a wild, sweet strain—
The music throbbed, like a beating heart—
They waltzed and waltzed, and they waltzed again.
It seemed, in fact, that they couldn't part.

He held her close with his hand and arm.
Near to her cheek his own cheek burned.
Against his bosom her soft young form
Closely pressed as they twirled and turned.

Later, when taking her to her coach,
He caught her hand on the stairway dim.
"How dare you?" she asked, with stern reproach.
And "What do you mean, sir?" she asked of him.

—Puck.

How He Escaped.

One of the boys had broken one of the school rules, and no one would own up.

The teacher announced that he would thrash the whole class if some one did not tell him who had committed the offence.

All were silent, and he began with the first boy and thrashed every one in the class until finally he reached the last one. Then he said, "Now, if you will tell me who did this I won't thrash you."

"All right, sir. I did it," was the reply.—Ideas.

CHEAP CLOTHING

Some of the Cheap Clothing Swindles That Are Taking Place Every Day Throughout the Country.

During the winter months the "cheap clothing" swindler comes to the fore. This is the method of manufacture of the "new and up-to-date" clothing. The "clothes for nothing" firm employs agents all over the country who make a point of buying up all old clothing as cheaply as possible. Nothing is despised. The agent is prepared to take old suits, whether they are threadbare or not; coats that would look shabby on a beggar, trousers patched and mended till hardly any part of the original pair remains, and, in fact, anything that once may have been clothing of some kind are fish for his net.

"Tearing Down" Factories.

At his "factory" the clothes are "torn down" by women. That is to say, they are picked to shreds. A certain amount of discrimination is shown, the sounder parts of the secondhand material being placed aside and carefully sorted. The dilapidated parts of these old clothes are more roughly treated. All colours, all patterns, they are all shredded. When this has been done they are placed in a strong dye for some hours, after which the material is dried and woven into new cloth. Once more it is dyed and then turned into ready-made suits by the aid of sweated labour. These suits are sold for from $6 or $7. The dyes used are the cheapest obtainable, and the customer sees the result when his clothes soon begin to acquire a rusty brown or a green tint.

Given Warning.

Mrs. Wilson's husband was often obliged to make long journeys on business, and frequently did not reach home till after midnight. His wife had usually slept peacefully at these times, but a number of burglaries in the neighbourhood during one of Mr. Wilson's trips had disturbed her calm. One night Mr. Wilson was stealing carefully up the stairs, so that his wife should not be awakened, when he heard her voice, high and strained.

"I don't know whether you are my husband or a burglar," she called, "but I am going to be on the safe side and shoot. So if you are Henry you'd better get out of the way!"

APSLEY.

Not having seen any Apsley news for some time will try and give you a few items from the north. For one thing we are enjoying fine winter weather and good sleighing. The camps of the Peterborough Lumber Co. are all busy drawing logs to the lakes and it is hoped they will be able to get all out, as it is an unusually large cut this year.

The Methodist Church members held their annual tea and concert Christmas night with their usual success. Everything passed off without a hitch. Proceeds amounted to over $42.00, and Rev. C. Lord did not forget the children. He gave them a grand treat Thursday, Dec. 28th. Tea and entertainment in the Parish room together with a distribution of many handsome and valuable presents from a well-laden Christmas tree. All the children got a present.

Two of our young men concluded to enter the estate of matrimony. Mr. D. Lean and Miss Gerty Whitmore were married in the Methodist Church Christmas day at 2 p.m. by Rev. J. A. Prosser. Mr. Alfred Airriess and Miss Sarah Tanner on Wednesday, Dec. 27th, at the Anglican Church, Apsley, at 2 p.m. Rev. C. Lord officiated.

Miss Annie and Miss Kate Tucker who have been home for the holidays, returned to the city Saturday.

Miss Annie McIlvena, home for the holidays, returned to Toronto, and her sister Miss Maggie, has gone with her.

Most of the boys have gone back to the camps and it's rather dull. But during the Christmas holidays they all had a good time. Teas, concerts, and dance parties. Certainly there was a lively time in the old town for a week or ten days.

J. G. Hardill of Kinnear & Co., was in town Wednesday, 3rd. John don't give the Apsley merchants time to think until he gets a nice fat order from each of them. Mr. Sherwood salesman for the Hopwood Co., was with him, who also got orders for his firm and is working up a good trade here — not forgetting their jovial coachman Ernie, who always gets in on time.

Mr. Gordon and Mr. Davis, who are finishing the work on the Long Lake dam were in the village Saturday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Elmhurst and daughter Hazel of Carding, Man. are visiting friends here. They moved from Anstruther about 20 years ago. The prairie country agrees with them, as all look well and hearty.

The municipal fight was a hot one, as every effort was put forth to defeat Mrs. Tucker, and in fact there was a feint that a Council would be elected composed of Conservatives. But alas, for their plans. William got there again with a larger majority than ever. There was no fault to be found with the old council, nor could one of the new candidates point out any grounds for kicking. In fact only one stayed after the nomination to air his views. It's a matter of regret that our old friend Geo. Matthews was not re-elected, but there was some misunderstanding.

Chandos does not know for sure yet whether they have a legally elected council or not, as they held their election Friday, Dec. 29th.

Anvil Jim, president of the Wisdom Club, has been very busy lately, and every one was busy with the provincial and municipal elections. There has been no meeting of the Club, but the President has called a special meeting for Saturday, January 13th, at 7 p.m., sharp.

Mr. B. F. Coones, proprietor of the Apsley House, was down to the city last week and reports having a good time, especially the time the dentist was prying out a bad tooth.

Our teacher Miss Waterman has returned from her holiday trip and has resumed her duties at the Apsley business college.

Mrs. D. Brown has gone on a visit to the city.

SLEEP DESTROYERS.
Tea and Coffee.

She suffered from nervousness by day and sleeplessness by night.

"Up to three years ago," writes a young woman, "I was in the habit of drinking coffee freely and did not realize that it was injuring my health," (tea contains caffeine — the same drug found in coffee) "till I was suddenly made the victim of nervous headaches so violent that I was compelled to give up household activities and stay in bed much of the time. Then insomnia came upon me and the wretchedness of sleepless nights was added to the agony of painful days.

"This lasted till a year ago, when I was persuaded by a friend to give up coffee entirely and use Postum. The result was, in less than a week I began to feel the change for the better, my nerves grew stronger and I began to sleep nights. Day by day the improvement continued and in a short time I was restored to health. My headaches left me, the nervousness passed away entirely, and I enjoy good, sound sleep at night.

"This is what I owe to Postum, and I feel it but right to tell you of it." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

SHIP SINKS IN THE BLACK SEA, 172 WERE DROWNED

S.S. Russ Foundered During a Gale, and All on Board Perish—Russian Consul-General Was Among the Victims.

Bucharest, Romania, Jan. 11.—The Russian steamer Russ has foundered during a gale in the Black Sea with the whole of her passengers and crew totalling 172 persons.

The Russ which was under the command of Captain Pihomoff, and belongs to the Russian Steam Navigation Company of the Black Sea and the Danube, was steaming from Galatz to Odessa.

Among her passengers were Carl Anuseff, who was recently appointed Russian Consul-General at Galatz, and his family.

IRISH FISCAL AUTONOMY WOULD ENDANGER BRITAIN

Lord Macdonell, Who Is Close to Asquith Government, Says It Would Be a Serious Risk to British Fiscal Policy—His Statement Important.

London, Jan. 11.—Lord Macdonell, ex-under secretary for Ireland, who, it is stated, is likely to become a member of the Government before long, made an important statement on the finances under Home Rule at a congress held at the school of Economics yesterday.

The statement is of unusual interest at the present time, for Lord Macdonell is in close touch with the Government, and it is fairly safe to say that he has been consulted in regard to the forthcoming Home Rule bill.

Lord Macdonell said that fiscal autonomy for Ireland can only be supported if it can be shown unquestionably that it involves no danger and no risk to Great Britain.

"For my own part," he said, "I cannot conceive how we can have fiscal autonomy in Ireland without a possibility of serious danger and serious risk to the fiscal policy of Great Britain."

AUSTRALIAN MACK WAS ARRESTED AGAIN

Man Held in N. Y. for Robbery of New Westminster Bank Freed a Short Time Only

IN THE TOILS ONCE AGAIN

New York, Jan. 11.—After being held in the tombs for three days, charged by telegraph with having been concerned in the robbery of the Bank of Montreal at New Westminster, B.C., of $475,000, John McNamara, known the police allege as "Australian Mack," was discharged from custody by Magistrate McAdoo to-day. He was immediately re-arrested on a Federal warrant issued by Commissioner Shields, at the request of the British Consul-General, charging him with being a fugitive from justice and was held for examination.

The Canadian authorities will demand his extradition. McNamara's counsel, Geo. Gordon Battle, said he would resort to habeas corpus in an effort to get his client released.

"THE BLUE BIRD"

Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto, Has Special Attraction.

Toronto, Jan. 11.—"The Blue Bird" Maurice Maeterlinck's celebrated Fairyland drama opened a two weeks' engagement at the Royal Alexandra Theatre to-night to a packed house, many persons distinguished in political, social and literary circles being present. Wit and beauty vied with each other in paying tribute to the masterpiece of the great Belgian poet and to the wonderful staging of the piece that characterizes that famous New Theatre production. "The Blue Bird" as presented here to-night, is in three parts and eleven gorgeous scenes. No essential of the poet's text is sacrificed, while on the other hand there are many delightful interpolations of music by an augmented orchestra and dances by bevies of young girls. The story opens in the woodcutter's cottage of Daddy Tyl, where the children Tyltyl and Mytyl are visited by the Fairy Berylune. Her wand transforms the cottage into a palace, the every day animals and objects into speaking, soulful beings, and thereupon the children start forth on their world-wide quest for the fabled blue bird that is the symbol of happiness. Among the scenes deserving of special mention are the Fairy's dazzling abode; the startling sudden change of a church yard with its gravestones into a

HOCKEY

In the first game of the Trent Valley League at Brock street rink last night, the team representing the T. A.S. of this city, defeated Campbellford by a score of 10—4.

The Campbellford team was late in arriving and the game did not commence until 9.15. A fair sized crowd was present including a number of Campbellford supporters.

E. Lansfield scored the first goal for the T.A.S. on a shot from centre ice and shortly after notched another. Halpin then notched one for the home team, and T. Lansfield notched the next one for the home seven. A few minutes later Campbellford scored their first goal. After a combined rush of the T.A.S. forwards, Halpin scored. Campbellford added another shortly after and the half ended 6—2 in favor o the T.A.S.

The second half started with a rush and after five minutes play McFee secured the rubber and carried it the length of the ice for a tally. McFee added another shortly after. Campbellford took a hand at this point and scored from left wing. McFee again scored a few minutes later. Then Halpin succeeded in getting one past the goal tender. Campbellford scored the last goal after some hard work, ending the game. Score 10—4 in favor of the T.A.S.

The teams lined up as follows:

T. A. S.		Campbellford
McFadden	Yost	Grant
Meagher	Point	Tait
E. Lansfield	Point	Townsend
McFee	Rover	Shannon
Halpin	Centre	Kerr
O'Dette	R Wing	Clemens
T. Lansfield	L. Wing	Meyer

Los Angeles Pastor Says Society Women Entice Men to Card Tables

CONDON AN EVANGELIST

Governor Wilson Wanted Bryan Knocked Into a Cocked Hat—Interesting Events Taking Place in Uncle Sam's Domain.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12. The spirit of unrest amongst the toiling classes seems to increase rather than diminish. The great strike of the sea serpents has been lost by the men, and this seems to have embittered them to a great extent. Great strikes are predicted in the spring, when the thousands of builders will begin to move.

A Strong Sermon.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 11.—"If I could learn the names of the society women of Los Angeles who indulge in gambling, I would read them from the pulpit," declared Rev. Arthur S. Phelps. In a lecture last night which was devoted to the evils of gambling, the minister charged that many drawing rooms were gambling dens and that society women were known to entice men to their homes in order to win their money.

Turns Evangelist.

Glen Condon, Tulsa, Okla., one of the best known sport writers of the southwest of the United States, announced through the press that he would become an evangelist. He intends to follow the style of "Billy" Sunday in his new work. "Red" Condon, as he is familiarly known was the first newspaper man to bring Carl Morris to the attention of the public as a possible heavyweight champion.

Miner Decapitated.

Tom Williams, an employee of the Union Mining Company, Telluride, Col., was decapitated at the mine on day when he was caught in the loop of the tramway cable, which was knocked from the brake wheel by a falling car.

Was After Bryan.

Governor Woodrow Wilson was anxious several years ago to retire William J. Bryan from the councils of the Democratic party, according to a letter given out in New York this morning by Adrian J. Joliene, and which was said to have been written him by Dr. Wilson on April 27, 1907. The letter is brief and says in part: "Would that we could do something at once dignified and effective to knock Mr. Bryan once and for all into a cocked hat!" The balance of the communication was purely personal and had no political flavor.

PUBLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions of its correspondents.

REPLY FROM MR. BURNHAM.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—In reply to a correspondent in the Examiner, who does not sign his name, I may say that he has touched upon the crux of the whole question, viz., people will not as experience has shown, pay remunerative prices to hotel keepers in local option localities. Therefore the travelling public is dissatisfied. If we are sincere in our professions let us not wreck the good we intend to do by failing to back it up. Mr. suggestion has, of course, no reference to the taking over of liquors. I will take stock in any company that will guarantee good hotel accommodation to Peterborough, in the event of local option. But let us remember that work half done is more often a serious injury than a benefit. As a humble believer in things as they ought to be and with an earnest desire to assist as I see it.

I remain yours,
J. H. Burnham.

P.S.—The Examiner boycotts me, or I should have written to it.

YOUNG MAN KILLED BY AXE IN QUARREL

WAS TRYING TO PREVENT ANOTHER FROM TRESPASSING ON FORBIDDEN PROPERTY.

Arrested To-day While Passing With a Load of Stovewood.

Quebec, Que., Jan. 11.—A young man named Joseph Cadran is dying from an axe blow given by another young man named Octave Godbout, at St. Neree, county of Bellechasse. Godbout was passing with a load of stovewood on a piece of land, the proprietor of which Mrs. (widow) J. B. Godbout had forbidden him to trespass. The proprietor has placed some men to keep young Godbout from trespassing. Cadran was one of these. A quarrel followed, and Cadran was struck on the head with an axe by Godbout, whose arrest is to take place to-day.

WILL SIR JAMES MOVE?

By J. H. Burnham, M.P.

This is the age of improvement in the conditions of life. Everywhere the absurdities of waste of material and energy are being corrected. Why not in the matter of taxation? We are prone to regard America as a bold continent the home of new ideas and prompt action. As a matter of fact we are far behind the old land in this respect. Lloyd George would be impossible here. He would be slain by the interests, or would join in with them. A new basis of taxation, or rather the adoption of a basis of taxation that has been forcing itself upon our attention year by year in the form of exemptions, etc., seems too big an undertaking for Sir James Whitney. We need an Adam Beck to ride into the arena. It is well known that Sir James grew pale at the thought of Mr. Beck's boldness in the hydro-electric scheme. But Mr. Beck forced the prime minister's hand, and we need some one to force his hand with respect to taxation. Our present system is admittedly bad. It is wasteful and unjust. The moneyed man escapes. The worker and the employer of workers bear the burden. All things are based on land. It is the one door to opportunity and enterprise. Let all values be summed up, in land values or in other words, in that part of land values given by the community only, and therefore the property of the community only, and the difficulty is solved. Will Sir James listen to the voice of reason in this respect, or shall it be necessary that another prophet shall arise, a new Beck, in whose "lexicon" is no such word as "fail"? The day is rapidly coming when the people will take hold of this as of other matters, and then we may expect to see the politicians and office seekers hurrying to do the will of the people. It becomes a laughable and by no means edifying sight. But why can it not be done before it reaches this stage? At any rate let it be discussed. Let us show signs of life in this as well as in other matters.

RABIES OUTBREAK

Brantford, Jan. 11—Brantford and the surrounding district are threatened by a rabies outbreak, according to Dr. Cutcliffe, local inspector here. A couple of mad dogs recently escaped and have not been caught. On the outskirts of the city several sheep and cattle are dead from rabies, and a little girl residing on the same farm is now receiving treatment at Toronto. Over twenty dogs already have been killed.

A Dangerous Disease

Owing to its tendency to spread to all parts of the system, Catarrh should be checked in its incipient stages.

Catarrh commences generally with a slight cold, and because slight, it is often neglected. But the seed that has been sown brings forth a dangerous harvest—perhaps it is the harvest of consumption, which is the harvest of death.

Better spend a few moments each day inhaling Catarrhozone, an aromatic, antiseptic remedy that is breathed in through the mouth, and, after permeating all the respiratory organs, is slowly exhaled through the nostrils.

The immediate effect of Catarrhozone is magical—so prompt and efficient. Relief is instantaneous, throat and nose cleared in a few moments by the penetrating vapor from the Inhaler. Ferrozone, taken in conjunction with Catarrhozone, purifies the blood, cleanses it of all poisons, and builds up the system so that Catarrh cannot exist.

You are sure to receive lasting benefit from Catarrhozone if bothered by Catarrh in any part of the system. It is highly recommended for Bronchitis, Asthma, and Lung Trouble, and used for Coughs and Colds in the head it has no equal.

Remember that Catarrhozone is both a local and constitutional treatment, and is warranted under all circumstances to give satisfaction. Money refunded if it fails.

Two months' treatment, consisting of a beautiful polished hard rubber Inhaler and large bottle of liquid for recharging, costs but $1; trial size, 25c. Sold by all druggists and The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

NO FOREIGN PROTEST WILL CHANGE ATTITUDE OF U. S.

GOVERNMENT DETERMINED TO LET U.S. SHIPPING USE THE PANAMA CANAL WITH OUT CHARGE.

But Tax All Foreigners Direct Violation of National Word of Honor—Says Bonuses Give Foreigners An Advantage.

Washington, Jan. 11.—Although the foreign powers condemned the view of President Taft and Senator Stimson that American shipping using the Panama Canal should be relieved of tolls, no protest has reached the State Department from the European Government in this respect. The legislation necessary to fix the tolls on canal traffic and to affirm the right of the waterway by American shipping is to be vigorously pressed in view of the urgent declaration by Col Goethals that immediate action on the subject is demanded by the merchant marine of the world.

The view taken by the United States Administration is that through the subsidies paid by foreign Governments to their own shipping American shipping would be placed at an actual disadvantage if not relieved entirely of these charges.

No foreign protest is likely to change the position of the Government in this respect.

WIFE DID NOT SPEAK TO HUSBAND FOR 25 YEARS

And When She Did He Died—Wanted His Ashes Thrown to the Winds.

Maysville, Ky., Jan. 11.—Though he left much property to his wife, Louis Roser, who died last Sunday, had not spoken to her until that day for twenty-five years. It developed that on Sunday morning Mrs. Roser broke the long silence when she asked her husband: "Will you have a cup of coffee?"

"I believe I will," was his reply.

In a few moments he was stricken with heart disease and died. His will directs that his body be cremated and the ashes cast to the winds from the Cincinnati Suspension Bridge.

PARIS CLEANS UP ON WHITE SLAVE HORROR

Nineteen Prisoners Convicted Including Mothers Who Sold Children

PROMINENT MEN FLEEING

Paris, Jan. 11.—All of the nineteen prisoners accused of being implicated in the notorious white slave scandal which has engrossed Paris for weeks, were found guilty to-day after a secret trial which lasted a fortnight.

Victor Flachon, former editor of "The Lantern," and a power in politics, was sentenced to a year in prison. His mistress who led in the notorious orgies at Flachon's chateau and villas, was ordered imprisoned for ten months, while Gabrielle Guilmin, who conducted the "mitchevo agency" at which young girls were sold on the commission plan, was given two years.

Five of the prisoners were banished from France, and the mothers, who had confessed to selling their children were given sentences ranging from six months to six years.

During the inquisition before the prefect police, persons living in the neighborhood of the "mitchevo agency" told how magistrates, diplomats bankers and manufacturers visited the resort and departed in luxurious limousines with young girls they had purchased.

All the victims of the traffic were in their early 'teens. One mother sold her daughter who was only 11 years of age.

Many prominent men have fled from France to avoid prosecution. It is believed that the finding of the court will practically amount to banishment for them, as they will not dare return and face the charges which have been placed against them.

BRITISH BRIGADE TOLD TO BE IN READINESS

TROOPS IN INDIA MAY BE ORDERED THERE AT ANY MOMENT.

Traders Are Attacked—Soldiers to be Sent by Sea and Disembarked at Bushir.

Calcutta, British India, Jan. 11.—Orders have been issued to-day to the Brigade of Infantry stationed at Ahmadnagar to hold itself in readiness to proceed immediately to Persia.

Reports as to the dangers incurred by merchants travelling over the trade routes in the southern Provinces of Persia have led to this step being taken.

The brigade, which is a strong one, of three battalions, belongs to the Sixth or Poona division of the Southern Army of India, and is under the command of Col. E. T. Gastrell, who holds the temporary rank of Brigadier General. The troops composing the Brigade consist of one British battalion, the First Royal Dublin Fusiliers, and two Indian battalions, the 103rd Mahretta Light Infantry and the 123rd Rifles.

The constant attacks on traders in Persia led to the despatch of squadrons of two regiments of Indian cavalry in December, and it was while these troopers were escorting the British Consul at Shiraz, W. A. Smart, to his post, that they were attacked by tribesmen and lost six killed and eleven wounded. Immediately afterwards a strong detachment of Indian carnatic Infantry was sent to Bushir, which will be the port where the present expedition will disembark after travelling by sea from Kurrache.

40 BELOW AT WINNIPEG

At Many Remote Points the Temperature is Down to Fifty Below Zero.

Winnipeg, Jan. 11.—Western Canada is in the grip of the worst cold snap in years. It was 42 below in Winnipeg to-day and 50 at many remote points in the West. All trains are from ten to 24 hours late.

The severe cold has continued for three weeks past.

65 BELOW AT PEACE RIVER.

SUFFRAGETTE SENTENCED

London, Jan. 11.—Emily Davison, a suffragette, was sentenced in the Old Bailey Police Court yesterday to six months imprisonment for dropping matches and pieces of paper saturated with kerosene oil into letter boxes.

Miss Davison has been prominent in the ranks of militant suffragettes, and was once arrested for an attack on Mr. Lloyd George, and at another time was fined for breaking windows in the House of Lords.

Meats and Shoes.

Shoes are one of the expenses of a toilet that may be reduced by care alone. A worn-out shoe cannot be renovated; no amount of skill will make it pass as new. The only possible way to save in shoe leather is to care properly for the shoes while wearing them. When they are taken off they should be wiped at once, and if wet filled with paper and put in a dry place (nor near the first) for some hours. We do not advise putting shoes into a bag, for the sake of meanness. If boot-trees are not convenient the boots or shoes should be stood where the air can get to them, as this will tend to harden the soles.

They will be in perfect state until time gooseberries will come again — in other words will keep a year.

An "Ear Telephone."

Differing from the various kinds of instruments which are used to aid persons of defective hearing, a new long distance hearing apparatus has recently been invented to assist the hearing of normal persons in much the same way that a telescope does the eye; that is, it enables one to distinguish sounds through a greater distance, besides amplifying those which would ordinarily be detected by the unaided ears. For this reason it has been facetiously called the "ear telescope."

Mr. Wm. (Daddy) Taylor has taken up residence at 334 Water street.

USEFUL IGNORANCE

Brayson: "Come out with me for a ride in my motor-car."

Wise: "How long have you had it?"

"Just got it."

"Had any experience with cars?"

"No."

"Going to run it yourself?"

"I am."

"Can you mend a punctured tyre?"

"No."

"Wouldn't know the first thing to do?"

"Not the first thing."

"Have you studied, read, or been given any advice?"

"No; I tell you I don't know anything about them."

"How far do you want to go?"

"Just as far as the thing will go."

"All right. I'll come with you."

"What! Why, I didn't dream you'd accept my invitation."

"Why not?"

"I didn't think you'd care to go out in a motor-car with a man who doesn't know anything about it."

"Nonsense! You're just the man."

"How's that?"

"Simply because, my friend, if we break down, we'll drop the machine and get home by train. But if you thought you knew anything about it, you'd spend the rest of the day trying to put it right, while I'd have to stay and suffer with you as a matter of common courtesy."

Miss Elder: "You fancy yourself very clever, I dare say; but I could give you a wrinkle or two."

Miss Younger: "No doubt you could—and never miss them."

DOCTORS CONDEMNS OILY LINIMENTS

The Public Are Warned to be Careful of These Strong-Smelling Oily Liniments Containing Harmful Acids, Ammonia, Etc.

Many people have clung to the old-fashioned idea that a thick, greasy liniment is the best kind. Doctors say not—and they know.

Recently a number of these white, oily liniments were analyzed, and they were found to contain an enormously high percentage of harmful acids, and such irritating chemicals as ammonia, etc. For the moment they may cause a warm sensation when first applied, but their continued use never cures rheumatism, and only deteriorates the skin, sets up inflammation and causes endless trouble.

When a doctor warns you to quit using a white, oily liniment—do so. He knows that a thick liniment can't penetrate, can't sink through the pores and reach the seat of the pain.

When asked his opinion a few days ago, Dr. Roberts stated that he considered a strong, penetrating, pain-subduing liniment, such as "Nerviline," to be superior to any of the white ammonia liniments. In his twenty-five years of practice he had witnessed cases of rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago that simply would not respond to ordinary treatment—but Nerviline cured them. The same physician also spoke of the great advantages of keeping a preparation like Nerviline in the house always, because of cramps, diarrhoea, stomach disorders, earache, toothache, headache and such minor ailments. Nerviline is a first-class cure. There is scarcely an ache or a pain, internal or external, that Nerviline won't cure. In thousands of homes no other pain-relieving medicine is used. Fifty years' continued success and the endorsement of the profession are proof that Nerviline is the liniment for the home.

Any good druggist or dealer can supply large size bottle 50c, or sample size 25c.

Getting Up a Petition.

It is said that a certain light weight government office holder, who is likely to lose his job, is getting up a petition setting forth that he was not an "offensive" political partizan. This is a good deal like the man who was charged with stealing a pig. There were several witnesses who swore they saw him get away with the porker, but the defendant had twenty witnesses ready to swear they didn't see him commit the theft.

RUSSIA'S GRAB IS NO CONCERN OF BRITAIN'S

London, Jan. 10.—The British press takes the view that Russia's action in regard to Mongolia is practically no concern of Britain's. Much is made of the Balfour Government's blunder in allowing Thibet to slip out of British control after Younghusband's expedition into that country.

The partition of Manchuria between Russia and Japan is predicted.

The Radical papers attack Sir Edward Grey for his pro-Russian policy, which they say, will result in the partition of Persia by Russia and England.

Miss Jean Shaw, daughter of Dr. J. M. Shaw, formerly of Keene, now of Regina, is the guest of Miss Huldah Dobbin, George street.

Roads Badly Drifted.

The country roads are so badly drifted, that in some places they are quite impassable. Yesterday The Times was called up by several of its subscribers on the Rural Routes, who stated that The Times had not reached them, no doubt on account of the snow drifts. Gangs of shovellers are at work, so that in a few days traffic will be resumed.

The trains are all late during the past day or two, on account of the storm.

BEAT CANVASSERS

Napoleon, and George Washington and Many More Great Men Were Successful Books Agents In Their Youth.

Books. — Well-known firm of London publishers require the services of a gentry gentlemen to act as agents. Liberal commission. Districts apportioned. Hunting and shooting men preferred. Members of good families, younger sons who have been at the Varsities or public schools, will find this a first-class opening. Apply, etc.

When the above appeared in the advertisement columns of the English papers recently, no doubt many people who read it would ask themselves what things were coming to.

Country gentlemen taking to book-canvassing!

Certainly it reads revolutionary, even in these days of trading "nobility and gentry."

But greater men than country squires have, before now, been engaged in canvassing books.

Napoleon Bonaparte, Emperor of the French, the world's greatest military genius, was once a book-canvasser.

The future conqueror, while yet a lieutenant, and with nothing to live on but his scanty pay, undertook to "push" for Messrs. Boulanger and Co., the Paris publishers, a work called "The History of the (French) Revolution." And apparently he liked the work — with its emoluments — for after a short trial he applied to be given the sole agency for the Department of La Vendee. He had, however, to be content with a restricted district in suburban Paris. With what zeal he "worked" this may be seen to-day at the Louvre, where there is exhibited his canvassing outfit, together with the long list of subscribers' names which his industry secured.

Almost at the same time, in a different part of the world, another future ruler was partly earning his bread as a book agent. This was none other than George Washington, "Father" of the United States. The particular book that Washington canvassed bore the somewhat lengthy title of "The London of Stoke-on-Trent Square, American Savage, How He May be Tamed by the Weapons of Civilization."

To "get off" such a mouthful as this would surely require more than average ability and persuasiveness, and if, as he recorded, Washington's sales were eminently satisfactory, small wonder that in later life he accomplished so much greater things.

Mr. W. S. Taylor, of Elstow, Sask., formerly of Bridgenorth, is here on a visit. Mr. Taylor is in the hardware business in the west, and is thriving satisfactorily, as are the many other Peterborough boys in Elstow and vicinity.

The numerous friends of Miss Rose, 524 Weller street, formerly of Montreal, will regret to learn that she is at the Nicholls hospital, so dangerously ill that her physicians hold out no hope of her recovery. A short time ago she suffered a paralytic seizure, and her condition has changed for the worse from day to day.

TO HELP THE EXPORT TRADE

Well Known Business Man of Montreal Urges Canadian Manufacturers To Wake Up and Get After Foreign Trade

Mr. George F Johnston, the well-known financier is urging the manufacturers and traders of Canada to consolidate and form an association through which authentic information of the wants of other countries—particularly South America—could be secured for the benefit of Canada Mr. Johnston's appeal, in part, is:—

Has not the time arrived when we should put forth some concerted action whereby we would render valuable aid to our Canadian exporters. This might be accomplished by following the example of our neighbors to the south of us by the formation of a Canadian Export Association. Our export trade is growing at a remarkably rapid rate and the work of such an association would be to educate our expanding manufacturers and traders who may be anxious to participate in profitable over-seas business. It would be the purpose of the suggested association to establish an intelligence department and through the agency of accredited correspondents who would supply ruling prices, point out new markets and fresh sources for the purchase of our raw material.

It may be news to many Canadians to know that there is scarcely a country in the world where Canadian merchandise does not find a ready market, both in the countries of the Old and New World. We have now a direct steamship service to Australia, New Zealand and the Far East and we have lately turned our attention to the development of trade to Latin South America and with most promising results.

From January 1st. to September 30th of last year, the exports and imports between Canada and Argentine aggregated $5,051,467, which is $2,000,000 more than the previous year. During the nine months above mentioned, Canada sent to Argentine $3,869,913 worth of goods and bought from that republic $2,181,554.

In looking over all the countries' trade with each of the Republics of South America, I personally believe that our trade of 1910 with the Argentine might be duplicated in each one of the other Republics, if we put the proper trade machinery into operation. Canada in the last few years, has been developing her export trade at a very rapid rate.

I would like to see our government assist in establishing a direct line of steamships with South America. This would facilitate the work of an energetic and patriotic Canadian Export Association. In many ways South America presents a very attractive field for Canadian business men and I believe, as one personally acquainted with South America and its business, that there is no doubt a large trade could be worked up, if proper attention were paid to cultivating the republics of South America. As everyone knows, South Americans for the most part, are not competitors of Canada. They buy what we have to sell and sell us commodities which we require. The only exception to this statement is the Argentine Republic and even with this republic our export trade last year was over $5,000,000. Canada should have, next to Great Britain, the first claim upon South American trade, because of the fact that the chief commercial houses of South America are English and would naturally give a preference to Canada. There is invested in South American enterprises at the present time, over two billions dollars of British money and as a result of this large amount of British capital invested, Canada, as a part of the British Empire, would receive a cordial welcome should she energetically seek closer trade relations with South American countries.

As a Canadian much interested in Canadian enterprises, I would like to see a system of organized effort to extend and enlarge our export trade and for that purpose, I would suggest the formation of a powerful league, known as the Canadian Export Association, which league ought to secure diplomatic influence for the successful exploitation of Canadian commerce. In order to secure a remunerative business for a direct steamship line, the government might grant a subsidy, which subsidy would not be required after a more extensive trade had been developed, as it would soon be apparent that Canadian steamships would soon have a paying cargo each way.

It might be pointed out that the greater part of manufactured goods used in South America are imported and that there is hardly an article manufactured in Canada which would not find a ready and profitable sale in the south. Implements are used there in enormous quantities. Cement is used in millions of tons. Leather goods, including saddles, boots and belting are everywhere in great demand owing to the agricultural nature of the country. The bulk of this trade is now going to Americans, Germans and the Belgians. We in turn need their asphalt, nuts, mutton, hides, mahogany, rice, rubber, wool, etc. Our Canadian government has neglected putting a live, energetic Canadian representative in each one of the Republics of South America and I think the time has arrived for either the government or such an association as I have indicated to take immediate steps towards the development of our Canadian trade in the south.

Mr. Johnston invites correspondence from manufacturers and traders of the Dominion on the subject and if there is sufficient interest manifested, necessary steps will be taken to organize an export association and to develop and extend our export trade.

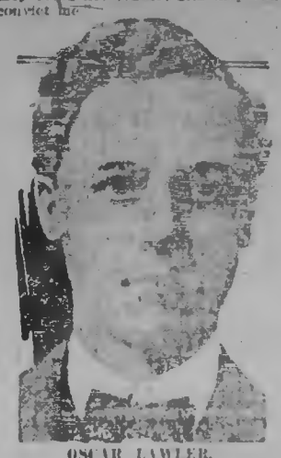
MCNAMARA AND HIS BACKING

Boasted of Having Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars and Federation of Labour Behind Him.

(Publishers Press News Service)

Los Angeles, Cal.—"I've got hundreds of thousands of dollars and the American Federation of Labor back of me. It took only $30,000 to clear Vincent Altman, of Chicago, and if they could not convict him they can't convict me."



OSCAR LAWLER,
Assistant Attorney General of U.S.A. who is taking charge of federal activities.

This boast, [illegible] by Detective Malcolm McLaren to James B. McNamara as the latter was being taken on a train from Detroit to Chicago on the night of April 12, 1911, and Orrie E. McManigal, then also under arrest, to become angered with McNamara for his independent statement and was the first circumstance that led McManigal to break from his companion, and eventually to confess his connection with various dynamiting excursions throughout the country.

The federal grand jury heard McManigal's story all day, laying the foundations for the probe into the alleged dynamiting conspiracies that extended from coast to coast in the last three years.

International President of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, of which John J. McNamara was secretary-treasurer.

Federation Scores McNamaras

Washington, D. C.—Branding James B. and John J. McNamara as "recreants to the good name and high ideals of labor," and expressing the sympathy of organized labor that the "culprits have been commensurately punished for their crime," the McNamara Ways and Means Committee of the American Federation of Labor, after a two days' conference here, issued a statement vigorously condemning the McNamaras for their "inhumanity" and declaring that organized labor should not be held "either legally or morally responsible for the crime of an individual member."

The labor leaders assert that they will welcome any investigation which either federal or state courts may undertake."

...thing I'll Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10,000 Worth of Medicine

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this [illegible] suffering from these [illegible] all that is necessary is to send me your address.

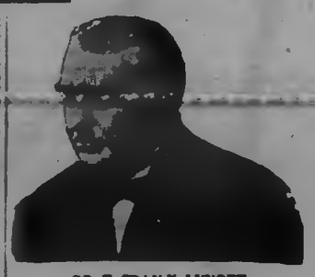
I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and pay me if cured. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the Uric Acid sufferers of the world, so I can tell them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, nor would I accept it now or later if you sent it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying calls to urinate. But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to listen to anyone thereafter. Happily, I am in a position now to demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to spend any money to find out. I don't ask them to believe me, nor even to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my cost. That is surely fair.

To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars, which will be used to compound my medicine. Much of it is ready now to be sent out—all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there be millions of them. And anyone who reads it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have a disease for which the medicine is intended, I ask you to send me one of your leading symptoms. If you have any of the symptoms in the list printed here you need my medicine and if such will write me I will gladly send you a box of it free with full directions for your use. Look the symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, then write me about as follows: "Dear Dr., I notice symptoms number [illegible] put down the numbers of your age, full address, and send it to me. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 837 Franklin Building, Toronto, Can.

The ten thousand dollars I am spending for the compounding of my medicine is only a part of the money I am devoting to this cause, for the package of medicine I send you will be fully prepaid at my expense. From any standpoint you view it, YOU incur no expense or obligation. Just tell others who you know are suffering who sent you the medicine that cured you.

I am promising to give away ten thousand dollars' worth of medicine, and I will do that. I am promising to send any sufferer who writes me a box of this medicine and full directions free of charge, and I will do that.



DR. T. FRANK LYNOTT
who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

I can say further that this medicine has been vouched for according to law, as complying in every detail with all requirements. It will stop rheumatism, it will stop pain and backache, it will stop too frequent desire to urinate; it will heal, soothe and strengthen. You will be better in every way for having taken it. There is not an ingredient that can injure; not one but will benefit. All that I ask is that you use it yourself so that you may be personally convinced.

Owing to the large number of requests I have had ten thousand more copies of my medical book printed. This book is new and up to date and contains complete descriptions, symptoms, causes, effects and cures of kidney, bladder and rheumatic diseases. All who write for the free medicine will be sent a copy of this grand illustrated medical book—the largest ever written on these diseases for free and general distribution.

If you need medicine such as I have, if you are anxious to be cured and don't want to spend any money LOOKING for cures, write me. Read the symptoms over and let me hear from you today.

These Are the Symptoms:

1—Pain in the back.
2—Too frequent desire to urinate.
3—Burning or obstruction of urine.
4—Pain or soreness in the bladder.

MASTER OF ETON.

Canon Lyttelton Has a Passion for Beautiful Trees.

Nature study was an ardent and loyal supporter in the headmaster of Eton, Canon the Hon. Edward Lyttelton, who has kept his fifty-sixth birthday. It claimed Dr. Lyttelton at the age of sixteen when he began to learn to draw trees, which from that time onward exercised over him a most potent charm. The excitements of cricket notwithstanding, he has during a match gazed with delight on stately trees "in verdure clad."

Not very long ago Dr. Lyttelton drew in an unreported speech an interesting comparison between music and nature study. "Music," he pointed out, "stimulates the imagination, while nature study stimulates and steadies the imagination." He thinks that boys between the ages of eleven and sixteen, the most impressionable period in their lives, should be persuaded to regard nature study as a pleasure, and certainly not merely as something that may be useful in after-life.

Dr. Lyttelton denies that he is an autocrat. He regards, at all events, the genus puer with catholic and humorous sympathy, realizing that the dunce at school may possess mental faculties which sooner or later develop. Dr. Lyttelton tells of a boy who, regarded as an idiot by masters and pupils, spent his holidays in Paris, bought a Continental Bradshaw, studied it intently, and ultimately knew the times of departure and arrival of every train; he eventually became, indeed, one of the cleverest of railway specialists.

Canon Lyttelton is almost perfectly ambidextrous, and when famous as a cricketer he was known to throw a cricket ball 105 yards with his right hand, and then, changing over, to throw it almost as far with his left.

Naturally this gift often enabled him by a quick change to run out an unsuspecting batsman. It is said that this little dodge of his "came off" triumphantly one day when playing for a clerical eleven, and the victim on retiring from the field was heard to murmur, "Hang it all! when playing parsons you don't expect to be diddled out."

A Skin Tight en er To Reduce Wrinkles

(From Popular Medicine)

In beauty culture, as in the treatment of disease, the tendency nowadays is to seek the removal of causes, rather than to treat symptoms or effects. In the matter of wrinkles, for instance, we know that the lines or furrows are caused by the skin becoming loose in places, so it does not perfectly fit the flesh beneath. The skin then "wrinkles" or sags. Naturally the proper thing to do is to tighten the skin—make it fit—then there's no room for lines, wrinkles and folds, and no surplus skin to sag or bag.

The best known formula for the purpose is: Saxolite, 1 oz., in ½ pint witch hazel. Use as a wash lotion. The effect is truly remarkable, especially as results are immediate. Ask the druggist for the powdered saxolite, which dissolves more quickly than any other form.

WHAT IS YOUR VOCABULARY?

A retired teacher has a curious hobby. He takes a great interest in tracing the history of everyday common words, and he finds an immense amount of amusement in this strange study. "Recently," he says, "I have been making inquiries into the number of words actually used by young children. Perhaps the result of my investigations may interest your readers. Children from [illegible] to nineteen months use from 19 to 132 words, while two-year-old children use from 118 to 1,227 words. The vocabulary increases rapidly from that time on. It is perfectly safe to assert that the average three-year-old child makes use of 1,000 words. The three-year-old boy I know has a vocabulary of [illegible] words."

During some [illegible] they took advantage of a lull in their work to [illegible] to an adjacent public-house for refreshment.

The "boss," appearing a few minutes afterwards, discovered their absence, and, suspecting their place of retreat, lost no time in making his way to the inn aforesaid. Opening the door of the bar-parlor, he caught the delinquents in the act of consuming a couple of pints of beer.

"Hallo!" exclaimed he, "is this where you chaps do your shunting?"

"No," replied one of the culprits, without a moment's hesitation; "but it's where we shifts the pints!"

First Expert Chess Player: "Won't you sit down and play a game with me?"

Second Expert Chess Player: "I can't. I have an important engagement in six weeks' time."

Race Dying Out.

There is at least one native race that is not dying out. This is the Maori, of New Zealand. According to statistics obtained in the census of Maoris taken in last March, the total native population of New Zealand is said to be 49,350, an increase for five years of 1617. In addition there are 215 Maoris on the Chatham Islands. It is a matter of difficulty to ascertain the number of half-castes living at Maoris. Probably all half-castes, and a large proportion of the Maoris as well in the South Island, now live in European fashion. The health of the natives has been generally good. There has been a great advance in the observance of sanitary laws, and the Maoris are beginning to realize that the excessive mortality among their children has been due to unsanitary conditions.

The Best Helpmeet.

All men, as well as women, like to be understood. Sympathy is their greatest help, and no woman who is self-centred, who is vain and thinks only of herself will gain the highest regard of man. She may be exquisitely beautiful, have a crowd of admirers at her feet, but she cannot bestow that wonderful happiness a plain little woman full of sympathy gives to her husband. If she understands him, is interested in his life-work, whether it be planting vegetables, composing music, or building towers, she will encourage him to reach his highest aim. Being beautiful will not make up for selfish indifference.

Fun and Fresh Ideas.

To remain young one must have company and enjoy it. Not a big dinner party one day, an afternoon reception the next, a late card party the following, and so on. This, for the hostess, is hard work that will quickly bring the appearance of age in its train, and, indeed, no work is more arduous. To attend to the wants of guests, to anticipate their desires, to have the whole responsibility of the success of a party in an utterly different thing to the bright company necessary to the well-being of the woman who leads too monotonous a life.

The limiting influence of four walls is what so many women who are housewives and mothers have to fight against, and they need company as a recreation.

SOCIETY DEALERS

Many People By Art Dealing Good Money on the Side And Many Make Their Living By It.

Although there are many dealers in art treasures and antiquities who are scrupulously honest and have never intentionally sold an [illegible] was not exactly what [illegible] it to be — and who to-day, in quite a number of cases, are prepared to give 10 per cent. profit upon the return of almost every article [illegible] during any [illegible] has the value of these increased within that period — it is a fact that there are many others who, taking advantage of the modern craze for collecting, resort to all sorts of dodges in order to impose upon the ignorant.

For instance, in Great Britain, it is quite a common trick for dealers to distribute part of their stock in farmhouses and cottages, in the hope that enthusiastic strangers will assume that they have been there for generations. After thus stocking a cottage the dealer casually mentions to customers that he has been told of a certain cottager who has some very good antique "stuff," and that he himself has had no time to verify the report. Of course, the address is promptly asked for by the enthusiastic collector, who is thus led to purchase goods which he might not otherwise think of buying.

An Ingenious Method.

This is a somewhat common and fairly well-known trick and the consequence is that some dealers have hit upon a more ingenious method. They arrange with some well-known man or woman in society, who is furnishing a new house to decorate it with fine furniture, pictures and prints, supplied free on the understanding that should a visitor admire any of them they are to be sold if possible, and that a handsome commission will be given on the transaction. "There are certainly in society, many who add to their diminished incomes by either selling works of art themselves or acting as agents for dealers.

"A well-known connoisseur, when recently visiting a Duchess, had the following experience:

"The lady was delighted to see him; she particularly wished for his advice and assistance. 'Algy has got terribly into debt; he may have to resign his commission in the Guards. I cannot ask his father for money, as he is badly hit by the depression in agriculture. You know all the rich Americans and the value of fine furniture; could you possibly help me to sell that magnificent [illegible] piece? It was given to a former Duke by the Emperor of Russia and I was always said to be worth many thousands of pounds.' The visitor looked at the bit of furniture. It was one he had seen at the shop of a celebrated dealer, who had had it for years on his hands and had resorted to this device to try to get rid of it."

SILENT HUSBANDS.

While Chinamen Have Risen in Chinese Revolt Women Have Determined to Assert Themselves Too.

While Chinamen have risen in revolt against the Manchu dynasty, their women-folk — at any rate some of them — have come to the conclusion that the time has arrived when they should make a strong protest against the custom which forces a girl to be betrothed to a boy in her infancy and ultimately marry him, although they may be scarcely acquainted with one another and have nothing in common. Such is the determination of Chinese women to stamp out this custom that some years ago nine Cantonese maidens drowned themselves together one night in the Pearl River rather than accept the lot of wife under those conditions.

"In three districts in Central Kuangtung, where a girl can always get work at silk-winding, thousands of girls have formed themselves into anti-matrimonial associations, the members of which refuse to live with the husband more than the customary three days.

"Then they take advantage of their legal right to visit mother, and never return, save on certain days or after a term of years. If the parents attempt to restore the runaway bride to her husband she drowns herself or takes opium; so parents and magistrates have had to let the girls have their way. By presenting herself in her husband's home on certain festival days the bride keeps her wifely status."

Dr. Ross also mentions a very curious practice observed between husbands and wives in certain districts of China. Etiquette, it appears, forbids husband and wife to be seen talking together. Thus a young man and his wife meet in an empty lane and, supposing themselves unobserved, he asks her for the key of the garden gate.

She throws it on the ground without looking at him, and, once indoors, rates him soundly for speaking to her in public.

"Suppose," she says, "some one saw us!"

NEW BATHING SUITS

"New York girls on bathing suits are only in the way think," Miss Dorothy Taylor, the young New York society woman whose observations on European bath [illegible] last summer shocked many American visitors. Trousers or trunks are less clumsy. Only prudish, silly people with naughty minds see the harm in a shirtless bathing suit," she says. "When I go swimming, I go into the water, and I wear silk trousers, or trunks and a long silk jersey, which reaches almost to my knees."

To the heaven we would win,
The angels might confuse us

—Atlanta Constitution.

So It Must Be.

"There goes Marconi, who invented the new airship, with his wife. Is it really dirigible, as he says, do you think?"

"Oh, yes. He can fly it wherever she likes."—Fliegende Blatter.

CURES ACHES AND PAINS LIKE MAGIC

Holbeck, Sask., Jan. 10.—(Special)—Among the many on the prairies who are shouting the praises of Dodd's Kidney Pills none speak with more enthusiasm than Mr. Matt. Syverson, a well-known resident of this place.

"I suffered from rheumatism for three years," Mr. Syverson says; "and I was also troubled with an acute pain around my heart. My case was a severe one and several times I doubted if recovery was possible. But seven boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me completely.

"I can truly and honestly recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills as a remedy for cases like mine. They surely cleared out all my aches and pains as if by magic."

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. When the kidneys are right they strain all the uric acid out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills make the kidneys right. That's why they never fail to cure rheumatism and kindred diseases.

100,000 SHARES AT $1.00

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has been organized recently with an authorized capital of $500,000, to do a general building, real estate, and insurance business, and is actively engaged in Vancouver and Victoria—two most promising fields. The profits from building houses for cash and selling on instalments is well known, and will be one of the principal channels from which profits will be derived. BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its own building department and architect, and does its own construction. In addition to building houses, BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its real estate department, where it carries on a general real estate business, discounting agreements of Sale, subdividing and transacting a general insurance business.

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS LIMITED, is a new concern, having been in business less than two months in Vancouver, but is becoming well known as the Company without any promotion shares and with a strong board of directors, made up of well known Vancouver and Victoria business men.

Shareholders may conservatively look for a 10 per cent dividend the first year, increasing thereafter and a steady advance in the value of their shares caused by the substantial reserve it will always be the policy of the directors to build up.

Companies run on similar lines, notably the Los Angeles Investment Company and "Home Builders," both of Los Angeles, have proved phenominally successful, the former, which has been in business some sixteen years, having accumulated assets of over $6,000,000, and paying 28 per cent. dividends; and the latter, which started business three years ago, with only $1,250 capital, has assets to-day of over $1,089,000, a surplus of over $308,000, is paying 17 per cent. dividends, and its $1.00 shares are selling at $2.30.

DRUNKARDS PATRON

When Christmas Decided to Merge Bacchus into St. Martin the Reputation of Former Was Handed On To Him.

What has come to be known as St. Martin Summer consists of a few lovely days about the second week of November. We hear a great deal about St. Luke's Summer, but St. Martin's Summer and his name-day, November 11th, suffer neglect — possibly because the saint was French and not English.

Perhaps, too, the knowledge that he is the patron saint of drunkards has not added to his reputation. That office came to him by accident. The reason how this doubtful honour was thrust upon him after his death was rather curious. The Vinalia, or Feast of Bacchus, was always celebrated on November 11th. Later, when the Christians decided to merge Bacchus into St Martin, the reputation of the former was unfortunately handed on to the saint, although quite unmerited by him.

Before his conversion he was a military tribune, stationed at Amiens. When one day, so the story goes, in midwinter, at the city gate of Amiens a miserable beggar appealed to him for help, the soldier drew his sword and, dividing his cloak, gave half of it to the wretched beggar. At night, so it is said, Christ in person appeared to the astonished soldier, clad in the very cloak he had divided with the beggar a few hours before.

Another legend is that the saint, having been annoyed by the behaviour of one of the geese in his poultry-yard, ordered it to be slain and served up for dinner. He died immediately after partaking of it, and the anniversary has ever since been observed in France by the eating of goose on that day, November 11th. And even now, when the sunny days of St. Martin's Summer come round, there are, but few French people who do not give a passing thought to that kindly saint who divided his cloak so that a poor beggar might be protected from the cold.

Sword in a Plank.

A curious discovery has been made at Oakley Station, near Dunfermline, Scotland. In the course of alterations for the purpose of heightening the platform, it was found necessary to substitute a fresh plank of wood for an old one. The latter was being sawn up for firewood when a sword was found imbedded in the heart of it. The plank had formed part of the platform support for at least fifteen years. There was little rust on the weapon, which was an old-fashioned type, a short cross piece forming the handle. How the sword could have got where it was discovered is a mystery, as there was no indication from the outside of the plank where it had entered, and it is believed that it had been picked up by the saw at an early period of its existence and encircled with the growth.

A King's Retreat.

We often hear of Boscobel Oak, people pointing to it as the very tree which sheltered Charles II. after the Royalist forces had been shattered at the battle of Worcester. But the Boscobel Oak is not the original tree; it has grown from an acorn taken from the original tree. Boscobel House, near by, is, however, the very house in which he hid. He lay concealed in a hole beneath a trap-door in the cheese-room, but as soldiers were everywhere about he had to crawl out of the chimney and make his way into a wood and hide in an oak tree. Returning when the danger was for a moment passed, he spent another night at the house, then, early in the morning, took food and drink with him to the oak tree, climbed up and stayed there for twenty-four hours. During that time Cromwell's soldiers passed beneath the tree searching for him, and he heard them saying what they would do if they caught him.

Complicated Census Work.

Census taking in China, it would appear, is a business complicated by Chinese customs. Thus the Chinese method of reckoning age is not the same as the European. A Chinese child at birth is said to be one year old, and after it has passed one New Year it is said to be two years old; so that if born in the last month of the year it may be said to be two years of age before it is 30 days days old according to European reckoning. Difficulties are encountered in China, as elsewhere, in regard to the ages of females. There was an old lady of Ching-tzu known to be over 100 who insisted on the enumerator entering her age at 99. This was because it is a customary term of abuse to call a person a "hundred years old donkey," or "ten-toothed donkey," which has the same significance. It is stated to be a common thing for a Chinese mother to give a son the name of a girl, presumably to deceive the fates, it being a common and true saying that a girl is easier to rear. This of course is another source of trouble to the enumerators."

The "Father of Southwark."

Thousands of poor people in the South of London will regret that, owing to advancing age, Canon Horsley is obliged to leave his busy parish of St. Peter's, Walworth, for a quiet living in the South of England. For years he has worked zealously on behalf of the people of the slums, and there is scarcely a branch of parish or municipal work in London with which Canon Horsley has not been connected. To the people of Southwark he has been in every sense a "father of the flock," and it is stated that he once refused a colonial bishopric that he might stay at home and work in the slums.

The canon is a man with a fund of anecdote, and describing the odd dress of English bishops some time ago, he told a story of the Bishop of Bath and Wells, who had been visiting Scarborough. On the way to the train he lost his reckoning, and stopped a boy. "I say, my lad, how far it is to the station?" "About a mile ahead," said the boy, who had never seen a bishop before. Then, staring at the bishop's knee-breeches and silk stockings, he added, "Hallos, guv'nor, what's up? Somebody swiped yer bike?"

Long Delayed in Delivery.

A letter written in November, 1870, by a prominent member of the Society of Friends in Durham, England, has been found in the Public Record Office having been undelivered. A copy of the letter has been forwarded to the descendants in the eighth generation of those for whom it was intended. The letter is addressed: "For My Loving friend Richard Hickson, a butcher in Durham to be delivered to William Bywaters, Durham, paid 9d."

Musician and Scientist.

There is no more brilliant scientist in the world to-day than Sir William Ramsay, who has been warning Britain that, at the present rate of consumption, her coal supply will only last another 175 years. His most wonderful discoveries have been in connection with new gases in the atmosphere, upon which such names as [illegible] have been bestowed, and the experimental work [illegible] ranks as the most refined ever carried out. Of neon, for example, there is only about one part in 70,000,000 parts of air. Sir William devotes his leisure to music. He plays both the piano and violin and has written the words of not a few songs. His collecting of curios is another of Sir William's hobbies, and at his house at Regent's Park may be seen many queer treasures thousands of years old.

Duel Up To Date

A contest in the air between rival aviators for a girl's hand was the feature of a one-day aviation meet arranged for at Lima, Ohio. Two of the aviators, Jack Bachelor and Bert Chambers, had been laying siege to the heart of Miss Dorothy Dale, of Tiffin, Ohio. Miss Dale refused to choose between them, and in a recent meet in that city made a trip with the clouds with both. She promised to make her decision, and intimated that she would accept the one who made the highest altitude during the day.

DOCTORS CONDEMNS OILY LINIMENTS

The Public Are Warned to be Careful of These Strong-Smelling Oily Liniments Containing Harmful Acids, Ammonia, Etc.

Many people have clung to the old-fashioned idea that a thick, greasy liniment is the best kind. Doctors say not—and they know.

Recently a number of these white, oily liniments were analyzed, and they were found to contain an enormously high percentage of harmful acids, and such irritating chemicals as ammonia, etc. For the moment they may cause a warm sensation when first applied, but their continued use never cures rheumatism, and only deteriorates the skin, sets up inflammation and causes endless trouble.

When a doctor warns you to quit using a white, oily liniment—do so. He knows that a thick liniment can't penetrate, can't sink through the pores and reach the seat of the pain.

When asked his opinion a few days ago, Dr. Roberts stated that he considered a strong, penetrating, pain-subduing liniment, such as "Nerviline," to be superior to any of the white ammonia liniments. In his twenty-five years of practice he had witnessed cases of rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago that simply would not respond to ordinary treatment—but Nerviline cured them. The same physician also spoke of the great advantages of keeping a preparation like Nerviline in the house always, because of cramps, diarrhoea, stomach disorders, earache, toothache, headache and such minor ailments. Nerviline is a first-class cure. There is scarcely an ache or a pain, internal or external, that Nerviline won't cure. In thousands of homes no other pain-relieving medicine is used. Fifty years' continued success and the endorsement of the profession are proof that Nerviline is the liniment for the home.

"Silver Greyhounds."

Cause of Rheumatism

Many physicians believe that rheumatism is the result of over-feeding, followed by putrefactive changes in the foodstuffs in the alimentary canal; that the action of certain bacteria produces specific toxic (poison) substances which, when introduced into the blood, cause a deviation from the normal oxidation process, thus causing the condition that is designated rheumatic. In the majority of instances it is probably due to eating too much of the vegetable class of foods; in other cases it is the result of eating too much meat.

Highest on Earth

The Loa Bridge in the China Andes is the highest bridge in the world. This wonderful construction is four hundred feet high, eight hundred feet long, and stands ten thousand feet above sea-level. It crosses a great ravine some three hundred miles from Antofagasta, on the railway running from that port into Bolivia. This line is also of interest from the fact that it is the highest railway in the world, climbing at one point up to over sixteen thousand six hundred feet above sea-level.

PANTING FOR THE IDEALISTIC

Were Pants First and Are Going To Wear Them Again. And Why Not?

(Publishers Press News Service)

London. — "Because skirts are unhealthy, hideous and immoral. Unhealthy because they collect germs. Hideous because they take the form of nature in vain. Immoral because they leave the feminine figure to the imagination."

That's why they're going to wear pants.

Mrs. Stewart says that in a generation women do well as to wear pants. If they are worn [illegible] of course, and the [illegible] were a [illegible] all shade of her [illegible] step forth again [illegible] from shackles [illegible] herself.

Of course the [illegible] Skirts ARE "unhealthy, hideous and immoral." They [illegible] of nature in [illegible] proudly graceless [illegible] of the world.

BUT — and here is [illegible] that the pantaloon [illegible] wearers must face:

SO ARE PANTS!

If the ladies must go out of skirts — as perhaps they should — and we no doubt they will sometime — they must garb themselves in some garment more pleasing to the eyes than this unspeakable dress to which we've gone and got OUR legs cramped in.

THE IDEAL DRESS

May they don something inherently graceful, something suggestive of the Bible chaste beauty of Diana, something that the modistes of Paris can't control, something everlastingly beautiful that shall be to us a joy forever, as the [illegible] is a joy forever.

OLYMPIC PROGRAM BRINGS SURPRISE

Stockholm. — Surprises for athletes are found in the Olympic games program for next year. The first is a 300-mile bicycle [illegible] the only wheeling event listed. The short distance races expected are conspicuous by their absence. The 150 mile event will be a road race around Lake Maler, open to teams.

The football competition is limited to the Association [illegible] and teams affiliated with the International Football Federation.

The track and field contests, under the head of athletics, consist of the 100, 200, 400, 800, 1500, 5000 and 10,000 metres flat races, the marathon, a 110 metre hurdle, running and standing high and broad jumps, hop, step and jump, pole vault, throwing javelin (right and left hand) throwing hammer and two all-round events, the pentathlon and decathlon, the former consisting of five events and the latter of 10.

Team competition consists of 400, 1600 and 3000 metre relay races and a tug of war between teams of eight. Combined team and individual competition consists of a cross country race 8000 metres. The bicycle race, 320 miles, is also a combined team and individual affair.

Young Boy of Sixteen Possesses a Preacher's Views and Handles Them Eloquently.

(Publishers Press News Service)

Mass. — "Frank W. Rollins of Bakersville, Mass., is the youngest boy preacher in the country if not in the world. Though only 16 years old he possesses a preacher's license. This he makes good use of by supplying his father's pulpit and preaching in different towns throughout the state. The boy is not out of school, having taken a post graduate classical course in the Torrington high school. He is preparing for a Wesleyan university and will follow with a course at the Theological seminary.

He is known in his vicinity as the "boy preacher of Litchfield county" and is perfectly at home in conducting prayer meetings. When he supplies his father's pulpit his sermons are of the sort to make the congregation sit up and take notice.

QUEER AD TO LAND BRAINS

Coffee King Arbuckle Put Queer Ad in American Papers to Get Men With Brains to do Big Things.

New York. — The following ad is appearing here: — $1,000,000 and over when he retired; came on salary $700 a year; $2000 salary when he came; retired with several million; $3 per week when he came; has large amount now to his credit.

I can make others rich if I can find the right kind of men. I want several men who have already shown ability, to relieve me in a very large measure so that I can give more attention to my Deep Sea hotel and my Colony for Cripples and Old People, and to start another Colony out west.

Ten thousand dollars salary for my first assistant per year; $5000 salary for my second assistant per year; $2500 salary for my third assistant per year.

Men from wholesale grocery house or mail order houses preferred. Answer only by letter marked "personal," which will be kept strictly confidential. JOHN ARBUCKLE, Arbuckle Bros., New York.

That "want ad" appeared in New York and Chicago papers. John Arbuckle is the millionaire coffee and sugar magnate. He has just come back from Europe, and explained his queer "ad." "It is like this," he said, "I want to get men with brains and ability to do big things. The best way, I have learned, to get such men is to let them know that you want them and tell them what there is in it for them, and the only way to do that is to advertise for them."

ATROCITIES IN TRIPOLI

Report Again Published — War Costs Italy Much.

Rome. — After the capture of Tajura, the Italians found the bodies of former comrades with the limbs severed and others who had been crucified. The corpses of members of the Bersaglieri and other regiments were found in a well, where they had been buried alive and the top walled in.

An additional appropriation of $25,000 was made, to carry on the war until the end of 1911. Thus the war in three months has cost Italy $90,000,000.

Imperialists Claim a Victory

London. — A Peking despatch says Government messages announce that the Imperialists, by a brilliant turning movement, have occupied Nyang Tzu Kuan defile, an important pass in Shan Si province.

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 10. — Sixteen persons in a double house at 118 Aylmer avenue narrowly escaped death last night, when warned by a passerby that their home was going up in flames. They rushed out into the street, clad only in their night clothes, while the temperature was at zero. The fire department quickly responded, only to find all hydrants in the neighborhood frozen. They were forced to let the house burn. James Sharon, Herbert Wood, and Joseph Muhelheiser and their families were the occupants. The blaze originated from an overheated chimney.

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., brought up his bill to abolish deposits in Dominion elections, and thus bring Dominion Act into conformity with the Province of Ontario procedure.

Mr. Burnham spoke on the second reading of the Bill.

At the request of the Prime Minister the Bill was referred to a committee to investigate and to report to the House during the present session.

THE CHINAMAN

What a Late Chaplain to the Forces at Hong-Kong Thinks of the Chinese.

Napoleon said that when China was moved the face of Europe would be changed. Yet, as the Chinese are naturally peaceful, we think that the [illegible] Peril is a commercial one. The [illegible] is that [illegible] manufacture things cheaper than Europeans can and dismiss us from the trade of the Far East. How can we, with our high standard of comfort, strikes, and unrest generally, compete with the Chinese, wombining, as they do, the active industry of the most civilized people with the passive patience of the North American Indian? Far more than we do the Chinese believe in the power of character and intellect. With this, rather than with armies and navies, they will conquer.

A Chinese is nearly always a person of resource. A young man was accused of knocking out his father's teeth, and was in danger of being put to death. A friend visited him and whispered in his ear, "It's a bad case."

Suddenly seizing the ear between his teeth, he gave it a severe bite.

"What do you mean?" asked the young man, raising his fist.

"I mean," was the answer, "that you are saved; you have only to show the marks of my teeth and say that they were made by your father, whose teeth, being shaky, dropped out."

Business Before Sentiment.

Two small things impress foreigners with the skill of the Chinese. One is the way they carve ivory balls, one within the other, to the number of seven or eight; and the other the inscription of minute characters inside agate or crystal snuff-bottles.

A Chinaman always appears to be looking round the corners of his eyes at you, and to have a meaning that you cannot get at. He gives you the impression that somebody, when he was born, sat on his nose, and that he has been lamenting the calamity ever since. And yet, though he never lays aside this expression of resigned wretchedness, the average Chinese is not at all more miserable than the average Britisher.

Speaking of Britishers, we may say that they and Chinamen have much in common. Both have a great capacity for making and enjoying money. Both have business aptitude and integrity, do their work well, and appreciate a good dinner. Equally with Englishmen, Celestials have common sense and respect for law, and do not allow sentiment to interfere with business. The Chinese are the Britons of the Far East, and the Japanese are the French.

Fond of Sport.

The Chinese are not less conservative than the English. They dread any change that may cause trouble or disorder, and this is why they have put up so long with their wretched government. "Better be a dog in peace," they say, "than a man in anarchy." The "dog in peace" has now risen to war; let us hope that [illegible] remain in anarchy.

[illegible] of sport, though [illegible] of sport is peculiar. They [illegible] thrushes, and even fish [illegible] they bet on these, and on every other event.

The Chinese contrivances for management and capture of beast, bird, and fish are as ingenious as they are simple. If, for instance, a donkey disturbs by braying in the night, a big stone is tied to his tail, and this humiliates him into silence.

When a Chinaman wishes to catch wild ducks he mixes an intoxicating spirit made of rice with corn and leaves the mixture for the birds. They become intoxicated, and are taken in their cups, so to speak. Another way is to put a gourd on his head and swim gently among the ducks. They are not frightened, because they only see the gourd and are accustomed to that, and the artful John pulls one duck after another by the legs into a bag attached to him. Everyone knows that John Chinaman trains cormorants to catch fish, not for themselves, but for him.

After cold water, there is nothing the Chinese so much fear as ridicule and disgrace, or the "loss of face." A magistrate who was to be beheaded asked that, as a special favour, he might wear his robes of office in order to save his face!

The Chinese are great at organizing. The trade guilds which are established in every town are quite as powerful as our trade unions. Even beggars and thieves have guilds. Every morning the king of the beggars sends a detachment of his sackcloth-clad or nearly unclad subjects to collect poor-rates in the districts assigned to them. Owners of property pay so much a year to "the honourable guild of thieves" in order not to be robbed.

SHAM BATTLE SHAMS

The military manoeuvres were in a muddle. The "Purples" were supposed to be invading the territory of the "Greens," but why they were or what they were they didn't exactly know.

A large detachment of the 'Purples' began to cross the river by a wooden bridge to attack a small detachment of 'Greens.'

"Hi!" roared the 'Greens.' "Hi! You mustn't cross here! Can't you see the notice? This bridge is supposed to be destroyed."

"H'm! Is it?" responded the captain of the 'Purples,' grimly. "Well, then, we're supposed to be swimming across."

Costly Panama Hats

Even in modern times there have been men's hats which cost far more than anything worn by the ladies. That, for instance, presented to General Grant when he was in Mexico cost $1500, and justly claims to be the finest sombrero ever made. The admirers of Mr. Steward, a member of President Lincoln's Cabinet, too, paid $1000 for the Panama with which they presented him.

Seeking Damages.

A writ has been issued through E. L. Goodwill by W. Everett Taylor against the Grand Trunk Railway company for unstated damages. Taylor is the young man, who suffered the loss of an arm while in the employ of the company as brakesman, last summer, and who since then has been incapacitated for work. The accident occurred near Blackwater.

CATASTROPHE IN RUBY DISTRICT—HOUSE BURNED IN THE NIGHT.

The Parents Are Alive—Tried to Save Children — Mother Badly Burned and She May Die.

Quebec, Jan. 10.—Word of a terrible burning tragedy has reached here in which the lives of five people have been lost, and a whole family of little children wiped out. The fire occurred at Notre Dame du Sacre Coeur County Lotbiniere, in the home of Joseph Desrochers. It is not known how it started, but it is presumed that a heated stove pipe was the cause.

Mr. Desrochers was awakened about one this morning by the smoke in his bedroom. One portion of the house was already in flames. Mr. Desrochers aroused his wife, who was partially suffocated, and without troubling to dress, made his way to the room where his four little children were sleeping. He found his way cut off by the flames, and had to make his way into the open air. The thermometer was ten degrees below zero. By this time Mrs. Desrochers had revived, and when she was told of the plight of her children, she rushed into the burning house and attempted to rescue them. She fought her way through the flames, and would have sacrificed her life had not the neighbors who arrived on the scene dragged her back.

The four children were burned to death, as well as the hired man, and so fierce was the fire that their bodies were practically incinerated.

Mrs. Desrochers' burns are so serious that her life is despaired of, while the husband is also in bad shape.

The fire could not be fought because no water was available.

It quickly spread to the house next door and destroyed it. A new church some twenty feet away was threatened, but it was saved by being covered with snow, which willing hands piled up its sides and roof.

Hongkong, Jan. 10.—A further detachment of Indian troops, with field and machine guns, was despatched today from here to Canton to reinforce the contingent of British troops already stationed there.

Kingston Will Furnish Power to Grand Trunk

Kingston, Ont., Jan. 10.—Dr. A. E. Ross, M.P.P., interviewed the Hon. Adam Beck in Toronto yesterday relative to supplying the Grand Trunk with power to operate the granite drilling plant, and on Mr. Beck's advice, the city will give the Grand Trunk a temporary supply, consisting of 500 horse-power, until the Hydro-Electric power is brought to Kingston. Mr. Beck expects to get Trent River power here by July. The Seymour Company has power at Napanee, and a transmission line will be installed from there to Kingston.

British Mine Strike May Develop Into Greatest Crisis in History of Unions—Coal Only for Month.

London, Jan. 10.—England is today on the verge of the greatest labor crisis in her history. Reports from the mining districts say that the men are voting almost unanimously in favor of the establishment of a minimum wage. The balloting began to-day and will close Friday night. It is the general opinion that there is no chance of averting a strike, as the operators have served notice that they will not consider the minimum wage demand.

The Cardiff collieries have already suspended domestic and commercial deliveries. There is not enough coal in England to last a month. Thousands of industries will be paralyzed and much suffering is sure to result in the event of a tie-up of the mines.

Radical Laborites are predicting that civil war will be inevitable if the Government attempts to operate the mines, as has been suggested.

The mines' organization had $10,000,000 in its treasury, and is well prepared for a long struggle.

In 1893, 250,000 miners stopped work for 17 weeks rather than submit to a reduction of 25 per cent. in their wages. They had nothing like the "fighting fund" in their treasury that they have now.

The miners are preparing to strike on March 1 if the vote shows that two-thirds of the men are in favor of the minimum wage demands. The total number of persons employed in and about the coal mines of Great Britain in 1910 was 1,049,407. Of these 61,000 belong to the union.

KING EDWARD VACUM CLEANER

You cannot clean carpets, rugs and furniture by beating. If you think you have, just try a KING EDWARD VACUUM CLEANER and you will find the article full of dust, which breeds disease.

The KING EDWARD HAND MACHINE has no equal as compared with other hand machines. It is lighting to operate, and the cleaning is done perfectly with. On account of the stationary suction fan it operates it cleans carpets and rugs equally as well as two, and it is about half the weight of other hand machines to carry up and down stairs or from one room to another. It is sold for less money than any of the hand machines. All machines are guaranteed.

Died at St. Joseph's.

There passed away yesterday morning at St. Joseph's Hospital, Miss Hannah Hayes, daughter of the late James Hayes, "Skibbereen Farm," Otonabee, after only a week's sickness. Deceased lived for many years in Denver, Col., but during the last few years, since the death of her father, has resided with her brother, Mr. James Hayes, on "Skibbereen Farm". Miss Hayes was well known in Peterborough, and was highly esteemed by all who knew her, and the sad news of her death will occasion deep regret among her many friends. She leaves to mourn her death three brothers and two sisters. The sisters are: Mrs. Daniel Kelly, Asphodel, and Miss Nellie Hayes at home. The brothers are: Messrs. James and Daniel Hayes, of Otonabee, and Cornelius, of Sudbury.

Reports That Clergyman Sentenced to Death for Murder Has Nervous Indigestion — An Appeal Being Prepared.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 10. — Rev. C. V. T. Richeson, waiting death by electrocution at the State prison some time during the week beginning Sunday, May 19, passed a restless night and Dr. Howard Lothrop, who attended him when he mutilated himself several weeks ago, was called to the minister-murderer's cell at Charles street jail shortly before 8.30 today.

Dr. Lothrop said the prisoner is in no danger, but that his condition is even better than could be expected considering the mental shock he suffered yesterday, when sentence of death was pronounced by Judge Sanderson. Nervous indigestion was the physician's diagnosis.

Richeson's counsel is already preparing the papers for the appeal to the governor's council to authorize the commutation of the sentence.

NLY TWO HUNDRED YARDS FROM WRECK WHEN ENGINEER BROUGHT IT TO A STANDSTILL.

Near Hamilton Yards—Train for Toronto Cancelled in Consequence of Accident From Bad Rail.

Hamilton, Jan. 10.—The Hamilton-to-Toronto C.P.R. train leaving Hamilton at 8.35 this morning was cancelled as a result of what might have been a bad railway wreck in the Toronto, Hamilton, and Buffalo Railway yards, just this side of Hamilton, about 8.45 this morning.

The Canadian Pacific T., H. and B. express, which left Toronto at 7.50, was traveling in through the Hamilton yards at about 12 miles an hour when the baggage car, the smoker behind it, and one of the other coaches jumped the track. The coupling between the engine and baggage car snapped, and the engine went on. Next the coupling between the baggage car and the smoker was broken, and the smoker swerved off to the side, almost turning over and stopping across the double tracks almost at right angles with the rails. Confusion reigned in the crowded train, and a panic was narrowly averted.

Many From Toronto.

The majority of the passengers were Toronto people destined for Hamilton and other points farther on. The local express had just left Hamilton at 8.35 for Toronto and was rumbling out through the yards at a slow speed. The locomotive of the outcoming train was not more than two hundred yards from the other train when the accident happened, and owing to the slow pace the engineer was able to stop before smashing into the derailed smoker standing directly across his tracks.

The Hamilton train backed into the station and was cancelled, preventing many residents of that city from coming to Toronto as was their intention.

Several of the occupants of the smoking car received minor bruises from the shaking up when their car left the tracks, but no one was seriously hurt.

A wrecking crew was sent to the scene immediately, and the tracks cleared. The cause is supposed to be from a bad rail, or possibly a broken flange on the baggage car.

Good Form

Little Social Calling.

The interest taken by the woman of today in athletics, in the world, in affairs of public tenor, has brought about at least one welcome social change—the abolition of the social call.

No longer are upper blinds seen to flutter suspiciously while maid or butler utters the solemn "Not at home" to relieved callers. The allotted twenty minutes of platitudes, during which hostess and guest converted a [illegible] topics to the [illegible]

[illegible] time by the [illegible] man-of-[illegible]

[illegible] gradual disappearance of the [illegible] custom does not mean a consequent damper upon social activity. What it does signify is a more sincere and a more natural phase of sociability. Today a woman rings up the friend she wishes to see on the telephone and arranges for a friendly little visit. The stiff rose and gilt of the front parlor have yielded to the cozy depths of the living room easy chairs and the staid conversation of the reception room to the cozy chatter of the tea table.

What a bugbear were the "Tuesdays" or "Thursdays" of the society leader, from which continued absence spelled social oblivion. Many a heartache originated in these drawing rooms of the dictator, where cuts were dealt right and left and arrows sent out by a satirical tongue which caused a sting which lasted for weeks. A vise of stiff silk, burning patent leathers and other insignia of correct dress are not conducive of kindness and good cheer. For these very obvious reasons we hail with joy the passing of an era of silly formality, hastening to welcome in its stead the custom of "just dropping in for a chat" or an afternoon visit.

Telephone Courtesy.

Many otherwise polite persons feel that they can be rude when engaged in a telephone conversation. With the first "Hello" many a man and woman drop their courtesy as if it were a garment that did not fit them.

If the "central" were to record all that she hears and all that is said to her it would make some of us blush for shame. While men frequently swear over the telephone, there are many women who, while they do not give vent to profanity, so far copy the manners of the male sex that they scream like shrews at "central" if she happens to give them the wrong number or interrupts them before they have finished talking.

That the ways of telephones and the persons who operate them are trying to one's temper no one can deny, but the irritability that manifests itself in outward speech is not a requisite of the proper appreciation and use of the telephone. It is nothing less than a pernicious habit which most people acquire unconsciously. Let us remember that consideration and kindness pay better than rudeness and discourtesy. If not, then let us have poorer telephone service and preserve our self respect.

Make it a rule never to be rude to the telephone assistants. It is like shooting from an ambush—at an unseen foe, it is true, but it hurts just as much.

Politeness a Valuable Cult.

If regarded from no other point of view than as an asset in journeying through life, politeness and the observance of small courtesies will be found a very valuable cult.

True, the blustering, pushing man or woman makes a way of its sort, but if closely observed neither can very readily come back another time with any success. Aggressiveness is often needed, but impoliteness never. When it is necessary to emphasize even that may be done with dignity and a perfectly polite manner, carrying weight far better than arrogance and rudeness ever can.

ON "THE CANNY SCOT."

Scotsmen Not Sentimental, But Deeply Romantic at Heart, Says a Well-known English Writer.

"I have been trying all my life to like Scotsmen," said Charles Lamb "and am obliged to desist from the experiment in despair." There are still probably a few people who secretly or openly harbour similar antipathetic feelings towards the natives of Caledonia, but their number is decreasing daily. It would hardly be correct to say that the Scots are universally popular. Popularity is usually the product of leisure and luxury, and is seldom accorded to those who have had little opportunity for the cultivation of the graces and external beauties of life. For generations the Scots have been held fast in the grip of uncompromising realities. The poverty of the country, with its long stretches of bleak but beautiful moorland; the "Sawbath gloom" which so long reigned over the Lowlands, combined with the "Celtic gloom" permeating every "distant shieling" in the Highlands, has not been conducive to the development of a spirit of gaiety and charm. But what they have lost in one way they have gained in another. In this very schooling in "strait and narrow" ways which has given the nation the grit and dogged determination it now possesses.

HUMOUR NORTH OF THE TWEED

A sense of humor is not now denied Scotsmen by the Sassenach. "A Scotsman and therefore quick to see the humor of things," was the recent [illegible] seems to have [illegible] ent years. It probably arose in the first instance from the Scot's necessity for economy. Brought up in a country where money was unusually scarce, it was difficulty for him to develop suddenly an open-handed generosity. This fostered habit of economy, brought about by circumstances, must be carefully distinguished from the merely mean desire to hoard. Great generosity of heart is often found in the most economical person, while a certain cold selfishness not infrequently accompanies the most outrageous extravagance.

Another charge which has sometimes been levelled against the Scots is a lack of romance, but their history is an ample refutation of this charge. The Scotsman is not sentimental, but he is deeply romantic at heart."

ILLUSTRATION OF PUBLIC OWNERSHIP.

The United States Government is Running Department Stores, Hotels and a Steamship Line in Panama.

The United States government, as everybody knows, is engaged in building as a public enterprise, a canal across the Isthmus of Panama. What the world does not generally understand is that as part of this operation the government is also running lines of railway, a departmental store, hotels and a steamship line. At this government departmental store it is possible to buy almost everything, including ladies' patent leather shoes, briar pipes, teething rings for babies, sugared almonds etc. No less than fifteen hotels are operated, besides 18 mess halls. During one month these places served nearly 1,000,000 meals all told.

This has led a writer to suggest the possibility of the United States government developing Alaska by means of railways operated by the government itself.

Does not what has been accomplished suggest something more—the possibility of solving the trust problem by means of public ownership? It seems futile to talk of going back to the old days of small industries and free competition. The economy in large operations is something the public will not readily consent to surrender. Neither does it seem altogether easy to solve the problem by public control of corporations. The only easy way out would seem to be going the whole length and providing for public operation, something which does not, in view of what is being accomplished in Panama, appear so very difficult after all.

From Generation to Generation.

Grandfather Billings smiled covertly when Billings junior wondered where Billings third, aged seven, got his "trickiness." "If I didn't keep my eyes open," said Billings junior hotly, "Billy would outwit me every time."

"This morning," he continued, "I promised him a whipping to-night. When the event came off just now he never flinched or yelled. 'Pluck, pure and simple!' said I to myself, mighty proud, for I wasn't sparing him in the least. But that wasn't all," he concluded, in disgust. "The young rascal had on three pairs of trousers."

"As I remember it," observed Grandfather Billings, reflectively, "you used to insert a small geography when a 'good sound one' was due you."

A DIFFICULT LANGUAGE

Chinese Language Has 40,000 Characters of Separate Meaning, and Accent.

The difficulties of making up a font of Chinese type, says the American Consul at Shanghai, although considerable, are not relatively so great as one might imagine, for while Kang Hsi's dictionary the standard and most comprehensive work of its kind in the language, contains some 40,000 characters it has been found that for all practicable purposes a font need contain about 7,000. Of course, with a font of this size the Chinese printer, in the course of setting up a book will frequently find that he lacks a dozen or so unusual characters, a difficulty which he readily meets by having those missing symbols hand cut on blank type by skilled engravers, who, thanks to the old wood-block system are to be found in practically every town in China. Although practically all Chinese newspapers and books on modern topics are now printed from movable metal type, books pertaining to old China, such as the Confucian classics and their commentaries, are still produced by the time-honored method of printing from wooden blocks. Among the reasons why the Chinese prefers his books of this nature printed in the old way are his naturally strong conservatism, the peculiar charm and artistic softness of the pages printed from blocks, which the modern books from metal presses do not have, and the fact that the new style volumes lack that peculiar odour imparted to the older method by the lampblack table ink, with which they are printed, an odour which, although extremely disagreeable to occidental nostrils, is inseparably associated in the Chinese mind with good literature.

[illegible] never waste anything. [illegible] things. Servants collect and sell match-boxes and things which seem to us to be useless. In the country you will see a boy up in a tree beating down a single leaf with a stick for fuel. Women, when too old for any other work, collect dry grass for the same purpose. A man collects his fowls and then beats old, damp mats or matting; cock-roaches and other vermin jump out, and the fowls have a meal that costs nothing. You give a coolie an old coat that you are ashamed to wear, and he will probably get a tailor to transform it for thirty or fifty cents into two pairs of excellent trousers for himself.

One has only to watch their story-tellers in the streets to see that the Chinese are natural orators. They are also very clever conjurers. Rich Chinese are very charitable. They distribute free rice and tea in times of exceptional distress; they subscribe to hospitals and to asylums for the blind, for the old, for lepers, and for orphans they even support associations for supplying free coffins to the poor.

THAT WONDERFUL DOG

One evening at a tavern the topic was about dogs. "Oh!" said Juby, "I had a dog and was taking a near cut across some fields when I missed the animal, and on going back I found him staring at a notice-board bearing the words, 'All dogs found here will be shot.' And come he would not."

"Yes, yes, that's good, but what about Johnson's retriever? One night a house caught fire, all was confusion; old Johnson and his wife flew for the children and bundled them out sharp.

Alas! one was left behind, but up jumped the dog, rushed in, and soon reappeared with the child, deposited on the lawn. All were out now, but in rushed the dog again. What a man after no one knew. Presently the noble animal reappeared, scorched all and burnt, with what do you think?"

"Give it up," came from the listeners.

"Why, with the fire-policy wrapped up in a damp towel, gentlemen."

A NEWSPAPER BLUNDER

A year or two ago, Big Ben (the well-known Westminster parliament clock) was fitted with new hands. A reporter in the London office of a Manchester paper saw his chance and wrote: "A well-known character, who has lived in Westminster all his life, and is familiarly known to many Londoners as "Ben," underwent a serious operation this morning. As Westminster Hospital was too full to allow of him having a bed, the operation was carried out by two doctors in the open air, and in the presence of a large crowd. Both of Ben's hands were taken off — successfully and rapidly. A new pair will be provided for him." The sub-editor in Manchester read through the paragraph, and added the headlines: "Operation in the Open Air. Big London Crowd Watches Man's Hands Taken Off. And so it duly appeared in next morning's paper."

Entertaining Up To Date

A new form of entertaining, started by Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, is being taken up by Newport hostesses. It is a dinner and dance, with the dancing between the courses. As soon as one course is finished the orchestra strikes up, and the guests leave their places and begin to dance. The dance finished, another course is served. Eating and dancing go on in this way until the dinner is finished. By the time coffee is served the dinner-ball has lasted two hours.

An Exciting Runaway.

Yesterday morning a team of horses owned by Mr. R. Gibbs, took fright at the C.P.R. station and ran up George street. Many people and rigs had difficulty in getting out of the way. The team was stopped at Nicholls Hospital and but slight damage was caused.

Ordination at St. Peter's.

Yesterday the Rev. Mr. Eagan, Sub-Deacon, of the Archdiocese of Toronto, was ordained Deacon in the St. Peter's Cathedral by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor. At nine o'clock this morning, His Lordship will ordain as priests the Rev. Mr. Eagan, and the Rev. Mr. Staley, Deacon also of the Archdiocese of Toronto.

The Snow Blockade.

The country roads are still in bad shape on account of the snow drifts. Even the city has to do a lot of shovelling in places. Yesterday a road grader drawn by two team of horses ploughed up and down Charlotte and George streets throwing the snow up into high ridges, after which it was drawn away.

Millbrook Power Line.

The following men of the Midland Construction Company are registered at the Munro House: L. H. Bouskill Port Hope; John L. Clarke, W. H. Francy, C. Blake, Arthur Cantin, W. J. Terry, R. Peters, J. Finn, R. H. Wicklow, S. J. Finn, all of Millbrook. These men have been engaged on the construction work of the Seymour Company's power line to Millbrook, and other points south, and are in the city engaged on some local work in connection with the company.

Ice Crop Good.

The intense frost is making plenty of ice, and icemen are naturally pleased. The only question that has to be settled is where pure ice may be obtained. A reader of The Times suggested that taking it from the Little Lake be prohibited. This would be a hardship to icemen, who have their storehouses close by. It has been suggested that the ice be taken from the river above the city, preferably at Water Works Dam. In the meantime The Times will endeavor to have the water tested at both places.

Rev. H. J. Keith to Stay.

Rev. H. J. Keith has declined the call from St. Paul's church, of Port Hope, and will remain pastor of Knox church. This announcement was made at the annual meeting of Knox church on Thursday night. His answer follows the request of a deputation representing the various societies of the church, that he remain with Knox church. Citizens generally will join with his congregation in their success. A subscription of $100 for two consecutive years and $200 from the Board of Management will increase the pastor's stipend by $400. The honor roll of 100 men was inaugurated with 25 signed members. By this means the interest account of about $1000 annually will be met.

OPENING UP OF GRANDE PRAIRIE AND PEACE RIVER DISTRICTS.

Mr. W. H. Elwanger, formerly of Green Mountain, Iowa, but now of Edson, Alta., gave the following interview recently at Winnipeg on his way east for the holidays, and expects to interest and bring back with him a considerable number of his former neighbors to settle in the new country. Mr. Elwanger is particularly enthusiastic over the opening up of the Grande Prairie and Peace River districts for settlement.

The names Grande Prairie and Peace River have become synonymous with prosperity and contentment. They carry the suggestion of ideal surroundings, beauty, fertility, and prosperity. Many new districts have been opened in the great Northwest, but it remained for this particular section of the West to awaken the first comers to that country a true sense of its natural possibilities. For over 200 years the Blackfoot Indians had lived just South of the Peace River, for here they found in ideal proportions wood, water and grass, with shelter in winter from cold—a fact of history. With the annual ...ance of wild fruits and the ... birds of North America who make their habitations there, it is very evident that it is a good country to grow crops and raise live stock. These facts have attracted the attention of those looking for homes from every quarter of the Globe.

It is a truth that this part of the Northwest contains the last great area of free homestead land in North America. There is no land for sale in Grande Prairie or lower Peace River districts, but it is all open for homesteading. Grande Prairie comprises about 3½ million acres of agricultural land of a generally undulating surface dotted with many beautiful lakes, creeks and rivers. It has a natural drainage and belongs to the Great Peace River basin. There is enough timber to give the country the appearance of the older settled parts and relieve the monotony of the bare prairies. The soil is a black loam of silt formation with a chocolate-clay subsoil deepening to a true yellow clay—no alkali. During the seasons of 1910 and 1911 Jas. H. Pettit, Professor of Soil Fertility, University of Illinois, made a careful test of the soils of Grande Prairie, and pronounced them of excellent quality, containing the necessary elements for growing all kinds of grain, and fully demonstrated that it was equal to any Illinois soil.

But the real proof is what are the settlers raising? In conversation with a great number of those who have been there and who live there, one is convinced that there is no question about the ability of the country to support an immense population, for the same crops can be raised as those grown in any other part of Western Canada. Climate and weather are common property, in the north temperature zone. The summer during the growing season is very similar, and everyone knows that Western Canada produces superior yields in quantity and quality, the average yield per acre is higher than any other section of North America. Wheat raised in the North is of better quality. Millers must have Canada's superior wheat to mix with softer kinds from other fields. All the world knows that wheat which took the first prize at the Centennial at Philadelphia in 1876 was grown in the Peace River district, and the wheat that has taken the first prize at the large expositions since then came from the same section. At the Dry Farming Congress held at Colorado Springs, Colo., during the week of October 17th, 1911, Alberta carried off over fifty of the first prizes. The exhibit of Northern Alberta was a revelation even to the expert judges in the display of vegetables open to the world.

Follow the lines of railway development on any late map, and they take a northwesterly course from St. Paul and the head of the Great Lakes toward the Peace River. They follow the great store of natural resources which exist in the northwest portion of North America. Spring opens at about the same time all along this immense line of progress. In Grande Prairie seeding began last Spring, 1911 on April 18th. The first killing frost in the last five years has occurred from the 15th to the 21st of September. Last year 1911 it came September 20th. The mountains west of Grande Prairie are low and broken, which allow the warm winds from the Pacific Ocean to pass over, and has a moderating effect on the winters, which are not so cold on long as points much further south and east.

Tender vegetables that cannot be raised further south mature well in Grande Prairie. Fertile soil, sunshine and rain constitute the elements for creating new wealth producing crops and has the same effect on an acre of land in Grande Prairie as on $200 Illinois or Iowa land. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway is building from the Atlantic to the Pacific has opened a short route to Grande Prairie districts. At Edson one of their principal divisional points west of Winnipeg, the Government has built a wagon road from that point to Grande Prairie, which is over one half shorter than any other route, about 250 miles from the Railway to Prairie City. From Edson the Grand Trunk Pacific have a line to the Brazeau Coal fields on the South and during the Summer of 1911 made surveys from here to Grande Prairie and Peace River country, and it is evident a line will shortly be built from here by that Company. As to the country in general, Hon. Frank Oliver, late Minister of the Interior made a personal inspection of the entire Peace River Valley to know if it was advisable to open that section to settlers. On returning after two months trip he said: "There is a country, whatever may be said as to the possibilities of other sections, there is no question concerning the Peace River district. There are prairies as fine as any in North America, and the district is rich enough in itself to build and support large cities in a very few years." The settlers who are there are all satisfied with the country. In talking with those men and women the one expression is that it is better than they expected to find."

James Morton of Vancouver, after traveling two months through the Grande Prairie and Peace River districts said: "I believe it will become the leading agricultural country of Western Canada on account of having so many natural resources right at hand." He talked with nearly all the settlers and found them more contented than any class of newcomers he had ever been among. It is important to know that the very best class of people are going in there to settle, those with means and experience. This is the one thing that impresses everyone who first comes to Grande Prairie—the splendid class of citizens. Social conditions are progressive. Wherever needed there are churches and schools. The head land office for that district is at Prairie City. The Canadian Bank of Commerce is at Beaver Lodge.

ELECTRIC POWER CO. MAY SELL TO HYDRO-COMMISSION

Negotiations Have Been in Progress in Montreal for Some Time, Between the Two Parties.

The Price Will Probably be Settled by Arbitration—Large Bondholders of the Company are Favorable to a Sale.

THE Hydro-Electric Commission has it is rumored, carried out the proposal made by Hon. Adam Beck while in Peterborough a short time ago, and bought out the Electric Power Company, better known in Peterborough as the Seymour Power Company. A despatch to this effect reached The Times yesterday from a private source.

The Negotiations.

As a result of negotiations, which have been going on for some time and which were continued here yesterday in Montreal, the Electric Power Company, which controls practically all the electric power companies in Central Ontario is likely to sell out to the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission. The price, it was announced this evening, will probably be settled by arbitration. Mr. Cecil B. Smith, after a conference with Hon. Adam Beck in Toronto on Tuesday, was in Montreal to-day conferring with local interests in the Electric Power Company. Among these is the Sun Life Assurance Company, which it is understood, is the largest holder of the $1,000,000 bond issue of the company. The negotiations carried on during the day were reported to be favorable to the conclusion of a sale to the Hydro-Electric Commission, with the price to be fixed by arbitration

The District Interested.

The Electric Power Company, incorporated some four years ago with a capital of $4,000,000 and a bond issue of a like amount, is the only large distributor of electric power in the area lying between Lindsay on the northwest, Oshawa on the south-west and Napanee on the east. It represents an amalgamation of a number of Trent Valley companies, which have been in the electric power business for some years, and it has an monopoly of electric power distribution in a number of prosperous cities and towns like Oshawa, Bowmanville, Cobourg, Peterborough Lindsay, Belleville, Trenton, Napanee Brighton, Campbellford, Colborne, and Tweed. Arrangements were under way to extend its operations to Kingston. It has about 16,000 h.p. developed already about 15,000 in process of development, and could develop up to 60,000. Its rates are low and the districts the company supplies are well satisfied with their service. The company is prosperous and the initiative in the present deal has come from the Hydro-Electric Commission, which desires to extend its field into Central Ontario, where the Electric Power Company is strongly entrenched. It was stated by one of those interested in the company that the company had no desire to sell, but did not wish to stand in the way of the Hydro-Electric Commission's plans of extension. For that reason a friendly arrangement would probably be made for the company to sell its holdings, with the price to be left to arbitration.

THE "MOTU PROPRIO"

It is to be hoped that the opinion attributed to Roman Catholic ecclesiastical authorities as to the non-promulgation of the recent "Motu Proprio" decree in Canada is well founded, says The Mail and Empire. It would be at variance with the traditions of British freedom were Roman Catholic subjects of the King restrained by threat of excommunication from bringing Roman Catholic clergy and church dignitaries into court whenever their presence there is deemed to be in the interests of justice. "Equality before "the law" is the great pillar on which British civil right is founded. Before the civil power ecclesiastics are on the same footing as kings and princes and commoners. Litigation affecting Roman Catholic clerics is so rare, and so seldom are they called into court, that there cannot even be expediency in declaring the decree to be in effect here.

ATTAGK CREED IN LISBON

Roman Catholic Prelate Has Hard Time of it

THREATEN ALL CLERGY

It Would Appear That the Church of Rome Is No Longer Respected in Catholic Countries—Clergy May all be Expelled from the Country.

London, Jan. 12. HINGS apparently are going from bad to worse in the Catholic countries of Europe. France is no longer the child and tool of Rome, and Spain is rapidly drifting away from Papacy. In Portugal, following the punishment of the Patriarch of Lisbon, Mgr. Anthony Mendes Bello, who was ordered expelled for two years on December 28, by the Portuguese government, all the bishops have proclaimed their independence of the government. The Minister of Justice, in reply to a communication from them announcing their decision, declared that if they persisted in their refusal to recognize the civil authorities they would all be expelled from Portugal. At the same time he will hold them responsible for any disturbances.

The expulsion of the Patriarch of Lisbon caused disturbances in the capital to-day. More than ten thousand persons proceeded to the patriarchate to offer their condolences to the departing prelate. The extreme republicans on the meantime organized a band of four thousand manifestants who marched to the patriarchate and rushed upon the Catholics assembled there, shouting, "Down with the monarchists! Death to the clergy!" The Catholics responded with cheers for the Pope, for Dom Manuel and for Dom Miguel as well as for the monarchy.

The republicans succeeded in breaking through the lines of police and soldiers surrounding the patriarchate which they invaded, forcing the clergy to flee for safety.

THEY LIKE THE CANADIAN WEST

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Bradburn Return From Edmonton On a Visit

Is a Country of Opportunity for the Young Men of Ontario—Any Man Who is Sober and Industrious Cannot Fail to Do Well There.

LL who go to the West are probably not successful, probably because they are not content to accept employment at whatever they can get to do, and grow up with the country. Those who settle down and go to work with a fixed purpose to succeed invariably make good. Mr. Robert Bradburn, who is probably known to 75 per cent. of the people of Peterborough, although in comfortable circumstances, decided to take up his residence in Edmonton, Alta., and left for that city about three years ago. His eldest son, William G., had persuaded his parents to make this move, and they have no reason to regret, doing so. Mr. Will Bradburn had embarked in the stationery business some years previously in the Western City, and his trade developed so rapidly that he required his father's help. Mr. and Mrs. Bradburn, therefore, became residents of the western city, which is the capital of Alberta Province.

A few days ago Mr. Will Bradburn had to make a business trip to Ottawa, Montreal and New York and he came to Peterborough a few days ago, accompanied by his wife and two little boys as well as his parents. They are now the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Wood.

Yesterday, Mr. Robert Bradburn said The Times a visit and he certainly looks as if the west agreed with him. He thinks there is no place like Western Canada, especially for a young man.

They had given no advance notice to either of their daughters, Mrs. Dr. Wood and Mrs. Hall, of the proposed visit, and when they rang Mrs. Wood's door bell on their arrival here, and were recognized by that lady there was "something doing." Mrs. Hall was at once notified by phone, and Mr. Bradburn says that the welcome they received from their two daughters was alone worth many times the sum expended in making the journey.

Mr. W. C. Bradburn is now on his trip east, and on his return to Peterborough, his father will accompany him to the West. The rest of the family will remain some weeks before going home.

ROMAN CATHOLIC PRIEST TURNS TO PROTESTANTISM

Rev. Patrick Morgan Will Begin a Series of Meetings in Park Street Church, Commencing To-morrow.

He Will Treat on Subjects Pertaining to the Church of Rome and Protestantism—Will Also Speak on Evenings of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday—The Public Are Invited.

A treat is in store for the people of Peterborough in the visit of Rev. Patrick Morgan, ex-priest of the Roman Catholic Church, now a Protestant, who will deliver a series of addresses in Park street Baptist church, commencing to-morrow.

The months of January and February are the months in which offerings are taken in the Peterborough Associations for the work of evangelization among the French Roman Catholics of Quebec, which the Baptists have carried on now for seventy-five years.

It is hoped Mr. Morgan's coming will stir up the church of Christ to a deeper sense of her duty in this regard. The subjects which will be discussed by Mr. Morgan, who knows whereof he speaks, are as follows:—

Sunday evening, in Park street Baptist church, 7 p.m. Subject: "What is Protestantism?" Male choir will sing.

Monday, January 15th, at 8 p.m.,

[illegible] Why I Left the Church of Rome.

The Rev. Patrick Morgan is also the editor of a periodical known as the "Converter," published in Ottawa and all who have read it can see the keen and clear intelligence of its noble editor.

All will be made welcome at the meetings, while anyone will be at liberty to ask Mr. Morgan why he left the Church of his fathers for the Protestant faith.

It is sincerely hoped that all will get a clearer understanding of the religious differences that exists between the religion of Rome and Protestantism, and that good will result therefrom to all who attend.

The subjects are:

Sunday, January 14th, in the Park street Baptist church, 11 a.m. Subject: "Our Attitude Towards the Roman Catholics."

Sunday afternoon in Sons of England Hall, at 3:30 p.m. Subject: "Why Romanism Ruins a Country."

This will be a special meeting for men only, to which all men are invited. Mr. Morgan will at this meeting outline four things:

1. The sacerdotal system of Rome.
2. The intellectual bondage of Rome.
3. The effect of Rome's system of truth.
4. The position claimed by, and conceded to the Pope.

RUSHED FROM BURNING HOUSES IN NIGHT ROBES

THRILLING SCENES AT THE CONFLAGRATION IN HALIFAX SEVERAL BUILDINGS WIPED OUT.

Fire in the Heart of the Business District, Driven by a High Wind, Threatens Entire City.

Halifax, Jan. 12.—Halifax was visited by one of the greatest conflagrations in its history this morning, half a block in the business part of the city being destroyed by fire. After seven hours hard fighting the fire was under control, though the Acadian Recorder office was then threatened and firemen are using their utmost efforts to save it, and its brick walls stayed the progress of the flames.

Fanned by a strong northerly wind the fire broke out in the building occupied by W. S. Munnis, clothier, on Barrington street, at one o'clock, and persons who had passed a few minutes before had not noticed any fire, but it suddenly blazed forth illuminating the sky and with lightning-like rapidity the fire which originated from some unknown cause in the adjoining buildings, and the whole block surrounded by Barrington, Granville and Prince streets was soon endangered.

ESCAPED FROM BUILDINGS.

So quickly did the flames spread that people residing in the nearby buildings escaped with little or no clothing aside from their night garments.

From the Munnis building the fire spread to the Herald Building and this morning one of the finest office buildings in Halifax is nothing but a mass of ice-coated smouldering ruins.

The first duty of the early arrivals at the conflagration was to save the people in adjoining buildings.

Among the heaviest losers as the Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden, whose large and valuable law library was in the office of Kaulbach and Power. This library was one of the best of its kind in Canada and contained books that cannot be replaced. It was valued at $10,000.

NAVAL BATTLE RESULTS IN VICTORY FOR ITALIAN FLEET

FIRE OF MODERN GUNS SHATTER TURKISH SHIPS—FOUGHT GALLANTLY BUT HOPELESSLY.

Italian Cruisers Sweep Down on the Vessels Carrying Contraband of War to Turkish Army.

Rome, Jan. 12.—A severe naval action occurred on January 7th, in the Red Sea when seven Turkish gunboats and an armed yacht were destroyed by Italian warships.

The division of Italian cruisers which had been scouring the coast of the Red Sea in search of Turkish war vessels and ships conveying contraband destined for the Turkish garrisons in the Yemen Province in Arabia encountered the flotilla of Turkish gunboats and at once opened fire.

The Turks replied but their feeble armament succumbed to the superior weapons of the Italian warships. The fight was stiff, but soon ended in the victory for the Italians.

PUSH PETERBOROUGH

Its Central Situation, Shipping Facilities and Manufacturing Sites.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—A good reputation of a city should be based on facts that will sustain it. Peterborough's good reputation has a solid basis of facts.

This city is admirably adapted for manufacturing and consequently for continued growth. It is centrally situated, and this is an advantage. It is between the two great commercial centres, Montreal and Toronto, and these markets are readily reached. Both the great railways pass through the city, and the Grand Trunk branches out in four directions. Besides being on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, it is on that railway's new line to the Georgian Bay, so that Peterborough is on the direct route of both railways to the great markets of the northwest. It has direct railway connection with all parts of the continent, and its situation makes it an advantageous point from which to ship to any part of Canada.

Peterborough is a good point at which to secure cars for shipping when they are wanted—something that at times gives trouble in other places. The large quantities of raw material brought in, as for instance to the Quaker Oats Mills, means that a number of cars are brought here every day, and are available for outgoing shipping. Then the grain routes through Peterborough, leads to empty cars passing through to the west for which the railways are glad to get freight.

With two express companies doing business here, the facilities for quick despatch are excellent, and advantageous for shipping articles for which rapid transit is required.

The Trent waterway is navigable for 170 miles. The work required to complete it to Lake Ontario is all under contract, and when that work is completed, there will be water communication with all ports by way of the Bay of Quinte. This will be

ALBERTA TO ADOPT LAND TAX SAYS PREMIER

Winnipeg, Jan. 12.—That a bill has now been introduced in the Alberta legislature placing all towns, cities and municipalities under the land tax system was the important statement made by Premier Sifton, of Alberta, in an interview yesterday in which he strongly favored land taxation and told of its success in that province.

"This bill will be passed before the close of the present session," said Premier Sifton. "It is in force in a great number of centers at present, and is working very well. The cities will all be on the same basis in a short time. They all have the power to adopt the land tax and are generally doing it. Edmonton, however, also has a business tax. Calgary has the right to assess land at its full value and improvements at 50 per cent. In five years absolute land taxation will be in force. Medicine Hat is in nearly the same position as Calgary. Women will also be given equal rights with men in municipal matters."

Premier Sifton also told of the success of the municipal telephone system and intimated that a hydro-electric commission would be formed when Alberta obtained control of its natural resources from the Dominion

OPENING UP OF GRANDE PRAIRIE AND PEACE RIVER DISTRICTS.

Mr. W. H. Ellwanger, formerly of Green Mountain, Iowa, but now of Edson, Alta., gave the following interview recently at Winnipeg on his way east for the holidays, and expects to interest and bring back with him a considerable number of his former neighbors to settle in the new country. Mr. Ellwanger is particularly enthusiastic over the opening up of the Grande Prairie and Peace River districts for settlement.

The names Grande Prairie and Peace River have become synonymous with prosperity and contentment. They carry the suggestion of ideal surroundings, beauty, fertility, and prosperity. Many new districts have been opened in the great Northwest, but it remained for this particular section of the West to awaken in the first comers to that country a true sense of its natural possibilities. For over 200 years the Blackfoot Indians had lived just South of the Peace River, for here they found in ideal proportions wood, water and grass, with shelter in winter from storms—a fact of history. With the abundance of wild fruits and the common birds of North America who make their habitations there, it is very evident that it is a good country to grow crops and raise live stock. These facts have attracted the attention of those looking for homes from every quarter of the Globe.

It is a truth that this part of the Northwest contains the last great area of free homestead land in North America. There is no land for sale in Grande Prairie or lower Peace River districts, but it is all open for homesteading. Grande Prairie comprises about 3½ million acres of agricultural land of a generally undulating surface dotted with many beautiful lakes, creeks and rivers. It has a natural drainage and belongs to the Great Peace River basin. There is enough timber to give the country the appearance of the older settled parts and relieve the monotony of the bare prairies. The soil is a black loam of silt formation with a chocolate-clay subsoil deepening to a true yellow clay—no alkali. During the seasons of 1910 and 1911 Jas. H. Pettit, Professor of Soil Fertility, University of Illinois, made a careful test of the soils of Grande Prairie, and pronounced them of excellent quality, containing the necessary elements for growing all kinds of grain, and fully demonstrated that it was equal to any Illinois soil.

But the real proof is what are the settlers raising? In conversation with a great number of those who have been there and who live there, one is convinced that there is no question about the ability of the country to support an immense population, for the same crops can be raised that are grown in any other part of Western Canada. Climate and weather are common property, in the north temperature zone. The climate during the growing season is very similar, and everyone knows that Western Canada produces superior fields in quantity and quality, the average yield per acre is higher than in any other section of North America. Wheat raised in the North is of better quality. Millers must have Canada's superior wheat to mix with other kinds from other fields. All the world knows that wheat which took the first prize at the Centennial at Philadelphia in 1876 was grown in the Peace River district, and the wheat that has taken the first prize at the large expositions since then came from the same section. At the Dry Farming Congress held at Colorado Springs, Colo., during the week of October 17th, 1911, Alberta carried off over fifty of the first prizes. The exhibit of Northern Alberta was a revelation even to the expert judges in the display of vegetables open to the world.

Follow the lines of railway development on any late map, and they take a northwesterly course from St. Paul and the head of the Great Lakes toward the Peace River. They follow the great store of natural resources, which exist in the northwest portion of North America. Spring opens at about the same time all along this immense line of progress. In Grande Prairie seeding began last Spring 1911 on April 18th. The first killing frost in the last five years has occurred from the 18th to the 26th of September. Last year 1911 it came September 20th. The mountains west of Grande Prairie are low and broken, which allow the warm winds from the Pacific Ocean to pass over, and has a moderating effect on the winters, which are not so cold or long as points much further south and east.

Tender vegetables that cannot be raised further south mature well in Grande Prairie. Fertile soil, sunshine and rain constitute the elements for creating new wealth producing crops and has the same effect on an acre of land in Grande Prairie as on $200 Illinois or Iowa land. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway is building from the Atlantic to the Pacific has opened a short route to Grande Prairie districts. At Edson one of their principal divisional points west of Winnipeg, the Government has built a wagon road from that point to Grande Prairie, which is over one half shorter than any other route, about 250 miles from the Railway to Prairie City. From Edson the Grand Trunk Pacific have a line to the Brazean Coal fields on the South and during the Summer of 1911 made surveys from here to Grande Prairie and Peace River country, and it is evident a line will shortly be built from here by that Company. As to the country in general, Hon. Frank Oliver, late Minister of the Interior made a personal inspection of the entire Peace River Valley to know if it was advisable to open that section to settlers. On returning after two months trip he said: "There is a country, whatever may be said as to the possibilities of other sections, there is no question concerning the Peace River district. There are prairies as fine as any in North America, and the district is rich enough in itself to build and support large cities in a very few years." The settlers who are there are all satisfied with the country. In talking with those men and women the one expression is that it is better than they expected to find."

James Morton of Vancouver, after traveling two months through the Grande Prairie and Peace River districts said: "I believe it will become the leading agricultural country of Western Canada on account of having so many natural resources right at hand." He talked with nearly all the settlers and found them more contented than any class of newcomers he had ever been among. It is important to know that the very best class of people are going in there to settle, those with means and experience. This is the one thing that impresses everyone who first comes to Grande Prairie — the splendid class of citizens. Social conditions are progressive. Wherever needed there are churches and Schools. The head land office for that district is at Prairie City. The Canadian Bank of Commerce is at Beaver Lodge.

Millbrook Power Line.

The following men of the Midland Construction Company are registered at the Munro House: L. H. Bouskill Port Hope; John L. Clarke, W. H. Franey, C. Blake, Arthur Cantin, W. J. Terry, R. Peters, J. Finn, R. H. Wicklow, S. J. Finn, all of Millbrook These men have been engaged on the construction work of the Seymour Company's power line to Millbrook, and other points south, and are in the city engaged on some local work in connection with the company.

Ice Crop Good.

The intense frost is making plenty of ice, and icemen are naturally pleased. The only question that has to be settled is where pure ice may be obtained. A reader of The Times suggested that taking it from the Little Lake be prohibited. This would be a hardship to icemen, who have their storehouses close by. It has been suggested that the ice be taken from the river above the city, preferably at Water Works Dam. In the meantime The Times will endeavor to have the water tested at both places.

Rev. H. J. Keith to Stay.

Rev. H. J. Keith has declined the call from St. Paul's church, of Port Hope, and will remain pastor of Knox church. This announcement was made at the annual meeting of Knox church on Thursday night. His answer follows the request of a deputation representing the various societies of the church, that he remain with Knox church. Citizens generally will join with his congregation in their success. A subscription of $100 for two consecutive years and $200 from the Board of Management will increase the pastor's stipend by $300. The honor roll of 100 men was inaugurated with 25 signed members. By this means the interest account of about $1000 annually will be met.

40 BELOW AT WINNIPEG

At Many Remote Points the Temperature is Down to Fifty Below Zero.

Winnipeg, Jan. 11.—Western Canada is in the grip of the worst cold snap in years. It was 42 below in Winnipeg to-day and 50 at many remote points in the West. All trains are from ten to 24 hours late.

The severe cold has continued for three weeks past.

65 BELOW AT PEACE RIVER.

Here is a woman who speaks from personal knowledge and long experience, viz., Mrs. P. H. Brogan, of Wilson, Pa., who says, "I know from experience that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is far superior to any other. For croup there is nothing that ex-

PARLIAMENTARY PERQUISITES

Members of U. S. Congress Usually Travel Cheaply and Consequently Save Many Cents Per Mile on Allowance.

For each session of the U. S. Congress each member is allowed twenty cents a mile for each mile going and coming between his home and Washington. As railroad fares these times run about two cents a mile, and as the Hon. Jasper on his first trip generally spurns the Pullman as being fit only for the predatory and plutocratic rich, and rides in the day coach with the great common people, it will be seen that on this mileage basis alone he clears up a considerable extent, especially if he chances to live a long distance from Washington. He gets twenty cents a mile. Every time eight telegraph poles go flittering by there are twenty cents coming in and only about two and a half cents going out. Hers, of course, distance counts.

Mileage amounts to a most impressive sum in the case of Prince Cupid, the chubby delegate from the Hawaiian Islands, who comes all the way from Honolulu, and to practically nothing at all in the lamentable case of Representative Charles Creighton Carlin, who resides in Alexandria, right across the river from the district. One or two of the Maryland members, who live only a short distance away, also suffer distressingly in this regard, and are objects of commiseration among their fellows.

Hardly Encouraging.

He was fresh up from the country, and if there was a ruling passion in his life it was politeness — if such a rare accomplishment can be called a passion.

All the days of his two-and-twenty years had been spent in imbibing the lesson that politeness is irresistible, that as a business asset its value is incalculable. He'd had politeness for breakfast, politeness for dinner, for tea, and for supper. Spring, summer, autumn, and winter it had been the same.

And now he was in London, looking for a job.

But, alas! he could find no job. Tired and despondent he tramped along.

Then suddenly he smiled. Surely if they only knew how polite he was he would be given a job at once.

The idea was immediately acted upon.

An affluent-looking old gentleman drew near. Up went a hand, and off into the gutter flew the old gent's hat.

Then began an exposition of the art of politeness. Picking up the hat he had so unceremoniously knocked off, the "polite" one carefully dusted and replaced it, and in a thousand different ways sought to render himself agreeable not forgetting to throw out hints that he desired a job.

And he succeeded. He got a job. He is at it still. He is in gaol.

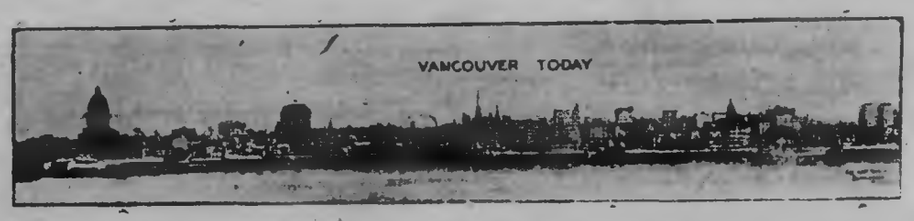
100,000 SHARES AT $1.00

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has been organized recently with an authorized capital of $500,000, to do a general building, real estate, and insurance business, and is actively engaged in Vancouver and Victoria—two most promising fields. The profits from building houses for cash and selling on instalments is well known, and will be one of the principal channels from which profits will be derived. BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its own building department and architect, and does its own construction. In addition to building houses, BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its real estate department, where it carries on a general real estate business, discounting agreements of Sale, subdividing and transacting a general insurance business.

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS LIMITED, is a new concern, having been in business less than two months in Vancouver, but is becoming well known as the Company without any promotion shares and with a strong board of directors, made up of well-known Vancouver and Victoria business men.

Shareholders may conservatively look for a 10 per cent dividend the first year, increasing thereafter and a steady advance in the value of their shares caused by the substantial reserve it will always be the policy of the directors to build up.

Companies run on similar lines, notably the Los Angeles Investment Company and "Home Builders," both of Los Angeles, have proved phenominally successful, the former, which has been in business some sixteen years, having accumulated assets of over $6,000,000, and paying 28 per cent. dividends; and the latter, which started business three years ago, with only $1,250 capital, has assets to-day of over $1,089,000, a surplus of over $308,000, is paying 17 per cent. dividends, and its $1.00 shares are selling at $2.30.



FIRST ISSUE OF SHARES

Duel Up To Date

A contest in the air between rival aviators for a girl's hand was the feature of a one-day aviation meet arranged for at Lima, Ohio. Two of the aviators, Jack Bachelor and Bert Chambers, had been laying siege to the heart of Miss Dorothy Dale, of Tiffin, Ohio. Miss Dale refused to choose between them, and in a recent meet in that city made a trip into the clouds with both. She promised to make her decision, and intimated that she would accept the one that made the highest altitude record during the day.

Advertisement by Water.

An ingenious machine has just been put on the Parisian market. According to details given in "La Publicite" the machine prints an announcement on the ground in water, which it sprays upon the soil in a fine shower. The letters or signs will last from twenty to thirty minutes, until the evaporation of the water is complete, and as the spray of water also serves the welcome purpose of laying the dust, the invention will doubtless be accorded a heartier welcome than the majority of advertising devices of this nature receive.

"Silver Greyhounds."

The King's messengers are termed "Silver Greyhounds," because their badge of office consists of a silver greyhound surmounted by an Imperial crown attached to a red ribbon. The badge is always carried by a King's messenger, and in the times of war becomes part of his passport from one country to another. The salary of a King's messenger ranges from $1250 to $2000 a year. King's messengers, it might be mentioned, are nearly always Army men, who leave their regiments to undertake the business of carrying the King's official messages to all parts of Europe.

Highest on Earth

The Loa Bridge in the Chilian Andes is the highest bridge in the world. This wonderful construction four hundred feet high, eight hundred feet long, and stands ten thousand feet above sea-level. It crosses a great ravine some three hundred miles from Antofagasta, on the railway running from that port into Bolivia. This line is also of interest from the fact that it is the highest railway in the world, climbing at one point up to over sixteen thousand six hundred feet above sea-level.

THE CHINAMAN

What a Late Chaplain to the Forces at Hong-Kong Thinks of the Chinese.

Napoleon said that when China was moved the face of Europe would be changed. Yet, as the Chinese are naturally peaceful, we think that the Yellow Peril is a commercial one. The peril is that China will manufacture things cheaper than Europeans can and eventually we must lose the trade of the Far East. How can we, with our high standard of comfort, strikes, and unrest generally, compete with the Chinese, combining, as they do, the active industry of the most civilized people with the passive patience of the North American Indian? Far more than we do the Chinese believe in the power of character and intellect. With this, rather than with armies and navies, they will conquer.

A Chinese is nearly always a person of resource. A young man was accused of knocking out his father's teeth, and was in danger of being put to death. A friend visited him and whispered in his ear, "It's a bad case."

Suddenly seizing the ear between his teeth, he gave it a severe bite.

"What do you mean?" asked the young man, raising his fist.

"I mean," was the answer, "that you are saved; you have only to show the marks of my teeth and say that they were made by your father, whose teeth, being shaky, dropped out."

Business Before Sentiment.

Two small things impress foreigners with the skill of the Chinese. One is the way they carve ivory balls, one within the other, to the number of seven or eight; and the other the inscription of minute characters inside agate or crysta snuff-bottles.

A Chinaman always appears to be looking round the corners of his eyes at you, and to have a meaning that you cannot get at. He gives you the impression that somebody, when he was born, sat on his nose, and that he has been lamenting the calamity ever since. And yet, though he never lays aside this expression of resigned wretchedness, the average Chinese is not at all more miserable than the average Britisher.

Speaking of Britishers, we may say that they and Chinamen have much in common. Both have a great capacity for making and enjoying money. Both have business aptitude and integrity, do their work well, and appreciate a good dinner. Equally with Englishmen, Celestials have common sense and respect for law, and do not allow sentiment to interfere with business. The Chinese are the British of the Far East, and the Japanese are the French.

Fond of Sport.

The Chinese are not less conservative than the English. They dread any change that may cause trouble or disorder, and this is why they have put up so long with their wretched government. "Better be a dog in peace," they say, "than a man in anarchy." The "dog in peace" has gone, thank God, for ever; let us hope that the Chinese will for ever remain in anarchy.

Like the British, also, the Chinese are fond of sport, though their idea of sport is peculiar. They train quails, thrushes, and even fish to fight, and they bet on these, and on almost every other event.

The Chinese contrivances for the management and capture of beast, bird, and fish are as ingenious as they are simple. If, for instance, a donkey disturbs by braying in the night, a big stone is tied to his tail, and this humiliates him into silence.

When a Chinaman wishes to catch wild ducks he mixes an intoxicating spirit made of rice with corn and leaves the mixture for the birds. They become intoxicated, and are taken in their cups, so to speak. Another way is to put a gourd on his head and swim gently among the ducks. They are not frightened, because they only see the gourd and are accustomed to that, and the artful John pulls one duck after another by the legs into a bag attached to him. Everyone knows that John Chinaman trains cormorants to catch fish, not for themselves, but for him.

After cold water, there is nothing the Chinese so much fear as ridicule and disgrace, or the "loss of face." A magistrate who was to be beheaded asked that, as a special favour, he might wear his robes of office in order to save his face!

The Chinese are great at organizing. The trade guilds, which are established in every town are quite as powerful as our trade unions. Even beggars and thieves have guilds. Every morning the king of the beggars sends a detachment of his sackcloth-clad or nearly uncled subjects to collect poor-rates in the districts assigned to them. Owners of property pay so much a year to "the honourable guild of thieves" in order not to be robbed.

SHAM BATTLE SHAMS

The military manoeuvres were in a muddle. The "Purples" were supposed to be invading the territory of the "Greens," but why they were or what they were they didn't exactly know.

A large detachment of the 'Purples' began to cross the river by a wooden bridge to attack a small detachment of 'Greens.'

"Hi!" roared the 'Greens.' "Hi! You mustn't cross here! Can't you see the notice? This bridge is supposed to be destroyed."

"H'm! Is it?" responded the captain of the 'Purples,' grimly. "Well, then, we're supposed to be swimming across."

Costly Panama Hats

Even in modern times there have been men's hats which cost far more than anything worn by the ladies. That, for instance, presented to General Grant when he was in Mexico cost $1500, and justly claims to be the finest sombrero ever made. The admirers of Mr. Steward, a member of President Lincoln's Cabinet, too, paid $1000 for the Panama with which they presented him.

An "Ear Telephone."

Differing from the various kinds of instruments which are used to aid persons of defective hearing, a new long distance hearing apparatus has recently been invented to assist the hearing of normal persons in much the same way that a telescope does the eye; that is, it enables one to distinguish sounds through a greater distance, besides amplifying those which would ordinarily be detected by the unaided ears. For this reason it has been facetiously called the "ear telescope."

FIFTEEN YEARS PAYING OFF

Loan Shark Extorts $500 On Note of One-Twentieth of That Sum.

Chicago. — Fifteen years ago Mrs. John Murphy borrowed $25 from a loan shark to settle a debt that her boy had incurred secretly, contrary to his father's command. The note has just been cancelled, through the intervention of the Chicago Legal Aid Society.

Since the [illegible] loan shark has been spurring along the note, Mrs. Murphy has paid on it more than $500 — 20 times the original loan. She paid interest at the rate of 10 per cent per month, 120 per cent per year. Whenever she got the note nearly paid off the shark would bully her into a renewal. She did this many times — signing the new notes with her mark, for she can neither read nor write.

Finally the loan shark died and his son came to collect. Less circumspect than his father, he came when the son, John Murphy, jr., was at home. The latter heard the collector bullying his mother about a debt that he had thought settled a decade or more ago. He chased the man from the house.

The legal aid society did the rest.

IN THE LIMELIGHT

James Whitcomb Riley, the famous Indiana poet, has written his last poem. The paralytic stroke which he had two years ago has gone to his right hand, making it helpless. Riley says that poetry can never be written except with a pen in hand, not real poetry, he means, and for that reason refused to dictate a poem when asked to. It is learned that the noted bard hasn't long to live though it is hoped by all who know him personally and by reputation that the sweet tongued master of letters will yet give at least one other poem to the world.

Grandfather Billings smiled covertly when Billings junior wondered where Billings third, aged seven, got his "trickiness." "If I didn't keep my eyes open," said Billings junior, hotly, "Billy would outwit me every time."

"This morning," he continued, "I promised him a whipping to-night. When the event came off just now he never flinched or yelled. 'Pluck like and simple!' said I to myself, mighty proud, for I wasn't sparing him in the least. But that wasn't it at all," he concluded, in disgust. "The young rascal had on three pairs of drawers."

"As I remember it," observed Grandfather Billings, reflectively, "you used to insert a small geography as a 'good sound one' [illegible]

FRIDAY SUPERSTITION.

King Edward Dreaded Having His Mattress Turned That Day.

A strange story of the late King Edward is told by M. Xavier Paoli, the famous commissare of the Paris detective force, who has guarded so many royalties during their journeyings in Europe, in his book entitled "My Royal Clients." It appears that one of the chief duties of Hawkins, King Edward's second valet, was to make the bed.

"He was better acquainted than anyone with the King's habits and tastes; he knew, for instance, that His Majesty's mattress must never be turned on a Friday. This was a curious superstition of the King's, and it was the only one I ever knew him to cherish, and he made no secret of it." It was curious that he died on a Friday, and that "the doctors, forgetting his expressed wishes amid the grave cares occasioned by the sudden altercation for the worse in his condition, ordered his mattress to be turned, hoping that this would give him a little rest. A few minutes before midnight he drew his last breath."

Very amusing, by the way, are M. Paoli's recollections of another royal visitor to Paris—Sisowath, King of Cambodia, who came attended by a huge suite of sons, daughters, Ministers, favorites, chamberlains, and a troupe of twenty dancing-girls, and who flew into a great rage because his suite was seasick.

"I forbid you to be sick," he shouted to them. "These are my orders. Am I king, or am I not?"

The King's baggage included 200 sacks of coal, which the Cambodians insisted on landing, fearing they should find none in France. The King was extremely polite, and shook hands with everyone, including all the flunkeys who lined the staircase of the Marseilles Prefecture on his arrival. Even to this eccentric sovereign, as to all others, M. Paoli made himself agreeable, and he writes:

"When at length the hour of parting had struck, good King Sisowath, greatly moved, called me to his side. 'Here,' said he; 'present for you.' And he handed me a parcel done up in a pink silk handkerchief. As soon as I was on shore I hastened to open it. To my great confusion is contained a splendid bampot made of cloth of gold. The King of Cambodia had presented me with his state breeches!"

Outmanoeuvred Them.

There is a good story, which concerns the days when Sir George Newnes was wooing the Newmarket constituency as a Parliamentary candidate. A few hours before one of the meetings, which was being held in a tent, the information reached him that a gang of the enemy were coming to the meeting to upset the platform. The gang with their lady friends, who had been invited to see the fun, duly appeared on the scene, and were politely invited to mount on the platform, and, as space was limited, the ladies received a passing invitation to take seats on the platform.

After a few ineffectual protests the blushing maidens accepted the invitation, and thus the gang were compelled to sit listening with unwilling ears to the political gospel of their opponents, while above them in the midst of the enemy's camp their sweethearts sat blushing and giggling.

And when towards the end of the meeting Mr. Newnes rose and told the whole story, told it with many a word of admiration for the young men who, for the sake of the ladies they loved, were now abstaining from deeds of valour, and when in an eloquent peroration he wished all the young Tory couples very happy married lives, the audience nearly sent the tent flying with their shouts of laughter.

BOILED SNAKE—ONE.

Reptiles Though Repugnant to European Tastes are Considered in Many Climes as Dainty Dishes.

People in general have an instinctive abhorrence of reptiles, yet in many parts of the world it is a "cut" from the alligator, not from the joint. The waiter may deliver his order of "Boiled Snake—One."

A peculiarly dainty and nourishing dish is made with the iguana, the flesh of which is as white as that of a chicken and just as palatable, though the reptile's outward appearance with its scaly, blackspotted, green coat, is more repulsive than either crocodile or alligator. To the inhabitants of the Bahamas and the other islands in the West Indies, the iguana affords a much valued source of food. They hunt them down by means of dogs, their mouths muzzled in order to prevent them using their teeth and damaging the reptile, then eat them alive, or kill, salt and barrel them for home consumption. The flesh of the reptile is usually served up boiled, together with a dish of clarified iguana fat, into which the meat is dipped as it is eaten. The eggs of the iguana also are much relished, and are like hens' eggs in flavour, but wholly filled with yolk, and do not become hard in boiling.

Crocodile flesh is publicly sold in the meat markets of Senuaar in Africa, and in Siam you see their carcases hung up for sale like sheep's in the butcher's shop. Both alligator and crocodile eggs are much prized by certain nations. The second is considered to be a dainty in Siam, while the natives of Madagascar are particularly fond of the first.

LONDON'S LORD MAYOR

London. — London's lord mayor, Sir Thomas Crosby, is the first person to be thus honored, and, too, he is one of the oldest lord mayors London ever had, having just celebrated his 81st birthday. The lord mayor has nothing to do but wear the robes of his office upon state occasions and hand the municipal key over to distinguished visitors occasionally. Sir Thomas is a spry old man, and it is expected that he will handle the robes and key as deftly as his youthful predecessors did.

INTENTIONS OF GREAT BRITAIN

Our Great Nation Must Not Be Embroiled by Actions of Any Individual, Says British Foreign Secretary.

(Publishers Press News Service.)

London. — Referring to the Persian question during a discussion of foreign affairs in the House of Commons, the foreign secretary, Sir Edward Grey, said that the Anglo-Russian agreement was not intended to impair the independence and integrity of Persia. A declaration to that effect had been made to the Persian Government, but he added, Great Britain was not undertaking any action to protect the integrity of Persia.

The Russian Government, continued the Foreign Secretary, had demanded that Mr. Shuster should be withdrawn. The British Government had said that it did not object to that demand, Mr. Shuster's intentions in appointing British officials in Northern Persia were good, but the spirit and intention of the Anglo-Russian agreement could not be permitted to be upset, and two great nations embroiled by the action of any individual no matter how good the intentions were.

After what had happened he agreed with Russia's demand that the consent of the British and Russian legations should be obtained for the appointments of foreign advisers to Persia.

In conclusion, Sir Edward said that as Persia was unable to pay any indemnity he hoped Russia would be induced not to press that demand.

Philip Edward Morrell, Liberal, said that a poorer excuse for taking away the independence of Persia than that advanced in the case of Mr. Shuster had never been put forward in the House of Commons. The exact crime committed by Shuster, said Mr. Morrell, was that he did not call at the Russian legation as often as he ought to.

A Frenzied Population

The Teheran correspondent of the Times says that a grave situation has arisen at Shiraz, capital of the province of Fars. The chief mollah, Mirza Ibrahim, has stirred popular fanticism against the British. He has declared that the imperial bank notes are unclean and as a result they are being presented at the bank wholesale for payment, while the shopkeepers refuse to sell even the simplest article to the Indian troops. The leaders of the religious bodies are urgent in their resistance to Russia and they are preaching a holy war. The Cabinet refuses to resign and it is difficult to see how Russia can obtain other than a poor victory against the frenzied population in their present state of mind.

THREE MILLION MATCHES

Fifteen Hundred Billion is the Number of Matches Used Annually by the Entire World for Smoking.

It has been estimated that, for each minute of time, the civilised nations of the world strike three million matches. This is said to be the average for every minute of the twenty-four hours of the day. Fifteen hundred billion is the number for the entire year.

The importance of the industry which turns out the little splinters of wood tipped with sulphur or some other material ignited by friction, is only recognised when the average smoker tries to contemplate his predicament if he had to go back to the time when he had to coax a spark from a tinder-box. Small and insignificant as it is, the match demands as much attention in the choice of the wood involved in its manufacture as any other forest product. Only the choicest portions of the best trees are suitable. Sapwood, knotty or cross-grained timber will not do. Instead of being a by-product, the little match is turned out at hundreds of mills over the country where the by-products are bulky objects like doors, sashes, shingles, siding, posts, and cord-woods. The pines, linden, aspen, white cedar, poplar, birch and willow are the most suitable match timbers.

IT IS VERY STRANGE

How the Men Who Know All — Who Heard That Years Ago — Can Be Taken Down.

Most of us have met, at some time or other, that objectionable individual who "has heard that years ago," and knows everything under the sun worth knowing.

When next you run up against him, ask him how many five cent bits, laid side by side, it would take to cover the surface of a half-dollar without overlapping the edge. He may suggest four, and may probably regard you with suspicion when you inform him that not even two of little coins can be so arranged.

When he has digested this marvel, ask him which city is the father east — Edinburgh or Liverpool — and note the look of humility on his face when you produce a map and prove to him that Liverpool enjoys that distinction!

If he is still cocksure about things in general, get him to tell you how many pennies, piled one on the other, it takes to equal the height of a quarter. Mindful of his previous failure, he may hazard eight or nine, when you promptly pulverise him with the fact that fourteen are required.

If, however, he is still obdurate, ask him how far the human eye can see on a clear day. He may say thirty or forty miles, whereupon you complete his discomfiture by informing him that ninety-five million miles is nearer the mark — the distance of the earth from the sun.

Birth Stones.

They say certain gems have been allotted to the months, each with its significance. The list given below is one generally accepted:—

January—Garnet: Constancy and fidelity.

February—Pearl or amethyst: Purity, peace of mind.

March—Jacinth or bloodstone: Courage in affection.

April—Diamond: Unchanging affection.

May—Emerald: Ensures happiness in love and domestic felicity.

June—Agate: Ensures long life, health, and prosperity.

July—Ruby: Exempts from love doubts and anxiety.

August—Moonstone: A charm for conjugal felicity.

September — Sapphire: Ensures cheerfulness.

October—Opal: Helpfulness and happy faith.

November — Topaz: Fidelity in friendship.

December — Turquoise: Success, happiness, and many friends.

The Prodigal's Return

Larry could not get on very well with his people at home, so he enlisted, and, after a time, went to India.

After some years he returned to his native village. How surprised the old folks would be! He walked along the village street in his smart-looking uniform, his heart beating fast as he neared the old home. Opening the gate, he stepped up the gravel path. Just then a ferocious dog rushed out and grabbed the soldier's leg. Shaking the dog off, he speedily regained the road, and was standing on the other side of the fence when his old father came out.

"Ah! my son," said the old man, "like the prodigal, you have returned."

"Yes," growled the soldier; "but it's your confounded dog that's enjoyed the fatted calf."

Woman's Influence.

Some men strive to gain success,
To win a place and name on the height;
Because within them subsistences
Is ever urging, day and night.

Some men press on as best they may
With pick or spade or sword or pen
Because their wish is day by day
To benefit their fellow men.

One in ten thousand, glad to claim
The world's approval, nobly striven,
But most men who win wealth or fame
Do so to satisfy their wives.

SPEED RECORDS

When the engineer climbed down from the car of the Canadian Pacific Railway's fast Overseas Mail train, at Montreal Junction recently, he had just brought his train in from what is the fastest run that has yet been made between Quebec and Montreal. Not only was the previous record beaten, but it was so badly mangled that it is now hardly recognizable as the best previous time. Owing to the various steamship delays the operating officials had been advised to rush the Overseas mail from Quebec and rush it they did with a vengeance, the train putting away an average of nearly forty-five miles an hour for the whole trip of 165.5 miles. Leaving Quebec at 7.35 the train reached Montreal Junction, at 11.30 p.m. making the journey in three hours and fifty-five minutes. The best previous time for this trip was four

IN THE TOILS ONCE AGAIN

New York, Jan. 11.—After being held in the tombs for three days, charged by telegraph with having been concerned in the robbery of the Bank of Montreal, at New Westminster, B.C., of $275,000, John McNamara, known the police allege as "Australian Mack," was discharged from custody by Magistrate McAdoo today. He was immediately re-arrested on a Federal warrant issued by Commissioner Shields, at the request of the British Consul-General, charging him with being a fugitive from justice and was held for examination.

The Canadian authorities will demand his extradition. McNamara's counsel, Geo. Gordon Battle, said he would resort to habeas corpus in an effort to get his client released.

Alone Under the Tree With a Green Froggie.

A sad little girl sat under a tree.
"I'm so lonely, so lonely, so lonely!" sighed she.
"Oh, why won't somebody play with me?"
But no one came but a green froggie.
"Doncher grump, doncher grump, doncher grump!" said he.

The sad little girl sat under the tree.
"But what shall I do to be gay?" sighed she.
"I wish somebody would please tell me!"
And no one did—but a bumblebee.
"Be bizzee, be bizzee, be bizzee!" said he.
—Youth's Companion.

Farmer Game.

For this game all pretend to be farmers. The players are divided into two equal sides. One of the sides goes off at a distance to determine upon what fruit or vegetable to bring to town and how to show the manner in which it was raised. Then the acting side marches in a line to the guessing side, which says, "Who are you?" The acting side announces "Farmers." "What do you sell?" "Products from our farm." "How did you raise them?" "This way." And the acting side goes through some motion agreed upon which shows how the potatoes were dug or put into bags. If corn is chosen the planting may be shown, or the cutting, the shocking or the husking. When fruits are chosen the players may pretend to be planting, pruning, picking or packing.

As soon as the guessing side guesses the product the acting side runs, for the players on the other side try to capture as many actors as possible. If the product is not guessed, but is given up, the acting side chooses another product and has another turn at acting. The object of the game is not only to guess the product, but to capture farmers. The first side capturing half of the farmers of the other side wins the game. If the game starts out with eight players on each side, the side which grows to have twelve players first wins the game.

Stung on the Tongue.

Ever get stung by a bee? It is not pleasant. If there are plenty of bees they sting you in the most convenient place, but if there is only one you are pretty sure to get it on the nose, quite as if the bee understands that it could not do much worse for you. One bee that lived down south in Indiana went a little further than that. The man that it was having a difference of opinion with had his mouth open, and it stung him on the tongue. It is bad enough to be stung on the nose, but there is all outdoors for the nose to swell into. The tongue has not so much room, and the man was nearly suffocated before the swelling went down. You see, the real cure for a bee sting is a poultice of mud, but the man said that he did not like the taste of mud, and so his tongue had to stay swollen for awhile.—Chicago News.

Cradle Song.

Here is a little cradle song the Italian mother sings when bedtime comes and the little ones are sleepy:

A long one and a short one!
Do you wish me to tell you a long one?
This is the finger, and this is the nail.
Do you wish me to tell you a short one?
This is the finger, and this is the end of it.

Here is another short one:

Once upon a time there was a king
Who ate more than you.
He ate bread and cheese.
Pull, pull his nose.

Then the mother pulls the baby's nose.

Japanese Tag.

This makes an amusing variation on the old game of tag. When a player is tagged he must place his left hand on the spot tagged and keep it there until he has caught some other victim. The game works out in this way: The one who is "it" endeavors to tag a runner on the knee or foot, so that his efforts to tag any one with his hand on this part of the body will be awkward and amusing.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

AIR CONQUEST LONG STRUGGLE

Berget is of Opinion that the Monoplane is the Machine of the Future. Present Speed Must Be Doubled to Secure Safety.

The fundamental principle of aerostatics was discovered by Archimedes and formulated [illegible]. "Every body plunged into a fluid is subjected by this fluid to a pressure from below to above which is equal to the weight displaced by that body." The first application of this principle was to balloons, care being taken to produce a body whose total weight was less than that of the volume of air it displaced. But although the principle was thus applied [illegible] far back as 1783, it was not until 1884 that the first balloon capable of being steered was produced [illegible] Renard, who accomplished a [illegible] flight in what deserved the title of dirigible. The reason for this [illegible] order to steer a body [illegible] fluid it is absolutely [illegible] that the body should possess [illegible] great speed, to permit it to [illegible] old of its own accord. In [illegible] Renard succeeded in obtaining [illegible] motor of eight horse[illegible] only forty kilogrammes [illegible] and capable of great [illegible]

Monoplane the Fastest Machine.

Today mechanical [illegible] ed in perfection [illegible] signed for aviation [illegible] credibly light [illegible] grammes a horse[illegible] perfect action that [illegible] an instant without [illegible] paration. Professor [illegible] his volume "The [illegible] Air," explains clearly [illegible] the mechanical difficulties [illegible] and the scientific [illegible] took a century to discover [illegible] machine which [illegible] Montgolfier launched into the air in 1783. Next came the [illegible] connected with the resistance of air, which determine the shape of the envelope for a dirigible balloon. A spherical balloon can not be propelled. So long ago as the beginning of the nineteenth century Marey Monge predicted the necessity of adopting a shape, should an attempt be made to propel aerostats, which should resemble the head of a cod and the tail of a mackerel." According we see that the best shape in the Giffard and Dupuy-Lemount, the fish shape [illegible] Renard, Lebaudy and Clement-Bayard, but the cylindrical in the Zeppelin. As the result of the laws of air resistance large balloons have an advantage over the small, the Zeppelin (19,000 cubic meters) being the largest ever made, though the shape is against its best interests in this particular case.

The Aeroplane.

The forerunner of the aeroplane was the kite. In a chapter entitled "Application of General Principles," after discussing the wings and their proper angle, stability and the means for its realisation, Prof. Berget pronounces decidedly in favor of monoplanes as against biplanes and declares that the Rheims week of 1911 conclusively demonstrated the superiority of the monoplane, which appears to be the aviation apparatus of the future. One of the defects of the Wright biplane, he asserts, to be the warping of the wings to keep the carrying surface as horizontal as possible. This must inevitably end in endangering the essential solidity of the structure, he says. Another defect is that it requires an extra action on the part of the pilot.

SOME HOMES THAT ARE HOMELIKE

Children Provided With Playgrounds Are Healthier and Happier for It.

The tendency when building homes in the city is to ignore the sides and especially the rear of the house, setting the windows and openings come haphazard wherever it fits in with the interior arrangement conveniently, but give the front of the house every attention as to detail, making it artistic, sometimes the reverse of this, by an excessive use of ornament which contrasts greatly with the bald appearance of the rest of the home. While erecting a home in this fashion can hardly be approved, it is admittedly natural.

When planning country homes, one faces different conditions. The house is not hemmed in between two other homes, with an alley in the rear, neither is the size of the house restricted in any one direction because of lot line limitation. There are no laws requiring the house to be so many full stories high, and set back a certain number of feet from the sidewalk, so that a designer or a builder of a home in the country has no excuse for not making the home as beautiful on one side as on another.

There is no reason why the kitchen porch and entrance should not be attractive, although simple in design, whether it be on a city home or a country home. True the average passerby does not see the rear entrance and in most cases it is well that he does not, but the owner of the house, and his family, whose needs, comforts and pleasures should be most considered, see the rear of the house frequently and it is a poor compliment to them to assume that they are not as capable of appreciating an attractively designed house from the rear as much as the average passerby appreciates it from the front.

Daisy: "Is she so economical?"
Maisie: "Well, she's saving her wedding dress for a possible second marriage."

O'Hara once saw an advertisement in a street car reading—"Buy your stove at O'Brien's and save half your coal." "Begorra," said O'Hara, "I'll buy two stoves and [illegible]"

Pinmuff—Here's a man mentioned in this paper who is 103 years old and can walk ten miles at a stretch.

THE GOLDEN ROSE MINING COMPANY

Capitalization $500,000; Divided into 500,000 Shares; Par Value $1.00

Have decided to mine a large quantity of the Very Rich Ore shown up by recent developing work, and also intend to erect a mill to crush from 20 to 25 tons a day. This will enable the Company to pay dividends next summer. In order to provide funds for this purpose the Company now offer the balance of the 50,000 shares offered to the public in the Prospectus dated 26th day of September, 1910, filed with the Provincial Secretary, Sept. 27th, 1910. These shares are now selling at $1.25 per share until Nov. 25th. They will then advance to $1.50 per share. They will continue to advance in price as developing work proceeds. Assays got from this property run from $22.00 in gold per ton to $86,240.40 (eighty-six thousand two hundred and forty dollars and forty cents). Part of the machinery is now at the mine—the balance will be taken in on the snow roads this winter.

The Golden Rose Mine is forty miles from Markstay Station by winter roads, and in summer it is reached by boat from Temagami Station on T. & N. O. Ry.

MILL RUN

Four and a quarter tons of ore was sent to Kingston. It averaged $50.00 in gold to the ton.

71.7 PER CENT. FREE MILLING

Four assays obtained from Hendley & Parker, Sudbury, gave, respectively, gold values of $2,419.01 $1,020.68, $787.63, $102.72. Two just recently assayed $607.20 and $393.60.

This stock is closely held, and will not be listed with any broker till the mill is installed and the first dividends paid. A small block will then be listed to make it liquid. As an investment this is second to none.

GILDED HOMES GAMBLING DENS

Los Angeles Pastor Says Society Women Entice Men to Card Tables

NEW York, Jan. 12. The spirit of unrest amongst the toiling classes seems to increase rather than diminish. The great strike of the scavengers has been lost by the men, and this seems to have embittered them to a great extent. Great strikes are predicted in the spring, when the thousands of builders will begin to move.

A Strong Sermon.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 11.—"If I could learn the names of the society women of Los Angeles who indulge in gambling, I would read them from the pulpit," declared Rev. Arthur S. Phelps. In a lecture last night which was devoted to the evils of gambling, the minister charged that many drawing rooms were gambling dens and that society women were known to entice men to their homes in order to win their money.

Tarsus Evangelist.

Glen Condon, Tulsa, Okla., one of the best known sport writers of the southwest of the United States, announced through the press that he would become an evangelist. He intends to follow the style of "Billy" Sunday in his new work. "Red" Condon, as he is familiarly known, was the first newspaper man to bring Carl Morris to the attention of the public as a possible heavyweight champion.

Miner Decapitated.

Tom Williams, an employee of the Union Mining Company, Telluride, Col., was decapitated at the mine to-day when he was caught in the loop of the tramway cable, which was knocked from the brake wheel by a falling car.

Was After Bryan.

Governor Woodrow Wilson was anxious several years ago to retire William J. Bryan from the councils of the Democratic party, according to a letter given out in New York this morning by Adrian J. Joliffe, and which was said to have been written him by Dr. Wilson on April 27, 1907. The letter is brief and says in part: "Would that we could do something at once dignified and effective to knock Mr. Bryan once and for all into a cocked hat!" The balance of the communication was purely personal and had no political flavor.

S.S. Russ Foundered During a Gale, and All on Board Perish—Russian Consul-General Was Among the Victims.

Bucharest, Romania, Jan. 11.—The Russian steamer Russ has foundered during a gale in the Black Sea with the whole of her passengers and crew totalling 172 persons.

The Russ which was under the command of Captain Pahomoff, and belongs to the Russian Steam Navigation Company of the Black Sea and the Danube, was steaming from Galatz to Odessa.

Among her passengers were Carl Aunaoff, who was recently appointed Russian Consul-General at Galatz, and his family.

RABIES OUTBREAK

Brantford, Jan. 11—Brantford and the surrounding district are threatened by a rabies outbreak, according to Dr. Cutcliffe, local inspector here. A couple of mad dogs recently escaped and have not been caught. On the outskirts of the city several sheep and cattle are dead from rabies, and a little girl residing on the same farm is now receiving treatment at Toronto. Over twenty dogs already have been killed.

NAVAL SECRETS

Every Workman Employed on a New Warship Has to Take An Oath That He Will Reveal Nothing He Sees.

All new ships are built with the greatest possible secrecy. To begin with, every man who is employed in whatever capacity, on a new warship has to take an oath that he will never reveal anything he may learn. No outsider is allowed anywhere near the building yards. When the first Dreadnought was being built, for instance, the great vessel was guarded so jealously that no one save those actually employed on her were allowed within forty yards. To show how strictly this order was carried out, two post-captains of the Navy, in uniform, were turned back by the police and private detectives on guard.

The actual plans of a new battleship are the most carefully guarded of all the Admiralty's secrets. They are kept in rooms which rival any strong-rooms of a bank. The draughtsmen never know the whole plans in their possession. Parts are given out at a time to different men, and every draughtsman is carefully watched in order that he can take no copy of the part of the plan in front of him. So well are the complete plans divided up that even if three or four men got together they would be unable to find out much about [illegible] Dreadnought. Whenever any portion of the plans goes out of the strong-room its movements are carefully watched and checked by those in charge of the keys of the room.

When the German Emperor visited Gibraltar a few years ago the greatest precautions were quietly taken, in the politest possible way, to prevent members of the Emperor's suite seeing too much. Sentries were placed at all sorts of odd corners on board all the men-of-war. Every part of the vessels was carefully guarded, and more than one German officer who had "wandered" below was shown the way up to the deck.

Anaemic Mothers Here is Relief!

YOU CAN ENRICH YOUR WORN-OUT BLOOD AND QUICKLY BE NEW YOUR HEALTH WITH DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS

Sufferer of Twenty Years States Dr. Hamilton's Pills Are a Real Cure.

"I can't remember any time during the past 20 years when my head was not aching. If I bent over, dark specks would come before my eyes, and it seemed as if all the blood in my body wanted to rush to the head." Thus opens the letter of Mrs. Enoch S. Spry, of Putnam P.O., and continuing her interesting statement she says: "Work or exertion made my heart beat terrible, and going up stairs caused such shortness of breath that it fairly frightened me. My doctor told me that of that was the cause Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the greatest blood renewer on earth. I tell you how I feel today and you can understand what a great cure Dr. Hamilton's Pills have made.

I feel strong enough now to work like a man, as for going up stairs on the run, it doesn't bother me at all. I eat and sleep as any well person ought, and as for dizziness which used to frighten me so much, it has entirely disappeared. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a wonderful woman's medicine. They helped me in other ways, too, and I know every woman that uses them will have comfort and good health.

THE MORNING TIMES

SATURDAY, JANUARY 13th, 1912.

NOT INVASION, ABSORPTION.

Americans to the number of 101,693 took up their residence in Canada in the eight months from April 1 to December 1. "Annexation alarmists should view with concern the progress of this peaceful invasion."—The World, New York.

It should not be difficult to show the fallacy of the above argument of the New York daily. The one hundred and one thousand immigrants from the United States who came to Canada as stated from the first of April to the first of December of this year are largely made up of returning Canadians, Englishmen, Germans Scandinavians and Americans. At the above rate, or even up to three hundred thousand a year, they will be heartily welcomed, because the Dominion can readily assimilate them at that rate. The Europeans who come to this country from the United States bring with them the ideals and national feelings that are the outgrowth of that continent. They come to Canada under a form of government which is more nearly allied to the governments from which they sprang and their ultimate absorption by the Anglo-Saxon of Canada is a comparatively easy matter.

In this way Canada will peacefully annex the United States, and the boot will then be on the other foot.

The United States paper is mistaken in supposing that such immigrants are effecting anything so striking as a peaceful United States invasion of this country. When they entered the United States at Ellis Island from Northern Europe, did the New York World refer to their entry as a silent invasion from Denmark, Sweden and Germany of the United States? The Times would be surprised to learn that it did. Why then assume that the same people shortly afterwards leaving that Country for Canada constitute anything so picturesque as an invasion?

Nationalism in the United States is a very hybrid thing. If Wisconsin Teutonic, or that composite thing called American.

A country must have nationalism before emigrants can carry it over the borders of a neighboring country.

THE WORLD'S UNREST.

The weather is fair in Canada and calm. Every prospect is full of hope and encouragement for peace, prosperity and progress. But it is decidedly curious and significant that in so many places at the same time conditions of war, anarchy, and chaos should prevail.

Morocco, Tripoli, Italy, the Turkish Empire, Albania, Macedonia, Persia, and China are a seething pot of which nobody can foretell the outcome. These countries represent at least two-thirds of the human beings existent on this planet, and our security is menaced by their lack of it.

The whole thing is really the wakening of the Oriental mind to the higher aspirations of western civilization as expressed most definitely and fully in Anglo-Saxon institutions We have kept on stirring the porridge, but we cannot have any exact security that it is not going to boil over the brim of the pot.

It will be noticed, however, that the British Empire is in most cases the arbiter of affairs. There must be a reason for that. In its expression, it lies in the dominant naval power of the Empire, but in its essence it lies much deeper. Somewhere it is said that the man who has learned to govern himself is fit to rule a city. In the fact that we have learned to govern ourselves lies the justification of the British Empire and its power.

In this strange outburst of emotion, quiescent through so many hundreds of years, the British Empire has been excessively fortunate in its titular representatives. The personal courage of the king in going into the centre of Asia at the present time we must admire, but absolute indifference to personal danger is with him hereditary. Still there will be a sigh of relief all over the Empire when he gets away.

We cannot spare King George at the present moment. Not so great a man as his father, he has, nevertheless, been bred and trained to perform certain duties for the state and he is discharging them excellently well. Consequently his exposure to Oriental intrigue and fanaticism gives us ground for apprehension. Let him come to Canada. Here every honest heart will be the breastwork of his security.

Face Peeling At Home

(From Ladies' Favorite Magazine)

Any woman nowadays may quickly rejuvenate her complexion at home by a safe and painless process of gentle absorption. The days of expensive and dangerous "operations" are past, and each woman can be her own beauty doctor. It has been discovered that ordinary mercolized wax, applied like cold cream at night, will cause the thin veil of lifeless, sallow or blotchy cuticle to gently flake off in invisible, flour-like particles, revealing the fresh, vigorous and beautiful young skin underneath. The wax absorbs only the unhealthy and unsightly outer film and does not affect the healthy tissue at all.

The process defies detection and unveils a lasting and beautiful complexion which is, of course, a perfectly natural one. For this purpose thousands of women are now using mercolized wax, which may be obtained at any drug store. Naturally the process also removes all such surface blemishes as freckles, blotches, pimples, tan, liver spots, etc. It makes the face look years younger and prettier and renders the use of face creams unnecessary.

I Am Willing To Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10,000 Worth of Medicine

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this medicine, and anyone suffering from these diseases can get a box of it absolutely free. All that is necessary is to send me your address.

I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and pay me it should. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the User. And sufferers of the world, so I can show them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, nor would I accept it now or later if offered it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying calls to urinate. But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to listen to anyone thereafter. Happily, I am in a position now to demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to spend any money to find out. I don't ask them to believe me, nor even to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my own cost. That is surely fair.

To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars which will be used to compound my remedies. Much of it is ready now to be sent out, all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there be thousands of them. And anyone who needs it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have a disease for which this medicine is intended, I ask you to send me some of your leading symptoms. It may save you the symptoms in the list printed here you need my medicine and if you will write me I will gladly send you a box of it free with full directions for your use. Look the symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, then write me about as follows: "Dear Dr., I notice symptoms number ——— and ——— and the numbers give your age, full address and send it to me. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 827 Franklin Building, Toronto, Can.

The ten thousand dollars I am spending for the compounding of my medicine is only a part of the money I am devoting to this cause, for the package of medicine I send you will be fully prepaid at my expense. From any standpoint you view it, YOU incur no expense or obligation. Just tell others who you know are suffering who sent you the medicine that cured you.

I am promising to give away ten thousand dollars' worth of medicine, and I will do that; I am promising to send any sufferer who writes me a box of this medicine and full directions free of charge, and I will do that.

These Are the Symptoms:

1—Pain in the back.
2—Too frequent desire to urinate.
3—Burning or obstruction of urine.
4—Pain or soreness in the bladder.
5—Prostatic trouble.
6—Gas or pain in the stomach.
7—General debility, weak man, dizziness
8—Pain or soreness under right rib.
9—Swelling in any part of the body.
10—Constipation or liver trouble.
11—Palpitation or pain under the heart.
12—Pain in the hip joint.
13—Pain in the back or head.
14—Pain or soreness in the kidneys.
15—Pain or swelling of the joints.
16—Pain or swelling of the feet.
17—Pain and soreness in nerves.
18—Acute or chronic rheumatism.

WOMAN IS AUTHOR OF MOST TALKED-OF BOOK

Mme. KARIN MICHAELIS

LONDON. — The most talked-of book in Europe today is "The Dangerous Age", by Madame Karin Michaelis, a Danish woman. The book is an intimate study of the heart of a woman — daringly conceived and brilliantly executed. A storm of discussion has been started wherever "The Dangerous Age" has appeared, for it is not a book for sweet sixteen to read.

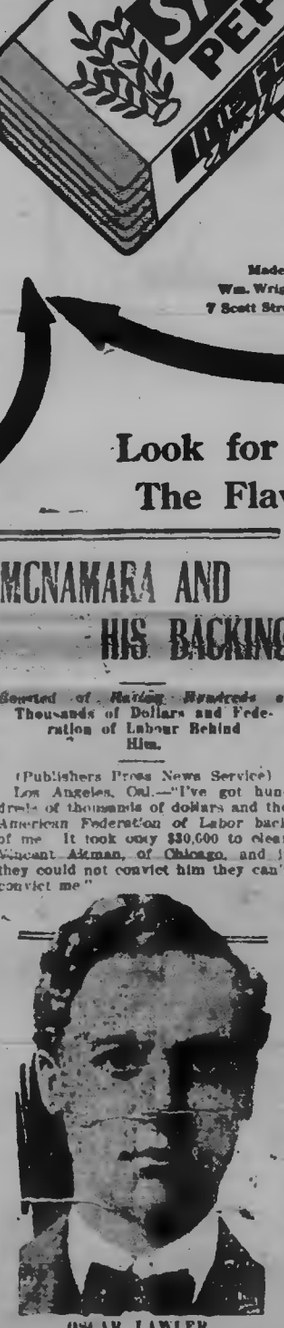
Madame Michaelis seems to think that the dangerous age is along about 40.

MCNAMARA AND HIS BACKING

Secured of Raising Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars and Federation of Labour Behind Him.

(Publishers Press News Service)

Los Angeles, Cal.—"I've got hundreds of thousands of dollars and the American Federation of Labor back of me. It took only $30,000 to clear Vincent Ailman, of Chicago, and if they could not convict him they can't convict me."



OSCAR LAWLER,
Assistant Attorney General of U.S.A. who is taking charge of federal activities.

This boast, attributed by Detective Malcolm McLaren to James B. McNamara as the latter was being taken on a train from Detroit to Chicago on the night of April 12 last, caused Orrie E. McManigal, then also under arrest, to become angered with McNamara for his independent statement and was the first circumstance that led McManigal to break from his companion, and eventually to confess his connection with various dynamiting excursions throughout the country.

The federal grand jury heard McManigal's story all day, laying the foundations for the probe into the alleged dynamiting conspiracies that extended from coast to coast in the last three years.

KING EDWARD VACUM CLEANER

You cannot clean carpets, rugs and furniture by beating. If you think you have, just try a KING EDWARD VACUUM CLEANER and you will find the article full of dust, which breeds disease.

The KING EDWARD HAND MACHINE has no equal as compared with other hand machines. It is lighter to operate and its suction is much stronger. Its suction is stronger than many of the power machines, and the dusting is done away with. On account of the short stroke one person can operate it on carpets and rugs equally as well as two, and it is about half the weight of other hand machines to carry up and down stairs or from one room to another. It is sold for less money than any of the hand machines. All machines are guaranteed.

Quebec, Que., Jan. 11.—A young man named Joseph Cadran is dying from an axe blow given by another young man named Octave Godbout, at St. Neree, county of Bellechasse. Godbout was passing with a load of stovewood on a piece of land, the proprietor of which Mrs. (widow) J. B. Godbout had forbidden him to trespass. The proprietor has placed some men to keep young Godbout from trespassing. Cadran was one of these. A quarrel followed, and Cadran was struck on the head with an axe by Godbout, whose arrest is to take place to-day.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

ANY person who is the sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made on any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate 50 acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect house worth $300.00.

CATARRH CANNOT BE CURED with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials.

About 60 cases of charity have been dealt with by the City Relief Officer Miller since the advent of winter, and they are steadily increasing. Sickness in the family and lack of employment for the breadwinner of the house, were the chief reasons advanced for their destitute conditions.

Maysville, Ky., Jan. 11.—Though he left much property to his wife, Louis Roser, who died last Sunday had not spoken to her until that day for twenty-five years. It developed that on Sunday morning Mrs. Roser broke the long silence when she asked her husband: "Will you have a cup of coffee?"

"I believe I will," was his reply.

In a few moments he was stricken with heart disease and died. His will directs that his body be cremated and the ashes cast to the winds from the Cincinnati Suspension Bridge.

SPORTING COLUMN.

PATRON SAINT OF FOOTBALL

The Patron "Sir Hugh" was Kicked for Kicking a Ball Through a Window of a Jews-House.

Footballers may be interested in the following piece of folk-lore about the game. Although it is not generally known, football has a patron saint. In 1520 a boy named Hugh, who was one of the champions of his day, had the misfortune to kick a ball through the window of a Jew's house. Whether the ball struck the man or any member of his family is not known, but certain it is he was very much incensed about the affair. Determined on revenge, he enticed the unsuspecting Hugh into his home and plunged a knife in the youth's back. The English people were very much cut up about the loss of their champion, albeit not as much so as was Hugh. They severely punished his slayer, made the young football player a saint, and gave him a big and expensive funeral. They even wrote verses; bad verses, but still verses, describing the virtues of "sweet Sir Hugh" and his prowess as a football player.

Football was forbidden in Elizabeth's reign under pain of imprisonment, the reason being the extreme brutality of the game. We are told "And James I. debarred 'all rough and violent exercises, as the hurling of great balls,' of the prohibition against the game, the London apprentices often kicked a football about the streets to keep themselves warm in winter, and it is on record that in the severe frost of 1565 the London streets were "full of footballs."

Long Distance Runners

Long distance runners require a great amount of stamina, wonderfully strong legs, a strong heart and powerful lungs; boxers must have strength and a supple constitution; football players, strength and the wearing activities that are distinctly antithetic to the ordinary companions of labor, or tasks or duties, as the term may apply.

Snugly ensconced in a soft cushioned chair, the public — that part of it which breathes the virulent vaudevillian atmosphere — claps its hands and thunderously applauds physical wonders.

The giants of the stage, wondrously developed with their coils of muscles transparently playing beneath whitened cuticle replenish the coffers of thought which revert to Atlas afoot with the world upon his broad shoulders.

The phenomenally strong man who tosses five hundred pound weights with the ease of the wind lifting a feather creates admiration, albeit not a little envy.

What poverty is like that of moral penury? When the head is poor, what mockery is money wealth!

Few people regret the times when they were silent, but many regret and often suffer because of imprudent speech.

PROFESSIONAL ETIQUETTE

Some Barristers' Curious Customs and Traditions Belonging to the Old Country.

From the day when he eats his first student's dinner to the day when he pockets his last professional fee, the man of wig and gown in England has to observe customs and to obey traditions such as the members of no other learned profession have any knowledge of and which are not even known in Canada amongst the lawyers.

The Temple, where for the most part the would-be Lord Chancellor has his legal nursery, is an exact nest of old-world observances, linking it with the far-away time when it was the home of Crusading Knights, who feasted, six and more centuries ago, on the very spot on which the young Templar of our day eats the dinners that go some way towards qualifying him for his wig.

Brothers All!

The very grace that heralds his meal and the grace that concludes it are the same, in the Inner Temple, that the Knights of the Cross listened to when the Plantagenet Kings were wearing their crowns. Like their martial predecessors, the Benchers file into the Middle Temple Hall preceded by the mace, the substitute for the old-time battle-axe. Their entry is heralded by a loud blow of the mace on the floor, as was that of the senior Knights Templar of old by a similar blow with the butt-end of a lance; and the grace is preceded by three blows with a wooden mallet, the ancient knightly form of invoking the Trinity.

Barristers and students mingle and feast together at the same tables, without any regard to seniority — a survival of the ancient Templar practice of the essential principle of brotherhood. If one of them is dissatisfied with his food, he may send a sample of it to the Treasurer for his verdict, just as the most junior Templar in King John's time would submit any food of which he disapproved to the Senior Knight; and the fragments of the modern Grand Day banquet are given to the servants of the Inn just as the surplus food was always given by the Knights of old to the poor.

The Knights Templar were summoned to the hall of feasting by the blowing of a horn; and to-day the Middle Templar is similarly called to the table by blasts of the very horn which summoned his predecessors in Elizabethan days. These, and the arrangement of messes, the ceremonials of bowing, the circulation of the loving-cup and many another custom, all serve to link the Templar of to-day with his martial "forefathers" of long-dead centuries.

Briefs and Fees.

And these are but a few of the many quaint customs and regulations which the man of wig and gown must observe, if he does not wish to get himself into trouble with the authorities. When he is qualified to accept briefs and to play the part of a counsel "learned in the law," he must walk very warily to avoid the countless pitfalls of etiquette that mark his path to the Woolsack.

However an empty purse may tempt him, he must not accept a professional fee that falls short of the irreducible guinea, with a half-crown added for his clerk, whether he has one or not. Nor must he accept less than the fee, however big it is, that is marked on his brief for all to see.

However much he may yearn for clients, he cannot even see one unless through the introduction of a solicitor; and the solicitor must be present at the interview. Between him and the litigant whose cause he is to plead there is a gulf which only a solicitor can bridge. And when the solicitor appears at his chambers, bearing the coveted brief, it must be handed, not to Mr. "Wix," but to his clerk, and it is the clerk, and not the master, who arranges the delicate matter of fees.

No Touting Allowed.

Some professional men may tout for clients; but not so the barrister. It will be an evil day for him when he starts brief-hunting, though he may be starving for lack of golden guineas. If he calls at a friendly solicitor's office for a gossip, or accepts an invitation to a dinner or a dance at his house, he is going perilously near the danger-line. If he is a wise man he will avoid the company of solicitors and pass them by, like the Levite, "on the other side."

On circuit the watchful eyes of Etiquette are always on him. Even for the sake of company, if he be a sociable man, he must not travel there by any class but the first; nor may he reach an Assize town earlier than the day before the list opens.

However much his services are wanted on another circuit than his own he must turn a deaf ear, unless his brief comes to him marked with a special fee of at least fifty guineas, in addition to the fee he would receive on his own circuit. If he is unable to appear in any case for which he is retained, he must provide a substitute; for whose services, however, he may pay what he pleases. The fee he puts into his own pocket.

When his professional dress is regulated for him to the extent that he must not appear in court in any coat but one of sober black; nor must he show his face in court if he is carrying the blue bag which may be his familiar companion in the street and train. Unless he is entitled to carry a red bag (and this he may not buy—it must be given to him by some friendly senior), he must be content to make his appearance with his briefs and papers under his arm.

YUAN-SHI-KAI IS CHINA'S DICTATOR

The New Premier is a Manchu and a Militarist and Will Crush the Progressives If He Can. —But Can He?

(Special Cable Service.)

PEKIN. — Yuan Shi Kai, who has accepted the premiership is considered "the strongest man in China" since Li Hung Chang.

The return to power of Yuan-Shi-Kai, after two years spent in enforced retirement, is a matter of grave concern to the progressives. It may mean disaster to them.

For Yuan-Shi-Kai is a great man—one whose very name is more potent with the people of China than an army. He is feared and respected throughout the empire.

And now the government, in despair

at the spread of revolt, has summoned from obscurity this man who was so summarily dismissed and disgraced two years ago, and has put him again in supreme control of the army and navy. Which means that Yuan-Shi-Kai has virtually been made dictator.

That's just the sort of place Yuan is best fitted for. He is a Diaz-like individual, a man of tremendous energy and of big brain. In the days of the absolute monarchy he seemed like a progressive by contrast. He was associated with Li Hung Chang and did much toward untangling the mess caused by the Boxer outbreak. But Yuan is not a progressive. He is a militarist.

Indeed Yuan represents all that China is today in military standing. For Yuan MADE the present Chinese army. When he came to power on the death of the great Li Hung Chang he set about the reorganisation of the entire military establishment of the empire, and thanks to his effort China has now a thoroughly equipped and well drilled army.

Now he has been called to take the premiership. If any one in China can turn the trick he can. And that he will do his best to crush the progressive movement may be taken for granted.

For Yuan is a Manchu.

THE FOUNDER OF SUFFRAGETTE MOVEMENT.

Mrs. EMMELINE PANKHURST

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, who is shortly coming to Canada, is one of the original suffragets. She is easily the most prominent figure among the English suffragets, with her daughter Christabel perhaps a close second. Just now she is touring the United States, speaking for the cause of woman's suffrage.

Mrs. Pankhurst is a little woman — but, Oh, my! She speaks like a house afire. Wherever she appears she awakens great enthusiasm by her simple yet dramatic telling of the story of the battles between the suffragets and the English authorities and of how she and many others were thrown into prison for daring to stand up for woman's rights.

Workingmen's Building Society.

At the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Peterborough Workingmen's Building and Savings Society, held at the Ottawa Bank Chambers, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—J. B. McGrath.
Vice-Pres.W.James Lynch.
Treasurer—James Murty.
Auditor—Jas. Drain.
Directors—Geo. Ball, S. W. English, Jas. Garrow, Jas. Murty, E. A. Peck, R. Sheehy.

Leaving Horses Untied.

Police Magistrate Dumble and Chief Thompson are determined to put a stop to the habit so many people have of leaving horses untied on the streets of the city. Yesterday Sherman Killingbeck and Wm. Morton were each fined $2.00 for thos offence. The public have been warned many times against this breach of the city by-laws, but despite the warning and fact that fines have been frequently imposed, it is still being committed.

Carter Is Remanded.

Fred C. Carter, the Union Life Insurance agent who was arrested in Toronto and arraigned in the police court last week, charged with the theft of $25 from the local branch of the company, was remanded until Tuesday next. The company's representative requested that this remand be made until he further investigates the condition of affairs. He said that he had discovered that there was also a deficiency in the company's Lindsay branch, and he wanted to dig into the matter further.

Under False Colors.

A local Roman Catholic priest has requested our evening contemporaries to state that Mr. Patrick Morgan, who is to deliver a series of addresses in the Park street Baptist church during the next few days, was never a Roman Catholic priest. If this is true, in view of the advertising his visit to Peterborough has had, it should be condemned. But The Times is not prepared to proclaim Mr. Morgan an imposter—at least not until he has been heard in his own defense.

DIED FROM EXPOSURE

A. J. Cameron, the Well Known Surveyor, Found on the Road Badly Frostbitten, and Passed Away Three Hours Later.

The citizens were shocked yesterday morning when they heard of the tragic death of Mr. Alf. J. Cameron, the well known land surveyor, who was found in an unconscious condition on the road near Crawford's Grove, about two miles from the city. The unfortunate man was so badly frozen and the exposure to the terrible cold was too much for his constitution, and death occurred at the residence of Mr. J. L. West, three hours after he was rescued. His hands and feet were frozen as hard as stone. Mr. West had the assistance of Mr. Bruce Johnston, Mr. Miller and others, who did everything in their power to save him, but without success.

Mr. Cameron was about 48 years of age, and leaves a wife and seven children to mourn his demise.

The funeral announcement will be made later.

Tightens Her Skin ... Loses Her Wrinkles

(From Social Mirror).

"I want to tell you how easily and quickly I got rid of my wrinkles," writes one of our correspondents. "While in London a friend, much envied because of her youthful appearance, gave me a formula for a home-made preparation which has the effect of instantly tightening the skin thus smoothing out wrinkles and furrows.

"The principal ingredient is powdered saxolite, which I found could be procured at drug stores here. An ounce of saxolite is dissolved in a half pint witch hazel. After bathing my face in this but once the transformation was so marvelous I looked years younger. Even the deep crow's feet were affected, as were the annoying creases about my neck. It seems difficult to believe that anything could produce results like these, but several to whom I recommended the remedy have been similarly helped, including an elderly lady whose cheeks had become quite baggy."

Greatest Invention of Age for Hoarseness, Sore Throat

Nothing So Far Discovered is So Beneficial to Public Speakers, Ministers, Singers and Teachers as CATARRHOZONE.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal cords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. Catarrhozone keeps the mucous surfaces in perfect condition, and its regular use absolutely prevents colds and throat irritation, thereby removing the singer's greatest source of anxiety—unfitness of voice. The most eminent speakers and prima donnas are seldom without Catarrhozone, and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence.

Singer Recommends Catarrhozone.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from that terrible disease known as CATARRH.

"Being a professional singer, you can readily understand that Catarrh would be a serious hindrance to my professional skill.

"One year ago I read in the 'Progress' a convincing testimonial from one who had been cured of this disease through using your God-sent invention, Catarrhozone.

"Believing in the merit of Catarrhozone, I tried it.

"Catarrhozone cured me and has been the means of my success.

"You are at liberty to use my name if it will help relieve some from suffering, and I will always remain.

"Bob Bixley, New Glasgow, N.S."

Mr. Bixley is one of the best known singers and entertainers in the Maritime Provinces. Everyone knows him and his testimonial for Catarrhozone is the best sort of evidence of what great benefit Catarrhozone is to those suffering with throat weakness or catarrh.

Complete outfit, consisting of a beautifully polished hard rubber inhaler, and sufficient liquid for recharging to last two months, costs one dollar. Sold by all druggists, or sent safely to your address by mail if price is forwarded to the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., or Kingston, Ont.

SULTAN'S SECRETS.

London, Jan. 12.—The authentic records of the thirty-three years' reign of the deposed Sultan of Turkey, Abdul Hamid II., are to be given to the world. The minutest search had failed to reveal their whereabouts until Abdul Hamid himself disclosed the secret chamber where every written record has been kept. The Constantinople correspondent of the Chronicle states that it has now been decided to publish the documents, which are complete, as Abdul Hamid never destroyed a letter or paper. Not a single line of these records was written by the Sultan, who had a strong aversion to writing even his own name. His signet served to authorize the official documents, even death sentences.

MRS. GEO. BUTLER TELLS WHAT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS DID FOR HER.

She was tired, nervous and run down, and suffered from pains in the back — Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

Paquetville, Gloucester Co., N. B., Jan. 12. — (Special). — That Dodd's Kidney Pills are suffering woman's best friend was never better demonstrated than in the case of Mrs. Geo. Butler, a well-known and highly respected resident of this place.

"My trouble was brought on by hard work," Mrs. Butler tells her friends. "For four years I suffered from pain in the back. I was always tired and nervous. My head ached and I had dark circles under my eyes, which were also puffed and swollen.

"I was in a generally run-down condition and feeling very much discouraged when I started to take Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I can only say I found relief at once."

The mainspring of a man's health is the kidneys. If the kidneys are right the blood will be pure. Pure blood is absolutely essential to good health. Dodd's Kidney Pills make the kidneys right.

of great benefit to the city, and it is so close to completion that the benefits should be realized now. And with the thirteen miles at the north end made navigable there will be water communication from Lake Ontario to Georgian Bay, and Peterborough will be on the shortest and most rapid route of navigation from the east to the west, as well as on the direct railway routes. One way to push Peterborough is to hasten the completion of this waterway. Large industries having heavy freight want water communication. The Minister has announced that the plans for the western outlet will be completed as quickly as possible and the work constructed.

Anyone driving around the city is impressed with the number of times a railway track must be crossed. This, for manufacturing, is an advantage, for a factory located in any part of the city can easily and cheaply secure siding accommodation. In the South Ward, where the larger number of industries are located, direct connection with both railways can be secured. In the Northwest and North, and also in the northern or central part of the East Ward, the Grand Trunk railway is at hand, and in the Southern part of the East Ward both railways are accessible. In all these districts there are good manufacturing sites, and railways. The interswitching arrangements between the two railways are satisfactory and facilitate shipping.

In talking up Peterborough, bear in mind its central situation, good manufacturing sites and admirable shipping facilities.

KILLING CHINESE WITHOUT QUEQUES

FIENDISH BRUTALITY IS BEING SHOWN BY IMPERIAL TROOPS NORTH OF PEKIN.

Skinned Officer Alive—Abdication or War Must Be Choice Made During Next Three Days.

London, Jan. 12.—The gravest reports are coming to hand regarding the situation at Hankow. According to a news agency despatch from Tien Tsin the report reached that city yesterday that the Imperial troops were acting with the most fiendish brutality.

The allegation is made that they captured an officer of the Republican troops whom they first tortured and subsequently skinned alive. They also shot a Red Cross assistant.

It is further reported that they are shooting without mercy every Chinese whom they encounter without a queque.

The Imperial troops, it is stated, are entirely without discipline and have got completely out of hand.

It is intimated in official quarters that the revolutionary march on Peking will commence January 15th, unless the abdication of the Emperor is announced.

J. W. Copeland, of Dayton, Ohio, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for his boy who had a cold, and before the bottle was all used the boy's cold was gone. Is that not better than to pay a five dollar doctor's bill? For sale by all dealers.

VOL XXVII NO 12 PETERBOROUGH ONTARIO, MONDAY, JANUARY 15 1912 PRICE TWO CENTS

HUNDREDS TURNED AWAY UNABLE TO HEAR MORGAN

Mr. Patrick Morgan, late of the Capuchin Fathers, addressed a public meeting in the Sons of England Hall yesterday afternoon, on the subject: "How Rome Destroys a Nation." The chair was occupied by Rev. W. C. Riddiford, pastor of Park street Baptist church. Although the meeting was called for 3 o'clock, by a quarter to three there was not even standing room, a thousand persons, it is said, being packed into the hall and ante-rooms adjoining. Many hundreds were turned away unable to get further than the top of the first stairway leading to the hall above.

The speaker delivered an interesting address, dealing with the Church of Rome from the inside as it were. His address was frequently punctured with applause.

Mr. Morgan did not refer to the charge which had been made in the local papers, that he never was an ordained priest of the Roman Catholic church. It is said that he will do so later on, before leaving the city.

Last night he occupied the pulpit of the Park street Baptist church, when again crowds were so great that hundreds could not gain admission.

The Times is requested to state that Mr. Morgan will address meetings in the church Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, to which the public are invited.

BARONESS SENTENCED FOR MURDERING HER HUSBAND

And Her Young Son is Given Twenty Years' Imprisonment For Complicity in Crime

FRENCH ARISTOCRATS COOLY PLANNED THE KILLING OF BARON DE COUVRIGNY.

Poison Was First Tried Without Success—The Mother Induced Her Son to do the Deed.

Paris, Jan. 12.—At a late hour last night Robert De Couvrigny and his mother, the Baroness De Couvrigny, were found guilty by a jury at Caen. The youth was charged with parricide and the Baroness with complicity in the crime and attempting to poison her husband. The jury reported that there were extenuating circumstances in the case, but the court sentenced the Baroness to death and the son to 20 years imprisonment.

DELIBERATELY PLANNED.

The trial caused a sensation throughout France as the deputy is well known. On March 18, was accused of brutally slaying his father, the Baron De Couvrigny, at the instigation of his mother and with the complicity of other members of the family.

The Couvrigny family lived in a Chateau at Fresne la Mere, in the Department of Calvados, and it was alleged that the Baroness, whose allowance had been cut off by her husband because she was a confirmed drunkard, coolly held a family council, which discussed the best means of removing the Baron.

OLD MAN WAS SHOT.

Both strangulation and hanging were considered impracticable by the members of the family, but three attempts to poison the Baron were made, although all proved unsuccessful.

The Baroness then made her son intoxicated with absinthe and induced him to shoot his father from an ambush. After the deed the Baroness calmly examined the Baron's body to make sure that he was dead. The family is very well known in Calvados, and the court was crowded when the trial started.

WILL KEEP HARRY THAW IN MATTEAWAN ASYLUM

One of the Foremost of Living Alienists Declares Him Incurable and Highly Dangerous

New York, Jan. 12.—The World comments on the prospective release of Thaw as follows:

"Signs multiply of the scope and formidable nature of the campaign instituted to secure the release of Harry K. Thaw from Matteawan. In the confident expectation of those moving for a new trial of Thaw's sanity that the subtle influences brought to bear to procure a verdict favorable to the prisoner will combine to effect his liberation lies a grave menace to the equal administration of justice in New York.

"The slayer of Stanford White is to-day, in the opinion of one of the foremost of living alienists, Dr. Austin Flint, 'incurable and highly dangerous,' and to liberate him would be to encourage the commission of 'some violent and perhaps homicidal act.' Yet the theory that Thaw's release is 'only a matter of time' has gained wide acceptance. If this belief is realized, if Thaw is set free and the sentence of the court nullified through the employment of every purchasable resource of expert evidence, the fact will constitute one of the worst scandals of the criminal law in the recent history of the State.

"The popular impression will be deepened that money is potent to influence the processes on which punishment for crime depends and an unwholesome prejudice will be instilled in the public mind. If murderers like Thaw are to be turned lose on society after nominal detention, what is the use of law or asylums?"

PUSH PETERBOROUGH

Cheap Electric Power and Other Essentials for Manufacturing.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—One of the natural advantages that Peterborough has in abundance of power. There are water powers within the city and many more close to it. Water powers developed and undeveloped are within easy reach of Peterborough. If it is required, 30,000 to 40,000 hydro-electric horse power can be furnished here as quickly as it is called for. And it is supplied at prices lower than in most cities on account of the proximity of the water powers. Compared with a number of places in Western Ontario that are bidding for factories, the price is lower here, and this is an advantage that should be effective. The companies offer power for industrial purposes for twenty horse power or over at $30.00 per horse power per year for a continuous service for the power actually consumed as determined by test at the factory when in operation, allowing a ten minute peak; or, if preferred, $12.00 per h.p. per year for the rated capacity of the motors installed plus one-quarter of a cent per horse power for the current used. The latter rate is an advantageous one in a factory where all the machinery is not in continuous operation. To illustrate. Suppose the maximum demand in a factory is one hundred horse power and motors are installed to supply that demand, but the average load factor is sixty per cent of that, that is, owing to the machinery not being in operation continuously, the amount of power used averages sixty per cent of what the motors will furnish. The yearly account in that case will be $1200.00 on the basis rate of $12.00 per h.p., plus 600 h.p. hours per day at one-quarter of a cent per h.p. hour, and counting that for 300 days in the year, this will amount to $450.00, making the whole charge for the year $1650.00 or $16.50 per horse power. Even these rates might be shaded in special cases. I do not now wish to discuss in any way the question of the city obtaining power from the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission. If it does, I assume it will be to lower the price and the advantage will be greater. But as matters stand now, Peterborough can furnish all the power that can be required and at attractively low prices. This is another factor with which to Push Peterborough.

Manufacturers looking for a location for industries always enquire about labor conditions. They want to locate where mechanics will come to them and where there is good feeling between employees and employers. In this, Peterborough meets the conditions. It has the convenience and many of the attractions of a larger city, and at the same time expenses in some particulars are less, and people like to live here. This is evidenced by the large number of workmen who own their own homes here and are among the most permanent and public spirited citizens.

We have now seen that Peterborough possesses the essentials for a manufacturing centre, namely:

Central Situation.
Cheap Electric Power.
Excellent Shipping Facilities.
Good Labor Conditions.
And Most Suitable Sites.

These advantages have attracted industries; they should continue to attract them and will do so. We should all endeavor to make these advantages known and to spread the reputation of Peterborough as a manufacturing centre and one where manufacturers will find all the essentials and accessories for successful manufacturing.

Some of these accessories may be referred to later.

Yours truly,
Civis Sum.

BRITISH GUNBOAT REFUSED TO PROTECT CANADIANS FLEEING FOR THEIR LIVES

Imperial Troops Fired on Them, And Many Bullets Struck Houseboats of Party

INDIGNANT PROTESTS TO ADMIRAL AND CONSUL—NATIVE BOATMAN SERIOUSLY WOUNDED.

Captain of Widgeon Was Appealed to in Vain by Large Party of Methodist Missionary Refugees From Besieged City of Chengtu—Sent Them Through Danger Zone Without Escort.

Shanghai, Jan. 12.—After an exciting trip from Chentu in far Western Sze Chuen Province, that took us right across China at its widest point, and through the hottest centre of revolutionary activity, a party of 25 Canadians, connected with the Methodist mission work, of whom your correspondent was one, arrived here safely to-day. At nearly every stage of the long journey of 2,500 miles to this place of security, we had visible evidence of the sanguinary struggle between Manchus and Chinese. We saw the charred ruins of cities, and many bodies floating in the river. At Hankow, the great inland port on the Yangtse River, that we reached three days ago, in our houseboat, there was a terrible scene of desolation. Thousands of houses had been destroyed.

Nor do we complete the running of the gauntlet from within sight of the Mountains of Thibet to the Pacific coast without being in peril from both Government and rebel forces. At Hokiang we were fired upon repeatedly by Imperial troops, and time and time again our house boats were struck, but by screening ourselves as well as we could, and by a merciful dispensation of Providence, we escaped unharmed. Only one of our native boatmen was seriously wounded. Several of us Canadians had a most miraculous escape.

PROPERTY DESTROYED.

We did not leave Chentu until we were ordered to do so by Mr. Wilkinson, the British Consul-General. For four months we had been besieged in the city, which is the capital of seventy million people. Frequently the Imperial troops sallied forth from behind the great sheltering wall, fifty feet through at the base, which protected the city, but each victory they won but weakened the viceroy's power of resistance and his little army of less than five thousand men, after slaughtering thousands of rebels, was itself reduced to half its original number. Finally the rebels gained the upper hand and the populace joined the revolutionists, the Government was overthrown, and the city was given over to plunder. Numerous robber bands worked almost unmolested and an incalculable amount of damage to property was sustained. It is feared that the valuable mission buildings of the Canadian Methodist church may have suffered even more severely after our departure, as the disorders continued in aggravated form.

BRITISH GUNBOAT REFUSED HELP.

It was on December 12th that we set forth under escort from Chentu. There was one hundred and fifty of us in all, composed of nearly ninety members of the Canadian Methodist mission, including the numerous children and their mothers, besides over 40 Japanese, and persons of four other nationalities. The first part of the journey was made over land. Then we reached deeper water and took house boats, splitting up into a number of different parties. Two miles above Hokiang we reached the British gunboat Widgeon and experienced a great sense of relief. "We are safe now," we thought. To our surprise the captain refused to afford us any protection. He turned a deaf ear to our appeals, and sent us on down the river through a district that for hundreds of miles was infested with marauders and full of peril. Had the gunboat been with us, it is altogether unlikely that we should have been fired upon as we were. Much indignation is felt among our party, and the British officials elsewhere who have been doing their utmost to protect the foreigners, are making a strong protest to Admiral Sir Alfred L. Winsloe, commander-in-chief of the British Eastern Fleet, and the matter has been brought to the attention of the British consul.

ROBBERY AIRED IN THE COURTS

Young Men on Trial for the Theft of $8,500

Hamilton, Jan. 13.—Shortly before noon the crown closed its case against J. D. Chilman and Jos. Acheson, the prominent young men who are charged with stealing $8,500 from the Canadian Express Co., in a sensational robbery here last September.

Kennough, the night clerk, who was found bound and gagged and told the story about masked men shattering the glass and holding him up at a revolver's point, was not called.

The announcement of H. C. Gamble K.C., crown prosecutor, that his case was ended, came as a surprise as the crown's evidence developed little that had not already been brought out at police court.

George Lynch-Staunton for the defence, stated he would seek to prove that Chilman had more money in the bank than his books showed. The first witness he called was a candy maker who dealt in detail with the earnings of Chilman's business.

C. P. R. CENTRAL K. & P. RAILWAY

Preparing to Take Over The Property in the Spring

WILL IMPROVE THE ROAD

Canadian Pacific is the Chief Stockholder in the Company—The Line to be Straightened and Put in First Class Shape.

Kingston, Jan. 12. OR some years the controlling interest in the Kingston and Pembroke Ry. Company has been held by the C.P.R. Although the local company operated the road, it was understood to be under the authority of the larger company. There is now reason to believe that the Canadian Pacific Railway, as chief stockholder in the K. & P., will in the spring take over the road in a fuller sense of the term than has been characteristic of the past. The Canadian Pacific people have been content since they obtained control of the K. and P. some time ago to merely draw the dividends and sanction improvements. The system has made wonderful strides within the last few years, although partly handicapped by lack of capital. However, if the C.P.R. decides to operate the road radical improvements will at once be instituted. There is a possibility of entire reconstruction just north-east of the city and a horter and more direct line installed.

THE WEATHER.

Local snow flurries, with a little higher temperature.

AGAINST ASIATIC INVASION

London, Jan. 14.—All the necessary legislation has been enacted in connection with the proposed construction of the Trans-Australian railway and work on the project, which is being carried out by the Federal government itself, will commence very shortly, and its completion is looked for within three years. The line starts from Kalgoorlie, 380 miles from Perth, one of the eastern limits of the Western Australian system, whence it connects with other railways through South Australia, Victoria, New South Wales and Queens,and. The new line is 1,600 miles in length and its cost is estimated at nearly twenty million dollars.

While the railway will be of great commercial advantage, the necessities of natural defence chiefly influenced Australia in making the expenditure. The country is faced with danger of a possible Asiatic invasion and has been putting her defensive resources in order ever since confederation. Modified conscription has been adopted as the military system of the country and liberal contributions of ships and men have been made to increase the British naval forces in the South Pacific.

Lord Kitchener, too, went out to advise the government on the measures to be taken to defend the country and one of his first recommendations was the construction of this railway to bring Western Australia nearer to the other states of the confederation. At present the western provinces are entirely dependent upon the assistance from the sea.

VIADUCT AND TEARDUCT.

THE LAIRD O' DONLAND—"Oh-h-h, gol darn it."

(The defeat of the viaduct by-law in Toronto is generally supposed to have been a sore touch for W. F. MacLean, M.P., who has been a warm supporter of the proposal for a long time. The proprietor of The World has a big farm up the Don Valley, and his opponents have declared he wanted the viaduct for a short cut home.)

SAD DROWNING ACCIDENT IN THE RIVER OTONABEE

The cruel waters of the river Otonabee claimed another victim yesterday, when an employee of the Canadian General Electric Company, named Henry Ivan Fairweather, lost his life. It appears that Mr. Fairweather, who has had charge of the power house belonging to the C.G.E. Company at Nassau, went out yesterday morning to cut away some surplus ice in the dam-way and accidentally slipped and fell headlong into the foaming waters, where he was carried by the eddy a short distance up stream toward the dam, where he sank. The accident was seen by Mr. Lockington, his assistant at the power house, who was powerless to render assistance.

Mr. Fairweather was about 28 years of age, and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. A pathetic circumstance connected with this sad event, is the fact that a little daughter was born to him a couple of weeks ago. Mrs. Fairweather was formerly Miss Edna Rogers, daughter of Mr. R. B. Rogers, of East City, and is at present on a visit to Mr. Fairweather's parents who reside in New Brunswick.

Every effort is being made to recover the body, a number of willing workers headed by Mr. Rogers, being engaged all yesterday afternoon in the search.

GOVERNMENT DECIDES TO KILL NEWMARKET CANAL

Entire Scheme Will Be Abandoned, the Bridges Restored At Considerable Cost, and Work Costing a Million Let Go

Ottawa, Jan. 14.—The Newmarket Canal as a public work, has ceased to be. From this time henceforth it will be nothing but a tradition. An order-in-council has been passed bringing to an end all work on the canal, and terminating forever its existence.

The order-in-council provides for the restoration of the many road bridges which crossed the canal, and which were demolished, when the canal was built. The rebuilding of these bridges will cost considerable money. The bridges will be restored on a percentage basis.

It has not yet been decided what will be done with the right of way which is Government property.

"The Government's reason for abandoning the work on the canal are all contained in the report which is being made to Council," said Hon. Frank Cochrane this morning. It is only right that we should give up the work on the canal, as we criticized it without mercy when in Opposition."

It is understood that the report says that the scheme could never be successful and that not much more water than would be needed for a motor boat could have been got into the canal.

CLEM. GORDON RESIGNS

Overseer on the Trent Canal Retires On Account of Ill Health.

Mr. Clem. Gordon, who has for many years filled the position of overseer on the Trent Canal, handed his resignation to Superintendent McClellan on Saturday, to take effect on March 1st. Mr. Gordon has not been in good health for some time, and his retirement is entirely due to this fact.

His many friends will join in wishing that the rest which he is about to take will be the means of restoring him to complete health and strength, and that he may return to his duties again in the not too far distant future, in perfect health.

WOULD SEND RICHESON TO THE ELECTRIC CHAIR

The Most Merciful Thing to be Done—A Very Sordid Cruel Murder

The Brooklyn Times says: It was not because there was any doubt nor any room for doubt in the public mind that Rev. C. V. T. Richeson was guilty of the murder of Avis Linnell that there was a general feeling of relief when it became known on Saturday that he had confessed the crime. There was little question among those who had studied the details of the crime and the actions of the accused that he was guilty of the murder of the girl he had pretended to love so deeply and sincerely; but so long as he persisted in his denia, there was room for an uneasy doubt, and even his attempt at suicide could not wholly remove the feeling. It is true that suicide is generally regarded as equivalent to confession; but in the case of a sensitive man there were many things that might make self destruction preferable to the ignominy of a public trial, where there was nothing to be hoped for but the equivalent of a verdict of "not proven." But the confession of the culprit leaves no further room for doubt as to the justice of the doom that confronts him to-day.

It was a peculiarly sordid and cruel murder to which he doomed the girl who for his sake had endured so much and so hopefully that all would be well in the end. He had unquestionably suffered more intense agony than that which he condemned his victim; but his agony is as nothing compared with his crime, in which he sought to sacrifice at once the life and the honor of the lady to whom he was bound by every tie of manhood. The temptation to marry a richer lady was the only thing that swerved him; the only thing for which he sacrificed all the maxims of the religion he was accustomed to expound; his own honor; the life of one girl and the happiness of another. The most merciful thing that can be done to him is to send him to meet his victim and his righteous Judge with the least possible delay. Every day that he is constrained to tarry on earth is but an aggravation of his torture.

Armande Lavergne Suffers a Relapse

Young Lieutenant is Seriously Ill, Following Appendicitis

Quebec, Jan. 13.—Armand Lavergne, M.P.P., the young Nationalist lieutenant, who was operated upon for appendicitis a few weeks ago with an apparent success, has had a relapse. His temperature is very low, and blood poisoning is feared.

It is believed that he will have to undergo another operation.

TWO PROSPECTORS FROZEN TO DEATH

South Porcupine, Ont., Jan. 13.—J. W. Muir and Joe Isingault, two prospectors, were frozen to death crossing Night Hawke Lake on the way to Thomas Township. The temperature was over forty below, and the stiffened bodies were found by a relief party sent out from Golden City. Three other men named Burrows, O'Connor and Jonhston, are said to be missing.

All five were on the way to do assessment work, and the first two succumbed to the cold, which was intensified by a cutting west wind.

THE TIMES

Will carry your Message to the Homes of Peterborough at the Least Possible Cost

NOT INVASION, ABSORPTION.

Americans to the number of 101,002 took up their residence in Canada in the eight months from April 1 to December 1. Annexation alarmists should view with concern the progress of this peaceful invasion.—The World, New York.

It should not be difficult to show the fallacy of the above argument of the New York daily. The one hundred and one thousand immigrants from the United States who came to Canada as stated from the first of April to the first of December of this year are largely made up of returning Canadians, Englishmen, Germans Scandinavians and Americans. At the above rate, or even up to three hundred thousand a year, they will be heartily welcomed, because the Dominion can readily assimilate them at that rate. The Europeans who come to this country from the United States bring with them the ideals and national feelings that are the outgrowth of that continent. They come to Canada under a form of government which is more nearly allied to the governments from which they sprang and their ultimate absorption by the Anglo-Saxon of Canada is a comparatively easy matter.

In this way Canada will peacefully annex the United States, and the boot will then be on the other foot.

The United States paper is mistaken in supposing that such immigrants are effecting anything so striking as a peaceful United States invasion of this country. When they entered the United States at Ellis Island from Northern Europe, did the New York World refer to their entry as a silent invasion from Denmark, Sweden and Germany of the United States? The Times would be surprised to learn that it did. Why then assume that the same people shortly afterwards leaving that country for Canada constitute anything so picturesque as an invasion?

Nationalism in the United States is a very hybrid thing. Is Wisconsin Teutonic, or that composite thing called American.

A country must have nationalism before emigrants can carry it over the borders of a neighboring country.

THE WORLD'S UNREST.

The weather is fair in Canada and calm. Every prospect is full of hope and encouragement for peace, prosperity and progress. But it is decidedly curious and significant that in so many places at the same time conditions of war, anarchy, and chaos should prevail.

Morocco, Tripoli, Italy, the Turkish Empire, Albania, Macedonia, Persia, and China are a seething pot of which nobody can foretell the outcome. These countries represent at least two-thirds of the human beings existent on this planet, and our security is menaced by their lack of it.

The whole thing is really the waking of the Oriental mind to the higher aspirations of western civilization as expressed most definitely and fully in Anglo-Saxon institutions We have kept on stirring the porridge, but we cannot have any exact security that it is not going to boil over the brim of the pot.

It will be noticed, however, that the British Empire is in most cases the arbiter of affairs. There must be a reason for that. In its expression, it lies in the dominant naval power of the Empire, but in its essence it lies much deeper. Somewhere it is said that the man who has learned to govern himself is fit to rule a city. In the fact that we have learned to govern ourselves lies the justification of the British Empire and its power.

In this strange outburst of emotion, quiescent through so many hundreds of years, the British Empire has been excessively fortunate in its titular representatives. The personal courage of the king in going into the centre of Asia at the present time we must admire, but absolute indifference to personal danger is with him hereditary. Still there will be a sigh of relief all over the Empire when he gets away.

We cannot spare King George at the present moment. Not so great a man as his father, he has, nevertheless, been bred and trained to perform certain duties for the state and he is discharging them excellently well. Consequently his exposure to Oriental intrigue and fanaticism gives us ground for apprehension. Let him come to Canada. Here every honest heart will be the breastwork of his security.

SPEED RECORDS

When the engineer climbed down from the car of the Canadian Pacific Railway's fast Ocean Mail train, at Montreal Junction recently, he had just brought his train in from what is the fastest run that has yet been made between Quebec and Montreal. Not only was the previous record beaten, but it was so badly mangled that it is now hardly recognizable as the best previous time. Owing to the various steamship delays the operating officials had been advised to rush the Ocean mail from Quebec as fast as it could with a consequence the train pulled away an average of nearly forty-five miles an hour for the whole trip of 167.5 miles. Leaving Quebec at 7.35 the train reached Montreal Junction at 11.30 p.m. making the journey in three hours and fifty-five minutes. The next previous [illegible] hour.

"Silver Greyhounds."

KINGS IN TRADE

Most of the Monarchs of Europe Have Made Fortunes by Shrewd Speculation in Business Undertakings.

Monarchs are not above making money. And perhaps the Kaiser should be given first place among reigning Sovereigns for shrewd commercialism. He makes a strong point of cultivating the friendship of financial magnates, not only in his own, but in other countries as well.

The Kaiser has some very large holdings in the Hamburg-American Steamship Line. He is extensively interested in the diamond-mine enterprises of German West Africa. In connection with the vast forests comprised in the Crown domains and on its private estates, he carries on a large lumber business. His horse-breeding establishment in Western Prussia brings him in a handsome revenue. He is the principal stockholder in the municipal lager-beer brewery at Hanover. And he carries on an extensive manufactory of pottery on his private estates at Cadinen.

GATHERING GOLDEN GRAIN

Gustavus, the present ruler of the Swedes, is a total abstainer. On coming to the throne, he disposed of his late father's extensive brewing interests. But he still retains many other profitable investments. He has money in mills and mines, and he seldom neglects to extol the virtues of the Grand Hotel at Stockholm, in which he is by far the largest shareholder.

He is a successful speculative builder. In this way: When property in the slum districts of the Swedish metropolis is going dirt cheap, along comes the King and buys it. And soon on the sites of the dilapidated buildings rise handsome houses and boroughfares which increase the value of the property many times over.

Few monarchs have shown themselves cleverer managers of a wife's property than the King of Denmark. By shrewd investments he has already multiplied its value many times. A large number of his enterprises are is associated with his Royal brother, King George of Greece, who possesses an immense fortune, which [illegible] In a great measure to undertaking certain operations in American grain about thirty-five years ago, which the closing of Odessa and other southern Russian seaports to the export of grain, owing to the war with Turkey, rendered extremely profitable.

From the sale of beer, the Prince Regent of Bavaria draws immense sums. In Munich are grim, dirty taverns in which the Royal Court brewery has held for the last three centuries. You never see a waiter or waitress. You must attend to your own wants whether you be prince or peasant. Indeed, when the Emperor visited Munich and the Bavarian Prince took those places in person and attended to them for a long time, which [illegible] themselves [illegible] out."

REASONABLE REQUEST

It was a cold night. The traveller, arriving at the only hotel in the little town, if he could be lodged for the night, was informed that it was full up.

"Per you must give me some sort of accommodation," said the stranger "unless you don't want me to sleep under the starry but chilly skies."

"Well," said the proprietor, "the best we can do is to make you up a bed in the passage and curtain it off for you." And so it was arranged.

In the dark watches of the night the traveller awoke. A freezing draught chilled him, and the sheet which had been hung up as a partition was blowing merrily in the breeze. The traveller rose and shouted for the landlord.

"What is it?" queried a voice from the stairhead.

"Please," said the stranger, timidly, "may I have a piece of pins to fix my bedroom door with?"

THE SILENT JAP

The Japanese, alone of all races, utter no sound when engaged in combat. From this national trait springs the curious regulation which prevents Japanese regiments from possessing bands bugles, or drums. Orders are given verbally, or by means of signals with the hand or sword. No trumpets sound the charge, no drums beat the tattoo, and no bugles wake the troops with their ringing calls.

A FAIR OFFER

It was a political meeting in the East during the last recess and the M. P. an exceptionally popular man, was addressing his constituents. The politician in question rejoices in a luxuriant crop of hair. The audience was sympathetic for the most part; but there was one man in the front row of the audience who made numerous interruptions. He was a coal-heaver, apparently, and had but recently been heaving coals.

"Get your hair cut!" he shouted during a most pathetic passage in the candidate's speech. The well-known catch phrase seemed particularly applicable, so a good many of the audience laughed.

But the M.P. was equal to the occasion.

"I will make a bargain with that gentleman," he said. "I will get my hair cut if he will get his face washed."

There were no more interruptions.

Brannigan: "What's the matter, Willikin?"

Willikin: "Matter enough. You know some time ago I assigned all my property to my wife to — to keep it out of the hands of — of people I owe money, you know?"

"Yes."

"Well, she's taken the money and gone off — says she won't live with me because I swindled my creditors."

THE PRIMROSE LEAGUE

The Story of the Founding of the Famous British League. The Primrose Was Beaconsfield's Favourite Flower.

It was really a chance remark which led to the founding of the Primrose League — that remarkable political organization which to-day has over 1,500,000 members.

When, on April 19th, 1883 — the second anniversary of Lord Beaconsfield's death — his statue was unveiled in Parliament Square, Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, arriving at the Commons late in the afternoon, was given a primrose by Mr. Cove, superintendent of the members' cloakroom. When he entered the Chamber he found the Conservative benches similarly decorated with Lord Beaconsfield's favourite flower. The act impressed him so much that it was discussed with Lord Randolph Churchill, who remarked: "What a story for primrose! This should be turned to account. Why not start a Primrose League?"

Lord Randolph was instantly interested. "Draw up a plan," he said, "to carry out your idea, and we will see what can be done."

Ultimately Lord Randolph and Sir Henry were joined by Sir John Gorst and Sir Alfred Slade, and in due course these four gentlemen founded the League, and constituted themselves the ruling council.

It was originally intended to admit men only, banded in companies of about a hundred, to act as missionaries of the League. Ultimately, however, it was decided to admit ladies, with the result that the membership rose from 957 in 1884 to 237,283 in 1886. Not long ago it was reported that the total membership had touched 1,700,000.

It has, of course, been said that the primrose was not Lord Beaconsfield's favourite flower, and that when Queen Victoria sent a wreath of primroses to Lord Beaconsfield's funeral and wrote on it, "His favourite flower," the allusion was to the Prince Consort — not to the dead statesman. Mr. Reginald Lucas, however, in "Lord Glenesk and the Morning Post," says that one who knew Lord Beaconsfield well declares that he habitualy wore a single primrose in his button hole when he was at Hughenden in the early spring; while another more intimate friend can speak of having seen an abundance of primrose in Beaconsfield's house in Curzon Street that had been gathered on the slopes of Windsor Castle.

THE MEAN WAY

"Talking about meanness," said an old son of the soil, who nursed a pint of ale in a chair by the fire, "you should ha' 'known old Ruby what used to keep a farm out Goswell way.

"Twenty years ago, it is that his boss went out with a tin bucket to milk a cow. Somehow or other, both the lad and the bucket disappeared mysteriously.

"No more was heard of him till he wandered back home ten years after, as rich as a millionaire, and handed the old man up with gold and diamond pins and new clothes, and gave him five thousand dollars as a birthday present.

"And d'ye think old Ruby was grateful? No'er a bit!

"'George,' says he 'wot 'ave yer done with the bucket?'

"And George left home again, wondering whether his dad was the meanest man in the world or whether that distinction was still held by the fellow who used a wart on the back of his neck for a collar-stud."

PURE ENGLISH

"My dear, I wish you would speak more carefully," said a stickler for pure English to his wife. "You say that 'Henry Jones came to this town from Sunderland.' Don't you see that it would be better to say that he 'came from Sunderland to this town'?"

"I don't see any difference in the two expressions," rejoined the lady.

"But there is a difference in the two expressions — a rhetorical difference. You don't hear me make use of such awkward expressions. By the way, I have a letter from your father in my pocket."

"Oh, dear, is my father in your pocket?" inquired the wife. "You mean that you have in your pocket a letter from my father."

"There you go with your little quibbles! You take a delight in harassing me; you are always taking up a thread and representing it as a rope."

"Representing it to be a rope, you mean, dear?"

And then he grinned a sickly grin and wished he had never started the discussion.

RUN DOWN

The council employs had formally applied, in writing, for a holiday — with salary, of course — on the grounds that he was "run down."

"I'm a bit suspicious of this run-downitis," remarked the chairman. "It's been very prevalent among the council's employés of late. I propose the applicant be sent for."

"I beg to second that."

The proposition being carried, a messenger went in search of the applicant. Presently there was a scuffling at the door of the council chamber.

"Order there!" commanded the chairman. "Officer, why do you allow that person to try and force his way into the room? Remove him instantly!"

"Beg pardon, sir," said the officer, with a smile, the breadth of which not even his own capacious palm could conceal, "it's the man you sent for — the road foreman wot's run down."

"Oh, well, let him enter, then."

"Beg pardon, sir, he can't come in, for the door!"

A Delightful Dance.

A delightful dance took place at the Armouries on Thursday evening, which was largely attended. The affair was given under the auspices of No. 3 Company. Tucker's orchestra supplied the music, while Mr. Harry Gainey was floor manager.

BIG GUN DUEL

During Crimean War to Test Merits of Big Guns a Duel Was Decided Upon Between British and Russian Gunners.

Even war, with all its grim horror has now and then a bit of fun, and enemies, pitted against each other in deadly struggle, can relax into friendly controversy. A general relates a curious incident of the Crimean War. While the British Army lay before Sebastopol much speculation went on in regard to the relative merits of certain Russian and certain British guns.

One day, during an armistice, a Russian officer of artillery came to the British lines and asked to see the commander of the British artillery.

"Your sixty-eight pounder that your people call 'Jenny' is a beautiful gun," said the Russian; "but we have one as good in the embrasure, and we should like a fair duel with her."

Arrangements were made that at twelve the next day all other firing should cease, and that the two guns should be put to the test.

At the appointed time a large number of officers were assembled to view the contest. The British sailors of the gun detachment took off their caps and saluted the Russians, who returned the compliment. The British gun, as the senior, was allowed to fire first. It struck the side of the Russian embrasure. Then the Russians returned a good shot.

The third shot from "Jenny" went clear through the opposite embrasure. The bluejackets, thinking the victory was theirs, jumped upon the parapets and cheered. But they were mistaken. In a minute our comrade Russian gun again and delivered several accurate shots. "Jenny" got a bad thump on her side, but it was no material harm.

At the seventh shot from the British side the Russian gun was knocked clean over. The British fellows cheered vociferously, and the Russians mounted the parapet and took of ftheir hats in acknowledgment of defeat. This ended the great gun duel, and more serious hostilities were resumed.

BRITAIN'S BRICK

Of the many relics of Nelson few appear so interesting as a humble little object in an obscure English town. At the Paston Grammar School, in Norfolk, Lord Nelson was numbered amongst the pupils, and one summer evening he spent some time in carving the initials H N on the wall that surrounds the school.

Years afterwards, when he became the people's idol, visitors made a point of viewing his handiwork on the wall, and precautions were taken to guard zealously this memento of the famous Admiral. But in 1841 a great storm blew down a tree, which in its fall partly demolished the north masonry. On the following morning, Mr. Rider Haggard (recently created a baronet), who was visiting the head master, spent some time in assisting to find the magic letters, and it was reserved for the celebrated novelist to discover the identical brick required.

He handed it over to the principal of the school, and to-day the brick rests enclosed in a shade bearing a suitable inscription, in the most prominent position in the school. Small wonder, therefore, that when a Norfolk scholar was asked the question, "Who was Nelson?" he replied, "He was a brick!"

NO DUCKS FOR HER

"Why is it, that in the spring a young woman's fancy is so apt to turn to clucking hens? Last year one of my best friends abandoned the footlights and sought the actor's oft-dreamed-of paradise, a little home in the country.

"As a recreation she decided to start a poultry farm, which she did with a barn-yard hen and thirteen eggs from the village store. Not having even the most elementary knowledge of poultry, she enquired of a neighbor how long eggs generally took to hatch. She received the reply:

"'Three weeks for chickens and four for ducks.'

"The neighbor met her some time afterward, and, on being asked how the poultry farming was going on, she replied, with a lowering countenance:

"'Oh, I've finished with it. At the end of three weeks there were no chickens, so I took the hen off, as I didn't want ducks.'"

EVIDENTLY A MISTAKE.

'Twas at the skating rink, and the young man was but a beginner. Wherefore he lost his balance!

He made a wild effort to grab anything in the way of support. And, as it happened, the nearest thing was a fashionably-dressed lady, also on skates. She promptly turned on him.

"You contemptible cur!" she shrieked. "Do you think I am a lamp post, or a piece of furniture, or what? You ought not to be allowed in here, you clumsy lout! What right have you to tear other people's clothes to rags, and claw them in that mad way? You are not fit—"

But the young man had now recovered his composure.

"Pardon me, madam," he remarked, "haven't you made a mistake?"

"A mistake!" gasped the lady. "What do you mean?"

"Simply this, madam," came the calm retort, "I am not your husband!"

"Accused of being me!" exclaimed a spectator. "Why, you are the very man who came knocking at my door yesterday!"

"You resented the intrusion, with force, and you didn't give me any—"

"Why, I've got something now, rather dear!"

THE GOLDEN ROE MINING COMPANY

Capitalization $500,000; Divided into 500,000 Shares; Par Value $1.00

Have decided to mine a large quantity of the Very Rich Ore shown up by recent developing work, and also intend to erect a mill to crush from 20 to 25 tons a day. This will enable the Company to pay dividends next summer. In order to provide funds for this purpose the Company now offer the balance of the 50,000 shares offered to the public in the Prospectus dated 26th day of September, 1910, filed with the Provincial Secretary, Sept. 27th, 1910. These shares are now selling at $1.25 per share until Nov. 25th. They will then advance to $1.50 per share. They will continue to advance in price as developing work proceeds. Assays got from this property run from $22.00 in gold per ton to $86,-240.40 (eighty-six thousand two hundred and forty dollars and forty cents). Part of the machinery is now at the mine—the balance will be taken in on the snow roads this winter.

The Golden Rose Mine is forty miles from Markstay Station by winter roads, and in summer it is reached by boat from Temagami Station on T. & N. O. Ry.

MILL RUN

Four and a quarter tons of ore was sent to Kingston. It averaged $50.00 in gold to the ton.

71.7 PER CENT. FREE MILLING

Four assays obtained from Hendley & Parker, Sudbury, gave, respectively, gold values of $2,419.01 $1,020.68, $787.63, $102.72. Two just recently assayed $607.20 and $393.60.

This stock is closely held, and will not be listed with any broker till the mill is installed and the first dividends paid. A small block will then be listed to make it liquid. As an investment this is second to none.

Applications for shares should be sent to

EXPENSIVE ALBUM

$200,000 For An Autograph Album With 858 Signatures of World Renowned Celebrities and Their Remarks.

Seven years ago Councillor Louis Barth, of Arad, in Hungary, commenced to collect autographs, and today can boast of possessing one of the finest collections in the world. Indeed, he recently refused an offer of no less than $200,000 for his album, which contains the names of 858 world-renowned celebrities, whose remarks have been written in forty-three languages. Already ninety-three of them are dead.

Recently he visited Marlborough House to obtain the signature of Queen Alexandra, and at Her Majesty's request left his priceless volume there for twenty-four hours, in order that she might examine at leisure his wonderful array of signatures of Kings, Queens, Emperors, Ministers, scientists, artists, and writers. Herr Barth has gone all over the world to add to his book, and has spent between $45,000 and $50,000 in travelling expenses. The Emperor Francis Joseph, who favoured him with an autograph, told him he was the only person, not a Minister, who had ever received his signature.

"I was at Biarritz one year," says Herr Barth, "at the same time as King Edward. I showed him my volume, and, in giving me his signature, he said: 'Your book is an extraordinary treasure. It has only one defect — it is not mine.'"

Herr Barth is preparing a history of how his autographs have been obtained. This book will contain in facsimile every autograph he possesses. It is to be issued in an edition of 100,000 copies, and the proceeds of its sale will be devoted to international charities.

WONDERFUL GOWNS

Dresses Rich and Wonderful That Make Women Gasp and Men Sit Up and Wonder If It Is Worth the Candle.

One of the most beautiful costumes ever turned out was that worn by Queen Mary at the Coronation Durbar, and there are no fewer than 8,250,000 stitches in the train, which is of Irish point lace.

The train had been presented as a gift by the ladies of Belfast to her Majesty, and was made by the Presentation Sisters of Youghal. It has been estimated that it would have taken over a quarter of a century for a single lace worker to complete the train, but sixty workers, working regularly, finished it in 15,000 hours.

This reminds one that at the Plantagenet Ball, held at Buckingham Palace in 1842, the late Queen Victoria impersonated Queen Philippa, in a silken dress made entirely in Spitalfields.

The dress, which was on view for several days at Hanover Square, cost, in materials alone, nearly $1250 while the gems that decorated it, exclusive of the Royal pearl necklace, headdress, and other jewels, were valued at over $300,000.

The fur that trimmed her outer robe was minever, the skin of the Siberian squirrel, the same kind of fur that Queen Philippa wore on her Court costumes in the days of long ago.

Perhaps the most expensive dress ever worn by Queen Alexandra was that in which she appeared at the famous ball at Devonshire House in honour of the late Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee. She took the character of Marguerite de Valois, commonly called La Reine Margot, her train being carried by the daughter of Sir Francis Knollys.

Her Majesty's costumes is said to have cost $1250 to make. It was of rich white satin, embroidered in gold and silver, with a high collar from which hung the train — a glorious affair of cloth-of-gold lined with silver brocade.

The Dowager Empress of Russia is always dressed exquisitely, and in the richest and most expensive materials. She received on the occasion of her silver wedding an ermine mantle which cost $60,000. It was presented to her by the nobility of the province of Kherson.

Gold-and-silver dresses are by no means uncommon. The metals, after being formed into very fine wire, are woven into cloth, and afterwards made into dresses. The women of Sumatra were the first to attire themselves in this expensive material.

Countess Paloviovetsch wore a firefly dress at a garden-party given at Benares some years ago. This unique gown had the appearance of being constructed of tongues of blue flame resting on a bed of light liquid.

The material of the dress itself was rich brocaded silk, and attached to the gown were exactly 35 fireflies. These little creatures glowed until the countess left the grounds, and doffed the most gown ever worn at a society gathering in India or elsewhere.

The Countess de Villamore once had a dress made from beetle backs, and wore it on several occasions. When attired in this strange costume she wore a beautiful scarabaeus beetle on her neck attached to a collar by a slender gold chain, which allowed it to roam about the lady's chest and shoulders.

A wedding ceremony had come to a close. The mother-in-law was overcome, and the bride dabbed her pretty eyes with handkerchief. One of the bridesmaids was also affected to tears.

"Why do you weep?" asked a groomsman of the bridesmaid "after your wedding."

She looked at him tearfully. "That's the reason, you stupid." And she sighed.

There are many a man who isn't sighing what it costs him to live.

Plumduff—Here's a man mentioned in this paper who is 103 years old and can walk ten miles at a stretch.

Men Who Don't Excercise

SUFFER FROM INDIGESTION, HEADACHES, POOR APPETITE, SLEEPLESSNESS.

Nothing so Sure to "Set Up" a Man Make Him Feel Brisk and Vigorous as Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Lack of exercise and overwork were the causes that combined to almost kill Samuel S. Stephens, Jr., one of the best known citizens in Woodstock.

In his convincing letter Mr. Stephens says:—

A year ago I returned home after a long trip, completely worn out. I was so badly affected by chronic biliousness, so much overcome by constant headaches; dizziness, that I despaired of ever getting well. I was always tired and languid, had no energy and spirit, found it difficult to sleep for more than five hours. My appetite was so fickle that I ate next to nothing and in consequence lost weight and strength. I was pale and dark rings under my eyes that made me look like a shadow.

"It was a blessing that I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. In one week I felt like a new man. The feeling of weight and nausea in my stomach disappeared. My eyes looked brighter, color grew better, and, best of all, I began to enjoy my meals. The dizziness, languor and feeling of depression passed away, and I fast regained my old-time vigor and spirits. To-day I am well—thanks to Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

For health, strength, comfort and good spirits there is no medicine like Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Beware of substitutes, and don't let any dealer palm off some other pill on which he can make more money. 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, by mail from The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

Bohemian Summer Resorts.

According to the latest statistics [illegible] $40,015,000 is expended each year by visitors from foreign countries who take the "cure" at the natural mineral spring resorts in western Bohemia, along the Erzebirge (Ore Mountains.)

This does not include the sum spent by foreign transient visitors who stop for less than eight days or by those from the various crown lands. The grand total is in no case less than $45,000,000 to $50,000,000.

Some idea of the volume of business transacted at the great Bohemian spas may be deduced from the fact that the railroad office at Carlsbad, which has a resident corps of 120, receives from outside passengers for transportation to its station alone, exclusive of baggage receipts, 400,000 annually.

The post office in the same city turns over to the government after payment of all expenses a net profit of a like amount. These figures can be multiplied by three of Carlsbad's two or three resorts depending on their natural mineral springs for cure purposes (Carlsbad, Marienbad and Franzensbad) pay $913,500 annually in [illegible] taxes exclusive of the special

MASTER OF ETON.

Canon Lyttelton Has a Passion for Beautiful Trees.

Nature study has an ardent and loyal supporter in the headmaster of Eton, Canon the Hon. Edward Lyttelton, who has kept his sixty-sixth birthday. It claimed Dr. Lyttelton at the age of sixteen when he began to learn to draw trees, which from that time onward exercised over him a most potent charm. The excitements of cricket notwithstanding, he has during a match gazed with delight on stately trees "in verdure clad."

Not very long ago Dr. Lyttelton drew in an unreported speech an interesting comparison between music and nature study. "Music," he pointed out, "stimulates the imagination, while nature study stimulates and steadies the imagination." He thinks that boys between the ages of eleven and sixteen, the most impressionable period in their lives, should be persuaded to regard nature study as a pleasure, and certainly not merely as something that may be useful in after-life.

Dr. Lyttelton denies that he is an autocrat. He regards, at all events, the genus puer with catholic and humorous sympathy, realizing that the dunce at school may possess mental faculties which sooner or later develop. Dr Lyttelton tells of a boy who, regarded as an idiot by masters and pupils, spent his holidays in Paris, bought a Continental Bradshaw, studied it intently, and ultimately knew the times of departure and arrival of every train; he eventually became, indeed, one of the cleverest of railway specialists.

Canon Lyttelton is almost perfectly ambidextrous, and when famous as a cricketer he was known to throw a cricket ball 105 yards with his right hand, and then, changing over, to throw it almost as far with his left.

Naturally this gift often enabled him by a quick change to run out an unsuspecting batsman. It is said that this little dodge of his "came off" triumphantly one day when playing for a clerical eleven, and the victim on retiring from the field was heard to murmur, "Hang it all! when playing parsons you don't expect to be diddled out."

"Silver Greyhounds."

Duel Up To Date

A contest in the air between rival aviators for a girl's hand was the feature of a one-day aviation meet arranged for at Lima, Ohio. Two of the aviators, Jack Bachelor and Bert Chambers, had been laying siege to the heart of Miss Dorothy Dale, of Tiffin, Ohio. Miss Dale refused to choose between them, and in a recent meet in that city made a trip into the clouds with both. She promised to make her decision, and intimated that she would accept the one that made the highest altitude record during the day.

Cause of Rheumatism

Many physicians believe that rheumatism is the result of over-feeding, followed by putrefactive changes in the foodstuffs in the alimentary canal; that the action of certain bacteria produces specific toxic (poison) substances which, when introduced into the blood, cause a deviation from the normal oxidation process, thus causing the condition that is designated rheumatic. In the majority of instances it is probably due to eating too much of the vegetable class of foods; in other cases it is the result of eating too much meat.

UNSINKABLE SHIPS

New Invention For Forcing Water Out of a Ship by Compressed Air, Permitting the Holes to be Repaired from Within.

If all that is claimed for the idea proves correct there will be a revolution in the work of ship-saving in the near future. Indeed, it promises to revolutionize naval warfare, for it is claimed for this new invention that ships can be kept afloat even after being rammed. In fact, they can be made practically unsinkable. The invention is the outcome of an idea for forcing water out of a ship by compressed air, thus permitting the holes to be repaired from within. The idea is a very simple one, and was suggested to Commander Marsh, of the battleship North Carolina, lying off New York, by Mr. Witherspoon, the engineer engaged in the construction of the New York railway tubes under the Hudson River.

All the experiments tried proved entirely successful. The sea-cocks were opened on the Carolina and water was permitted to fill one of the watertight compartments. Compressed air at a pressure of twelve pounds to the square inch was then forced into the compartment through a small opening. In ten minutes all the water was driven back into the river. Simultaneously with the twelve-pound pressure into the waterlogged compartment compressed air at seven pounds pressure was driven into all the surrounding compartments and a three-pound pressure into the next series of compartments, this being necessary to prevent the pressure on the original compartment buckling the sides and the dock.

Commander Marsh is most enthusiastic regarding the idea. He points out that the invention now enables them to do repairs to the hull below water-line from the inside, either after collision or during a naval battle. "Ships," he says, "are now for the first time practically unsinkable, for the water-tight compartments alone will not keep a ship afloat indefinitely. There is always a leak somewhere. All that is necessary," he continues, "is to install a system of pipes and gauges and attach them to the compressed air plant. Every warship already has such a plant for the purpose of blowing off poisonous and explosive gases, which can be utilized for driving out the water. The whole cost for a battleship is about $400. How is that for a low insurance premium against the sinking of a battleship worth $10,000,000?"

WHY CHILDREN ASK QUESTIONS

One of the Most Interesting and Valuable of Our Instincts is Curiosity and This Feeling of Wonder is a Worthy Part About Human Race.

The whole of the doing part of our nature depends, in the first place, upon a most important fact of our nature, which is that we possess instincts. All these instincts exist in order to serve our lives in one way or another, and their special business is to urge us to action. When we thus act under the influence of an instinct we commonly have a certain kind of feeling or emotion, which corresponds with the instinct that is at work.

One of the most interesting and valuable of our instincts is curiosity. In the history of the long line of beings who have produced us, curiosity is a high instinct and one that is late in appearing. We do not find it among the lowest animals, but it is conspicuous in the highest kinds of monkeys.

The particular kind of feeling or emotion that goes with the instinct of curiosity is what we call wonder. Thus, when we ask a question of ourselves, we often say: "I wonder why" so-and-so. And this instinct grows, as mankind grows, from the most trivial curiosity about trivial things until it leads men to devote their whole lives to the discovery of the laws and wonders of Nature.

Children, therefore, ask questions because they are human, and because the possession of the instinct of curiosity and the feeling of wonder is a very great and worthy fact about the human race. Without it we should not be driven on to learn and to know, and without knowing our place in the world would not be nearly so safe as it is. The trouble is that so many of us stop asking questions when we grow up.

BORN AFTER MOTHER'S BURIAL

Gruesome Experience of Woman, Who, Rescued from Death by Coroners Grave-Digger, Lived to Add to Family Birth Roll.

To be buried alive is a fate of which many persons have a nervous dread, which is by no means as fanciful as it appears. Very many cases have occurred in which a temporary suspension of animation has led to a living man or woman being actually fastened down into a coffin and even buried.

Most gruesome was the experience of the mother of Ebenezer Erskine, an Englishman, who was buried two years before her son was born! During an illness Mrs Erskine was subject to fainting fits, and from one of these she was believed to have passed away. After the usual interval arrangements were made for her interment; and the village undertaker, who also served the community as sexton, measured her for coffin. The "deceased" was duly buried, and there, but for the cupidity of the grave-digger-undertaker, her story would have ended. But a ring which had been buried on the poor lady's hand had attracted his greed, and after the funeral this worthy opened the grave by night and began to saw off the finger bearing the ring. A ringing scream from the supposed corpse almost scared the thief out of his wits, but his humanity overcoming his fear, he roused the parson's family, and the buried lady was restored to health at the expense of a finger.

A similar experience was that of the mother of the famous General Lee, whose sorrowing relatives calmly looked on while she was buried alive! So related that she was fully aware of all the incidents of the funeral, but, his mustered strength to make a trifling noise on the coffin lid when, the clods of earth began to descend heavily upon it. The sound attracted the sexton's notice, and he hastily broke open the coffin, in time to save her from suffocation.

DRUNKARDS PATRON

When Christians Decided to Merge Bacchus into St. Martin the Reputation of Former Was Handed On To Him.

What has come to be known as St. Martin Summer consists of a few lovely days about the second week of November. We hear a great deal about St. Luke's Summer; but St. Martin's Summer and his name-day, November 11th, suffer neglect — possibly because the saint was French and not English.

Perhaps, too, the knowledge that he is the patron saint of drunkards has not added to his reputation. That office came to him by accident. The reason how this doubtful honour was thrust upon him after his death was rather curious. The Vinalia, or Feast of Bacchus, was always celebrated on November 11th. Later, when the Christians decided to merge Bacchus into St. Martin, the reputation of the former was unfortunately handed on to the saint, although quite unmerited by him.

Before his conversion he was a military tribune, stationed at Amiens. When one day, so the story goes, in midwinter, at the city gate of Amiens a miserable beggar appealed to him for help, the soldier drew his sword and, dividing his cloak, gave half of it to the wretched beggar. At night, so it is said, Christ in person appeared to the astonished soldier, clad in the very cloak he had divided with the beggar a few hours before.

Another legend is that the saint, having been annoyed by the behaviour of one of the geese in his poultry-yard, ordered it to be slain and served up for dinner. He died immediately after partaking of it, and the anniversary has ever since been observed in France by the eating of goose on that day, November 11th. And even now, when the sunny days of St. Martin's Summer come round, there are but few French people who do not give a passing thought to that kindly saint who divided his cloak so that a poor beggar might be protected from the cold.

CAVE-DWELLERS OF TUNIS

The capital city of the Matmatas, the cave-dwellers of Tunis, containing about 3,000 inhabitants, is one of the strangest in the world. It is not erected upon the ground, but is surrounded in the earth, the country being a high, rocky plateau, barren, sun-baked, and swept by the simoom.

When one of these people wishes to build a dwelling, he chooses his spot, traces a circle to show its location, and then digs until he reaches the desired depth, which varies according to the number of storeys he desires. The rooms are caves hollowed out in the sides of the circular covered pit, and the bottom of the pit forms the courtyard, which is a usual feature of a Moorish house. Besides the rooms a passage is also dug, communicating with the outside world, and a door is built at the outer end.

The soil is a malleable clay, is easily cut, and lends itself well to excavation, the roof of each room requiring no support as long as it is well arched. The cave-dwellers inhabit the territory between the town of Gabes, on the Tunis coast, and the sand-hills of the Sahara.

Highest on Earth

The Loa bridge in the Chinese is the highest bridge in the world. This wonderful construction, four hundred feet high, eight hundred feet long, and stands 10,000 feet above sea-level. It crosses a great ravine some three hundred miles from Antofagasta, on the railway running from that port to Bolivia. This line is also of interest from the fact that it is the highest railway in the world, climbing at one point up to over sixteen thousand six hundred feet above sea-level.

TWO WAR PICTURES.

Reminiscences Written by a Non-Commissioned Officer Who Served During the Napoleonic Wars.

There has recently been published a book containing reminiscences written by a non-commissioned officer who served during the Napoleonic wars. In these reminiscences there is given this description of a scene after the British attack on the French forces in Alexandria: "After the action was over we were ordered to go and take all the wounded of both armies and carry them to the boats.

It was truly a horrible sight to see the French and British writhing in agonies of death, and making friendship, who had only a few minutes before been filled with rage and hatred at one another—all their fierce passions stilled, and like a hushed child, taking one another in their dying arms."

This other picture is of the scene presented by Waterloo the morning after: "When morning came I went out to see the field on which so many brave soldiers had perished. The scene which met my eyes was horrible in the extreme. The number of dead was far greater than I had ever seen on any former battlefield. The bodies were not scattered over the ground, but were lying in heaps—men and horses mixed promiscuously together. I turned away with disgust from this heart-moving spectacle. . . . I confess my feelings overcame me; I wept bitterly, and wished I had not been a witness of such a scene."

"As It Was in the Beginning."

When William Pengelly was a sailor boy, weather-bound on the coast of Devonshire, he had his earliest geological experience, and Mr. S. Baring-Gould says he was wont to relate it as in printed below:

I received my first lesson in geology at Lyme Regis very soon after I had entered my teens. A laborer, whom I was observing, accidentally broke a small stone of blue lias and thus disclosed a fine ammonite—the first fossil I had ever seen or heard of.

"What's that?" I exclaimed.

"If you read your Bible you'd know what 'tis," said the workman, somewhat scornfully.

"I have read my Bible. But what has that to do with it?"

"In the Bible we're told there was once a flood that covered the whole world. At that time all the rocks were mud, and the different things that were drowned were buried in it, and there's a snake that was buried that way. There are lots of 'em, and other things besides, in the rocks and stones hereabouts."

"A snake! But where's his head?"

"You must read your Bible, I tell ee, and then you'll find out why 'tis some of the snakes ain't got no heads. We're told there that the seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head; that's how 'tis."

Round Steak Boiled

If properly cooked boiled round steak will be rare, tender and juicy. Plunge the meat into sufficient boiling water to cover, boil rapidly for fifteen minutes, then push the kettle over a slow fire where it will simmer at one hundred and eighty degrees Fahrenheit for fifteen minutes to each pound of beef. Serve the beef with cream horseradish sauce, boiled turnips or cabbage and potatoes.

An old country woman and her daughter went into a shop in town to buy a bonnet. When she had purchased the bonnet the milliner, turning to the woman, said:—"What about a sailor for your daughter?" meaning, of course, a hat. The woman turning to the girl, indignantly retorted—"What about a sogar for yourself?"

I Am Willing To Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10,000 Worth of Medicine

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this medicine, and anyone suffering from these diseases can get a box of it absolutely free. All that is necessary is to send me your address.

I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and pay me if cured. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the Uric Acid sufferers of the world, so I can show them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, nor would I accept it now or later if you sent it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying calls to urinate. But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to listen to anyone thereafter. Happily, I am in a position now to demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to spend any money to find out; I don't ask them to believe me, nor even to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my own cost. That is surely fair.

To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars, which will be used to compound my medicine. Much of it is ready now to be sent out, all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there be thousands of them. And anyone who needs it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have a disease for which this medicine is intended, I ask you to send me some of your leading symptoms. If you have any of the symptoms in the list printed here you need my medicine and if you will write me I will gladly send you a box of it free with full directions for use. Look the symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, then write me as follows: "Dear Dr., I notice symptom number—, here put down the numbers, your age, full address, and send it to me. Address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 357 Yonge Building, Toronto, Can.

A thousand dollars I am spending for the sending of my medicine is only a necessary I am devoting to this package of medicine I send you gratis and at my expense. From you to view it, YOU incur no obligation. Just tell others who are suffering who sent you the free package.

I will give away ten thousand packages, and I will do that; and any sufferer who gets the medicine and fails to get relief and I will do that.

who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

I can say further that this medicine has been vouched for according to law as complying in every detail with all requirements. It will stop rheumatism, it will stop pain and backache, it will stop too frequent desire to urinate; it will heal, soothe and strengthen. You will be better in every way for having taken it. There is not an ingredient that can injure; not one but will benefit. All that I ask is that you use it yourself so that you may be personally convinced.

Owing to the large number of requests, I have had ten thousand more copies of my medical book printed. This book is new and up to date and contains complete descriptions, symptoms, causes, effects and cures of kidney, bladder and rheumatic diseases. All who write for the free medicine will be sent a copy of this grand illustrated medical book—the largest ever written on these diseases for free and general distribution.

If you need medicine such as I have, if you are anxious to be cured and don't want to spend any money LOOKING for cures, write me. Read the symptoms over and let me hear from you today.

These Are the Symptoms:

1—Pain in the back.
2—Too frequent desire to urinate.
3—Scalding or obstruction of urine.
4—Pain or soreness in the bladder.

VARICOSE VEINS CURED

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth caused me Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching became severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, what each found out all they wanted was my money. I continued to work on all doctors as little better than a cripple. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew their cure square and skilful. I wrote them and got Their New Method Treatment. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month [illegible] encouraged. However, I continued [illegible] longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I would only earn $18 a week as a [illegible] shop before treatment, now I am earning $25 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment."

THE ROMANTIC HAPSBURG FAMILY

Archduke Henry Ferdinand Abandons His Rank and Title in Order to Marry a Bavarian Girl of the People.

(Publishers Press News Service)

Vienna. — Another romance connected with the imperial house of Hapsburg is contained in the dry official announcement that the Emperor Francis Joseph has placed the Archduke Henry Ferdinand, brother of the Princess Louise of Saxony, and of Archduke Leopold Salvatore "on leave, with the stoppage of all emoluments."

Archduke Henry Ferdinand, who is a painter, with great distate for court life and military duties, has been living for some time in Munich. He has desired for a long time to abandon his rank and title in the same way as Archduke John Orth, Archduke Leopold Salvatore, and, more recently, Archduke Ferdinand Charles in order, as is reported, to marry a Munich girl belonging to family not of noble rank Finding this to be most difficult, the Archduke has taken the easier course of throwing up his military career

A Romantic Family

The family of the Hapsburgs has experienced a series of romances. The first among the more recent was that of the Archduke John Salvatore, known as John Orth, who completely disappeared after giving up his rank and title and marrying an actress named Milly Stiebel. He was said to have sailed for Chile on board the Santa Margaretha in July, 1890, and no trace of him has since been found.

Then came Princess Louise of Saxony, who disappeared from Dresden in 1902, leaving her husband, the present King of Saxony. She was forbidden to use her title of archduchess by imperial decree. She was divorced from the King of Saxony in 1903.

Archduke Ferdinand Charles this year ran away from his military duties and married a daughter of a court chancellor, afterwards assuming the name of Burg and living as a private citizen.

Archduke Leopold, who was a major-general in the Austrian army, renounced his career in 1902 in order to marry a Bavarian actress named Adamovich, whom he later divorced. He lives in Switzerland under the name of Wendling.

The Best Helpmeet.

All men, as well as women, like to be understood. Sympathy is their greatest help, and no woman who is self-centred, who is vain and thinks only of herself will gain the highest regard of man. She may be exquisitely beautiful, have a crowd of admirers at her feet, but she cannot bestow that wonderful happiness a plain little woman full of sympathy gives to her husband. If she understands him, is interested in him and his life-work, whether it be planting vegetables, composing music, or building towers, she will encourage him to reach his highest aim. Being beautiful will not make up for selfish indifference.

Fun and Fresh Ideas.

To remain young one must have company and enjoy it. Not a big dinner party one day, an afternoon reception the next, a late card party the following, and so on. This, for the hostess, is hard work that will quickly bring the appearance of age in its train, and, indeed, no work is more arduous. To attend to the wants of guests, to anticipate their desires, to have the whole responsibility of the success of a party is an utterly differtn thing to the bright company necessary to the well-being of the woman who leads too monotonous a life.

The limiting influence of four walls is what so many women who are housewives and mothers have to fight against, and they need company as a recreation.

Propriety.

They waltzed and waltzed to a wild, sweet strain—
The music throbbed, like a beating heart—
They waltzed and waltzed, and they waltzed again.
It seemed, in fact, that they couldn't part.

He held her close with his hand and arm,
Near to her cheek his own cheek burned,
Against his bosom her soft young form
Closely pressed as they twirled and turned.

Later, when taking her to her coach,
He caught her hand on the stairway dim.
"How dare you?" she asked, with stern reproach,
And "What do you mean, sir?" she asked of him.

—Puck.

How He Escaped.

One of the boys had broken one of the school rules, and no one would own up.

The teacher announced that he would thrash the whole class if some one did not tell him who had committed the offense.

All were silent, and he began with the first boy and thrashed every one in the class until finally he reached the last one. Then he said, "Now, if you will tell me who did this I won't thrash you."

"All right, sir. I did it," was the reply.—Ideas.

Boots and Shoes.

Shoes are one of the expenses of a toilet that may be reduced by care alone. A worn-out shoe cannot be renovated; no amount of skill will make it pass as new. The only possible way to save in shoe leather is to care properly for the shoes while wearing them. When they are taken off they should be wiped at once, and if wet filled with paper and put in a dry place (not near the first) for some hours. We do not advise putting shoes into a bag, for the sake of neatness. If boot-trees are not convenient the boots or shoes should be stood where the air can get to them, as this will tend to harden the soles.

Bottled Gooseberries

Cold Water Method.—Put in glass jars well washed gooseberries, or cut up rhubarb, fill the glass jars as full of water as they can hold, fastening on the lids under water Gooseberries rhubarb, huckleberries can be canned under water, not taking the jars out until rubber and cap are in place and fastened down tightly. They will be in perfect state until time gooseberries will come again — in other words will keep a year.

NAVAL SECRETS

Every Workman Employed on a New Warship Has to Take An Oath That He Will Reveal Nothing He Sees.

The recent appointment of Mr Winston Churchill to be head of the Admiralty recalls the fact that there is no more jealously-guarded department than that over which he now presides. The head of the Navy is the most reticent man in the Cabinet — when questions fly he comes round. Whenever an answer is given you may be quite sure that it doesn't give very much away.

All new ships are built with the greatest possible secrecy. To begin with, every man who is employed in whatever capacity on a new battleship has to take an oath that he will never reveal anything he may learn. No outsider is allowed anywhere near the building yards. When the first Dreadnought was being built, for instance, the great vessel was guarded so jealously that no one, save those actually employed on her, were allowed within forty yards. To show how strictly this order was carried out two post-captains of the Navy, in uniform, were turned back by the police and private detectives on guard.

The actual plans of a new battleship are the most carefully guarded of all the Admiralty's secrets. They are kept in rooms which rival any strong-rooms of a bank. The draughtsmen never have the whole plans in their possession. Parts are given out at a time to different men, and every draughtsman is carefully watched in order that he can take no copy of the part of the plan in front of him. So well are the complete plans divided up that even if three or four men agreed to act together they would be unable to find out much about Britain's latest Dreadnought. Whenever any portion of the plans goes out of the strong-room its movements are as carefully watched and checked as those of the keys of the room.

When the German Emperor visited Gibraltar a few years ago the greatest precautions were quietly taken, in the politest possible way, to prevent members of the Kaiser's suite seeing too much. Sentries were placed at all sorts of odd corners on board all the men-of-war. Every part of the vessels was carefully guarded, and more than one German officer who had "wandered" below was politely shown the way up to deck again.

Musician and Scientist.

There is no more brilliant scientist in the world to-day than Sir William Ramsay, who has been warning Britain that, at the present rate of consumption, her coal supply will only last another 175 years. His most wonderful discoveries have been in connection with new gases in the atmosphere, upon which such names as argon, neon, and xenon have been bestowed, and the experimental work which led to these discoveries ranks as the most refined ever carried out. Of xenon, for example, there is only about one part in 70,000,000 parts of air. Sir William devotes his leisure to music. He plays both the piano and violin and has written the words of not a few songs. The collecting of curios is another of Sir William's hobbies, and at his house at Regent's Park may be seen many queer treasures thousands of years old.

Advertisement by Water.

An ingenious machine has just been put on the Parisian market. According to details given in "La Publicité" the machine prints an announcement on the ground in water, which it sprays upon the soil in a fine shower. The letters or signs will last from twenty to thirty minutes, until the evaporation of the water is complete and as the spray of water also serves the welcome purpose of laying the dust, the intention will doubtless be regarded a much more welcome than the majority of advertising devices of this sort recently

Race Dying Out.

There is at least one native race that is not dying out. This is the Maori, of New Zealand. According to statistics obtained in the census of Maoris taken in last March, the total native population of New Zealand is said to be 49,350, an increase for five years of 1617. In addition there are 215 Maoris on the Chatham Islands. It is a matter of difficulty to ascertain the number of half-castes living at Maoris. Probably all half-castes, and a large proportion of the Maoris as well in the South Island, now live in European fashion. The health of the natives has been generally good. There has been a great advance in the observance of sanitary laws, and the Maoris are beginning to realise that the excessive mortality amongst their children has been due to unsanitary conditions.

Long Delayed in Delivery

A letter written in December, 1660 to a prominent member of the Society of Friends in Durham, Eng., has just been found in the Public Record Office, having been undelivered. A copy of the letter has been forwarded to the descendants in the eighth generation of those for whom it was intended. The letter is addressed: "For My Loving friend Richard Hickson, a butcher in Durham to be delivered to William Bywaters, Durham, paid 8d."

OXFORD SLANG

Some Queer Words Used by Undergraduates Which are Bewildering to the Freshman When He First "Goes Up".

Oxford University has a jargon of its own which is nearly called from the same kind of thing used in the public schools of England. Some of the expressions are rather bewildering to the freshman when he first "goes up" to the University.

Study, social life, and sport each have their peculiar expressions.

The first examination to be passed is Responsions, called "Smalls." The examinations are called "Schools" because they take place in the Examination Schools. After "Smalls" comes the Divinity examination which all must pass. The undergraduate calls it "divvers." Then comes Moderations — called "Mods" — and the final examination for the B.A. degree called "Greats." The preparation for these examinations are called "cribs." What the "Mods" of any term a student is not ... a public examination he has a collection of ... corrections, or "cribs" ...

A man who is reading Classics is called a "Stinks" man. If he ... Mathematics he is ... a Maths man. The tutors are ...

In ... life, too, the ... has its expressions. ... a favourite meal ... hospitality. Come to breakfast ... "second ... will ... to the ... A man who ... up the ... fast, makes the beds, cleans out the rooms, etc., is called a "scout." Breakfast, lunch, and tea are taken in one's rooms, dinner is taken in "Hall." The bill for dinners is called "battels."

An average man's day put into Oxford jargon would run something like ...

... and "keep a commencement" were ... being held every morning and evening. After "brekker" go to "sekkers." In the afternoon go and be "mitted" or take part in a football "squash." He will, perhaps, take tea in the college Junior Common Room, or familiarly, "J.C.R." At seven "Hall," after which he will read, having first, perhaps, "sported his oak" or closed his outer door to keep away intruders.

COSTLY SPITE

The most expensive act of damage ever committed by a railway worker was that of an Italian navvy employed in the construction of a tunnel through one of the mountains in the Black Forest. Having a grudge against his foreman, he succeeded one night in altering the position of the stakes which marked the course of the work. The excavators were working upon the tunnel in two sections, one from the north and one from the south, starting at the stakes. The sections, instead of being directed to the same point, were found to be twenty-six feet apart when they reached the middle of the mountain. The northern half of the tunnel had, therefore, to be entirely reconstructed, at a cost of $875,000.

KING A FARMER

King George is a monarch who does not scorn to make money by side-lines. From his model farms at Windsor, Balmoral, and Sandringham he derives a handsome revenue, and maintains a herd of several hundred superb cattle, which take prizes at agricultural shows all over the country. His Majesty is also keeping up the late King Edward's horse-breeding establishment of Sandringham, where, in addition to racehorses, he raised hackneys, coach-horses, carriage-horses, and hunters.

MONEY FROM INVENTIONS

Many of the princes of Europe's reigning houses are in receipt of big sums from inventions for which they have been responsible.

The reigning Grand Duke of Oldenburg, for example, has invented a form of propeller which most of the German warships and liners use. A cork-stud, which is selling in hundreds of thousands, has been invented by the German Crown Prince. And one of the most up-to-date aeroplanes is the invention of the Grand Duke of Hesse.

FORWARD! CANADA

Sir Thomas Lipton at a dinner in Chicago praised Canada's bigness.

"I once heard," he said, "a Saskatchewan farmer talk about the big farms they have up there.

"'We have some sizable farms,' he said, thoughtfully. 'Yes, sir; pretty sizable. I've seen a man on one of our big farms start out in the spring and plow a straight furrow till fall. Then he turned around and harvested back.'

"'Wonderful,' said I.

"'On our Saskatchewan farms,' he went on, 'it's the usual thing to send young married couples out to milk the cows. Their children bring home the milk.'

"'Wonderful,' I repeated.

"'Once,' he said, 'I saw a Saskatchewan farmer's family prostrated with grief. The women were weeping, the dogs were barking, the children were squalling, and the tears streamed down the man's face as he got into his twenty-mile team and drove off.'

"'Where was he going?' said I.

"'He was going half way across the farm to feed the pigs,' said the Saskatchewan farmer.

"'Did he ever get back?' I asked.

"'It ain't time for him yet,' was the reply.'"

AMERICAN FORESTS

They Have No Timber Fit for Paper Making.

NEW YORK — South American forests will never yield pulp timber worth importing to the United States for paper manufacture, according to Louis Chable, representative of the International Paper Company, who arrived home lately. Mr. Chable said he had made an inspection of all the important forest lands of the Southern continent and found no pulp timber fit for paper making.

WHEN WOMEN LED

The Fair Sex Has Been Well to the Fore in the Past, But Where Real Fighting Was to Be Done.

In the French Revolution women ... rose against the aristocrats. At Troyes a similar sight was seen during the champagne riots which convulsed the Aube Department of France.

At the head of the detachment which one district sent to join the "Iron Battalion" marched a splendid-looking young woman, wearing a white-knitted cap, with the Revolutionary red ribbon twined around it. Her starting-point forty miles from Troyes, this girl tramped every step of the distance between dawn and dark. She was cheered by the crowds when she arrived in Troyes.

It was a girl, too, who ... the great no-rent strike in New York, three years ago.

Nearly all the big tenements in the Bowery, the most crowded section of darkest New York, are owned by agents, who sub-let them in rooms or small flats to the poor. The rents are awful. A man will have to pay seventy-five dollars a month for three small rooms on a fifth floor.

It will be remembered that at the end of 1907 Eastern America suffered from the worst times which had been known in the States for very many years, and the result was that evictions for non-payment of rent became more and more frequent.

A REDUCTION IN RENTS

It was Cecelie Arkin, ... nineteen-year-old girl, who devised the plan of campaign, and banded together no fewer than thirty thousand families, who all vowed to pay no more rent unless a general reduction of twenty per cent. was granted. Each family pledged itself to shelter as many as possible of the evicted ones.

The struggle was a long and bitter one. Hundreds of families were turned out, but in the end Cecelie Arkin won a victory; for the agents consented, and a general reduction of ... per cent. was the condition on ... the strike was settled.

... last Carlist rising in Spain was headed by a woman. This was in 1911, and the insurrection broke out at Barcelona, in the turbulent province of Catalonia. The identity of the lady has never leaked out. She was tall, beautifully dressed, and rode magnificently.

It was rumoured at the time that she was Donna Blanca, Duchess of Braganza, and wife of Don Alfonso, brother of Don Carlos. But this surmise was proved to be false, and to this day her identity is a mystery.

There has always been a deal of smuggling along the western end of the boundary line between the United States and Mexico.

The most notorious of all these smugglers was a Mexican woman known as Tadea Urrutia, the smuggler girl. She was quite young, and extremely good-looking, and by her extraordinary talents rose to be head of a band of most daring smugglers.

A QUEEN BETRAYED

For nearly four years she reigned supreme, and then one day, as her long train of shorters (donkeys), bearing contraband goods, was crossing the Rio Grande, she was surprised by a sudden shower of rifle bullets. She had been betrayed, and a strong force of Mexican "Rurales" had been ambushed among the rocks.

One of her arms was broken by a bullet, but with splendid courage she gathered her men and rode straight at the troops.

A soldier seized her bridle. She cut him down, and for some minutes a furious fight raged. Then numbers prevailed, and she and her surviving companions were pulled down. She died in hospital a few days later.

There is no part of the world and no race which does not produce fighting women. Quite lately our Crown Colony of Southern Nigeria has been plagued by a lady of colour known as the "Omu."

Among her tribe she is reckoned officially as a man, and cannot have a husband.

After causing endless trouble to the authorities she made peace, and then coolly demanded a seat upon the legislative Council. So far this has not been granted, but it is possible we may hear more of this coal-black Suffragette.

PERSIAN WEDDINGS

Tying the matrimonial knot is a very prolonged and serious affair in Persia. In fact, a wedding may extend for a week. On the last day of the wedding the bride, who has been treated as a sort of outcast, is conducted by a near relative to a room, where she undergoes further and more elaborate decoration.

She then returns to the guest-room, and her dowry is laid before her in trays. The dowry often comprises such queer things as cheap and highly-coloured oleographs, gaudy vases, ordinances, and many useful household articles. Having kissed the earth-stone of her home, she is then given bread, salt, and a piece of gold, and thus equipped and closely veiled she is hoisted on to a gaily-adorned horse and, accompanied by a circuitous procession of friends, goes to her future home, where her husband awaits her.

"Are you a friend to William Biggs? That no-account-no-well?"

"I should think not, indeed!"

"Then you'll hardly be interested to hear that he has inherited a hundred thousand pounds."

"What? Dear old Bill!"

Asker: "How do you explain those mother-in-law jokes of yours to your wife?"

Cynicus: "I tell her they refer to my mother-in-law, and she says they are not half bad enough."

What poverty is like that of moral penury? When the head is poor, that mockery is money wealth!

Few people regret the times when they were silent, but many regret and often suffer because of imprudent speech.

EMPRESS'S DEATH MESSENGER

The Late Empress of Austria Was Warned by a Vision the Night Before Her Fate That She Would Meet Death.

A striking picture of the unfortunate Empress Elizabeth of Austria, who was so foully murdered in Geneva in 1898, is drawn by the famous French novelist, M. Camille Paoli, in "My Royal Clients". Paoli, in the course of the three visits which the Empress paid to France between 1895 and 1898, had every opportunity of studying the life and characteristics of the wife of the Emperor Joseph, and he mentions that, winter and summer alike, she rose at five o'clock, and began by taking a warm bath in distilled water, followed by electric massage; after which, even though it was still dark, she would go out into the air without informing her suite. She returned at seven o'clock, and breakfasted lightly on a cup of tea, with a single biscuit. She then disappeared into her apartments and devoted two hours to her toilet.

Her second meal was taken at eleven, and consisted of a cup of clear soup, an egg, and one or two glasses of meat juice, extracted every morning from several pounds of fillet of beef by means of a special apparatus that accompanied her on her travels. She also tasted a light dish or two, with a preference for sweets.

ALWAYS YOUTHFUL

The Empress was exceedingly proud of her youthful figure, and Paoli mentions that when she was fifty-eight years of age she looked like a girl, and had the figure of a girl and a girl's lightness and grace of movement. "I realized later that she owed her vivacious colouring to the long walks which she was in the constant habit of taking. She wore a smartly-cut tailor-made dress, all in black, which accentuated the slimness of her wasp-like waist. The beauty of her figure was a matter of which she was frankly vain; she had herself weighed every day."

The Empress was extremely careful in regard to her toilet. She could not bear to have water, even for the purpose of her toilet, brought to her in any other vessel than glass-stoppered bottles. On the other hand, she never slept on any but a hard mattress, a fact which one would scarcely have suspected from the aristocratic daintiness of her person.

VERY FOND OF COWS

One of her manias was a weakness for buying cows. Indeed, she bought one in every country which she visited for the first time. She chose it herself in the course of her walks, and had it sent to one of her farms in Hungary. As soon as she saw a cow the colour of whose coat pleased her, she would accost the peasant, ask the animal's price, and tell him to take it to her hotel.

Two strange incidents incline one to the belief that the Empress received a presentiment of her tragic end. On the eve of her departure for Geneva she asked Mr. Barker to read her a few chapters of a book by Marion Crawford, entitled Corleone, in which the author describes the detestable customs of the Sicilian Mafia. While the Empress was listening to the harrowing story, a raven, attracted by the scent of some fruit which she was eating, came and circled round her. Greatly impressed, she tried to drive it off, but in vain, for it constantly returned, filling the echoes with its mournful croakings. Then she rapidly walked away — for she knew that ravens are harbingers of death when their ill-omened wings persist in flapping round a living person.

"Again, Csaray told me that, on the morning of that day, she went into the Empress's room, as usual, to ask how she had slept, and found her Imperial mistress looking pale and sad.

"'I have had a strange experience,' said Elizabeth. 'I was awakened in the middle of the night by the bright moon beams which filled my room, for the servants had forgotten to draw the blinds. I could see the moon from my bed, and it seemed to have the face of a woman weeping. I don't know if it is a presentiment, but I have an idea I shall meet with misfortune.'"

And it was a few hours later that Luccheni killed her with a three-cornered file clumsily fitted to a wooden handle.

TOOK THE ADVICE

He was a go-ahead man, was Slickman, proprietor of Slickman's Stores, and he wanted to inspire his clerks with the same ideas. Wherefore he bought a number of big signs which read, "Do it now!" and had them hung round each department.

A month or two later a friend inquired how the plan had worked.

"Well, it worked all right," Slickman answered, dolefully, "but — but not quite the way I expected."

"How's that?" queried the friend. "Tell me what actually happened."

"At the end of the first week," Slickman said, sorrowfully, "the cashier cleared with $15,000, and the second week the bookkeeper eloped with the private secretary, three clerks asked for an increase of salary, and the office-boy took all the stamps and petty cash and ran away to sea! By Keary! no more of these big signs for me."

Not So Easy As It Seemed

Twelve persons decided to lunch together every day and agreed not to sit twice in the same order. One of the number, a mathematician, surprised his associates by informing them that their decision meant that one and one-third million years must elapse before they would again be seated in the original order. Two men can sit together only in two different ways, three in six ways, four in twenty-four, five in 120, six in 720, seven in 5,030, eight in 40,320, nine in 362,888, ten in 3,628,800, eleven in 39,916,800 and twelve in 479,160,690.

Friendship of Books

To fall in love with a good book is one of the greatest events that can befall us. It is to have a new influence pouring itself into our life, a new teacher to inspire us, a new friend to be by our side always, who, when life grows narrow and weary, will take us into his wider and calmer and higher world.

Whether it be biography, introducing us to some humble life made great by duty done, or history, opening vistas into the movements and destinies of nations that have passed away; or poetry, making music of all the common things around us, and filling the fields and the skies and the work of the city and the cottage with eternal meanings — whether it be these, or religious books or science, no one can become the friend even of one good book without being made wiser and better.

WICKERSHAM ILL

New York. — Attorney General Wickersham is reported to be ill at his home in Washington, not seriously, it is said.

When George W. Wickersham left his $100,000 a year practice with the Wall-st law firm of Strong and Cadwalader, to become President Taft's attorney-general at less than $12,000 a year it was announced that it was with great difficulty that the president persuaded him to take the job; then it was reported that the president, of the same Wall-st law firm, and powerful corporation for which Henry Taft and Wickersham had worked, did the persuading — persuaded the president to save him the place.

Before Wickersham's advent in the department of justice at Washington, he was unknown except to the bigwigs of Big Business folk. J. P. Morgan, the sugar trust, the Chicago traction people, the New York street railway concerns. From them he had secured his monumental fees, which made him at one time the best paid lawyer in Wall-st. Not only was Wickersham one of the best paid, but he was one of the brainiest.

By far the most important anti-trust suit begun by Wickersham was the case against the United States steel corporation, Oct. 27, 1911.

Leaving Horses Untied.

Police Magistrate Dumble and Chief Thompson are determined to put a stop to the habit so many people have of leaving horses untied on the streets of the city. Yesterday Sherman Killingbeck and Wm. Morton were each fined $2.00 for thos offence. The public have been warned many times against this breach of the city by-laws, but despite the warning and fact that fines have been frequently imposed, it is still being committed.

Carter is Remanded.

Fred C. Carter, the Union Life Insurance agent who was arrested in Toronto and arraigned in the police court last week, charged with the theft of $25 from the local branch of the company, was remanded until Tuesday next. The company's representative requested that this remand be made until he further investigates the condition of affairs. He said that he had discovered that there was also a deficiency in the company's Lindsay branch, and he wanted to dig into the matter further.

KING EDWARD VACUM CLEANER

You cannot clean carpets, rugs and furniture by beating. If you think you have, just try a KING EDWARD VACUUM CLEANER and you will find the article full of dust, which breeds disease.

The KING EDWARD HAND MACHINE has no equal as compared with other hand machines. It is lighter to operate and its suction is much stronger. Its suction is stronger than many of the power machines, and the dusting is done away with. One person can operate it on carpets and rugs equally as well as two, and it is about half the weight of other hand machines to carry up and down stairs or from one room to another. It is sold for less money than any of the hand machines. All machines are guaranteed.

PUSH PETERBOROUGH

Its Central Situation, Shipping Facilities and Manufacturing Sites.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—A good reputation of a city should be based on facts that will sustain it. Peterborough's good reputation has a solid basis of facts.

This city is admirably adapted for manufacturing and consequently for continued growth. It is centrally situated, and this is an advantage. It is between the two great commercial centres, Montreal and Toronto, and these markets are readily reached. Both the great railways pass through the city, and the Grand Trunk branches out in four directions. Besides being on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, it is on that railway's new line to the Georgian Bay, so that Peterborough is on the direct route of both railways to the great markets of the northwest. It has direct railway connection with all parts of the continent, and its situation makes it an advantageous point from which to ship to any part of Canada.

Peterborough is a good point at which to secure cars for shipping when they are wanted—something that at times gives trouble in other places. The large quantities of raw material brought in, as for instance to the Quaker Oats Mills, means that a number of cars are brought here every day, and are available for outgoing shipping. Then the grain routes through Peterborough, leads to empty cars passing through to the west for which the railways are glad to get freight.

With two express companies doing business here, the facilities for quick despatch are excellent, and advantageous for shipping articles for which rapid transit is required.

The Trent waterway is navigable for 170 miles. The work required to complete it to Lake Ontario is all under contract, and when that work is completed, there will be water communication with all ports by way of the Bay of Quinte. This will be of great benefit to the city, and it is so close to completion that the benefits should be realized now. And with the thirteen miles at the north and made navigable there will be water communication from Lake Ontario to Georgian Bay, and Peterborough will be on the shortest and most rapid route of navigation from the east to the west, as well as on the direct railway routes. One way to push Peterborough is to hasten the completion of this waterway. Large industries having heavy freight want water communication. The Minister has announced that the plans for the western outlet will be completed as quickly as possible and the work constructed.

Anyone driving around the city is impressed with the number of times a railway track must be crossed. This, for manufacturing, is an advantage, for a factory located in any part of the city can easily and cheaply secure siding accommodation. In the South Ward, where the larger number of industries are located, direct connection with both railways can be secured. In the Northwest and North, and also in the northern or central part of the East Ward, the Grand Trunk railway is at hand, and in the Southern part of the East Ward both railways are accessible. In all these districts there are good manufacturing sites, and railways. The interswitching arrangements between the two railways are satisfactory and facilitate shipping.

In talking up Peterborough, bear in mind its central situation, good manufacturing sites and admirable shipping facilities.

Yours truly,
Civis Sum.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

ANY person who is the sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Enter by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

THREE MILLION MATCHES

Fifteen Hundred Billion is the Number of Matches Used Annually by the Entire World for Smoking.

It has been estimated that, for each minute of time, the civilized nations of the world strike three million matches. This is said to be the average for every minute of the twenty-four hours of the day. Fifteen hundred billion is the number for the entire year.

The importance of the industry which turns out the little splinters of wood tipped with sulphur or some other material ignited by friction, is only recognized when the average smoker tries to contemplate his predicament if he had to go back to the time when he had to coax a spark from a tinder-box. Small and insignificant as it is, the match demands as much attention in the choice of the wood involved in its manufacture as any other forest product. Only the choicest portions of the best trees are suitable. Sapwood, knotty or cross-grained timber will not do. Instead of being a by-product, the little match is turned out at hundreds of mills over the country where the by-products are bulky objects like doors, sashes, shingles, sidings, posts, and cord-wood. The pines, linden, aspen, white cedar, poplar, birch and willow are the most suitable match timbers.

IT IS VERY STRANGE

How the Men Who Know All — Who Heard That Years Ago — Can Be Taken Down.

Most of us have come, some time or other, that objectionable individual who has heard that years ago," and knows everything under the sun worth knowing.

When you have, you ask him, ask him how many five cent bits, laid side by side, it would take to cover the surface of a half-dollar without overlapping the edge. He may suggest four, and may probably regard you with suspicion when you inform him that not even two of little coins can be so arranged.

When he has digested this marvel, ask him which city is the father east — Edinburgh or Liverpool — and note the look of humility on his face when you produce a map and prove to him that Liverpool enjoys that distinction!

If he is still cocksure about things in general, get him to tell you how many pennies, piled one on the other, it takes to equal the height of a quarter. Mindful of his previous failure, he may hazard eight or nine, when you promptly pulverise him with the fact that fourteen are required.

If, however, he is still obdurate, ask him how far the human eye can see on a clear day. He may say thirty or forty miles, whereupon you complete his discomfiture by informing him that ninety-five million miles is nearer the mark — the distance of the earth from the sun.

Birth Stones.

For ages certain gems have been allotted to the months, each with its significance. The list given below is one generally accepted:—

January—Garnet: Constancy and fidelity.

February—Pearl or amethyst: Purity, peace of mind.

March—Jacinth or bloodstone: Courage in affection.

April—Diamond: Unchanging affection.

May—Emerald: Ensures happiness in love and domestic felicity.

June—Agate: Ensures long life, health, and prosperity.

July—Ruby: Exempts from love doubts and anxiety.

August—Moonstone: A charm for conjugal felicity.

September — Sapphire: Ensures cheerfulness.

October—Opal: Helpfulness and happy faith.

November — Topaz: Fidelity in friendship.

December — Turquoise: Success, happiness, and many friends.

The Prodigal's Return

Larry could not get on very well with his people at home, so he enlisted, and, after a time, went to India.

After some years he returned to his native village. How surprised the old folks would be! He walked along the village street in his smart-looking uniform, his heart beating fast as he neared the old home. Opening the gate, he stepped up the gravel path. Just then a ferocious dog rushed out and grabbed the soldier's leg. Shaking the dog off, he speedily regained the road, and was standing on the other side of the fence when his old father came out.

"Ah! my son," said the old man, "like the prodigal, you have returned."

"Yes," growled the soldier; "but it's your confounded dog that's enjoyed the fatted calf."

On Inspecting Trip.

Mrs. Annie Brown, Toronto, is in the city on an official visit. She is the Government inspector of factories, shops, &c., her duties being to examine and inspect the lavatories for women as well as other sanitary conditions.

Dr. Bingham returned on Monday last from a ten days' visit to his daughter, Mrs. George Stevenson, 40 Chestnut Park, Rosedale, Toronto, where he spent a very pleasant time.

INTENTIONS OF GREAT BRITAIN

Two Great Nations Must Not Be Embroiled by Actions of Any Individual, Says British Foreign Secretary.

(Publishers Press News Service)

London. — Referring to the Persian question during a discussion of foreign affairs in the House of Commons, the foreign secretary, Sir Edward Grey, said that the Anglo-Russian agreement was not intended to impair the independence and integrity of Persia. A declaration to that effect had been made to the Persian Government, but, he added, Great Britain was not undertaking any obligation to protect the integrity of Persia.

The Russian Government, continued the Foreign Secretary, had demanded

BY UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD.

TREASURER SHUSTER

that Mr. Shuster should be withdrawn. The British Government had said that it did not object to that demand, Mr. Shuster's intentions in appointing British officials in Northern Persia were good, but the spirit and intention of the Anglo-Russian agreement could not be permitted to be upset, and two great nations embroiled by the action of any individual no matter how good the intentions were.

After what had happened he agreed with Russia's demand that the consent of the British and Russian legations should be obtained for the appointment of foreign advisers to Persia.

In conclusion, Sir Edward said that as Persia was unable to pay any indemnity he hoped Russia would be induced not to press that demand.

Philip Edward Morrell, Liberal, said that a poorer excuse for taking away the independence of Persia than that advanced in the case of Mr. Shuster had never been put forward in the House of Commons. The exact crime committed by Shuster, said Mr. Morrell, was that he did not call at the Russian legation as often as he ought to.

A Frenzied Population

The Tehran correspondent of the Times says that a grave situation has arisen at Shiraz, capital of the province of Fars. The chief mollah, Mirza Ebrahim, has stirred popular fanaticism against the British. He has decreed that the Imperial bank notes are unclean and as a result they are being presented at the bank wholesale for payment, while the shopkeepers refuse to sell even the smallest article to the Indian troops. The leaders of the religious bodies are present in their resistance to Russia as if they are preaching a holy war. The Cabinet refuses to resign and it is difficult to see how Russia can obtain other than a poor victory against the frenzied population in their present state of mind.

NEW BATHING SUITS

New York.—Styles on bathing suits are only in the way thinks Miss Dorothy Taylor, the young New York society woman whose abbreviated costume on European bathing beaches last summer shocked many American shops. Trousers or trunks are less clumsy. Only prudish, silly people, with naughty minds see the harm in a "skirtless bathing suit," she says. "When I go swimming, I go into the water, and I wear silk trousers, or trunks and a long silk jersey, which reaches almost to my knees."

PROFESSIONAL ETIQUETTE

Some Barristers' Curious Customs and Traditions Belonging to the Old Country.

From the day when he eats his first student's dinner to the day when he pockets his last professional fee, the man of wig and gown in England has to observe customs and to obey traditions such as the members of no other learned profession have any knowledge of and which are not even known in Canada amongst the lawyers.

The Temple, where for the most part the would-be Lord Chancellor has his legal nursery, is an perfect nest of old-world observances, linking it with the far-away time when it was the home of Crusading Knights, who feasted, six and more centuries ago, on the very spot on which the young Templar of our day eats the dinners that go some way towards justifying him for his wig.

Brothers All!

The very grace that heralds his meal and the grace that concludes it are the same, in the Inner Temple, but the Knights of the Cross listened to when the Plantagenet Kings were wearing their crowns. Like their martial predecessors, the Benchers file into the Middle Temple Hall preceded by the mace, the substitute for the old-time battle-axe. Their entry is heralded by a loud blow of the mace on the floor, as was that of the former Knights Templar of old by a similar blow with the butt-end of a spear; and the grace is preceded by three blows with a wooden mallet, the ancient knightly form of invoking the Trinity.

Barristers and students mingle and eat together at the same tables, without any regard to seniority — a survival of the ancient Templar practice of the essential principle of brotherhood. If one of them is dissatisfied with his food, he may send a sample of it to the Treasurer for his verdict, just as the most junior templar in King John's time would submit his food, which he disapproved of, to the Senior Knight; and the fragments of the modern Grand Day banquet are given to the servants of the Inn just as the surplus food was always given by the Knights of old to the poor.

The Knights Templar were summoned to the hall of feasting by the blowing of a horn; and to-day the Middle Templar is similarly called to the table by blasts of the very horn which summoned his predecessors in Elizabethan days. These, and the arrangement of messes, the ceremonials of bowing, the circulation of the loving-cup and many another custom, all serve to link the Templar of to-day with his martial "forefathers" of long-dead centuries.

Briefs and Fees.

And those are but a few of the many quaint customs and regulations which the man of wig and gown must observe, if he does not wish to get himself into trouble with the authorities. When he is qualified to accept briefs and to play the part of a counsel "learned in the law," he must walk very warily to avoid the countless pitfalls of etiquette that mark his path to the Woolsack.

However an empty purse may tempt him, he must not accept a professional fee that falls short of the irreducible minimum, with a half-crown added for the clerk, whether he has one or not. Nor must he accept less than the fee, however big it is, that is marked on his brief for all to see.

However much he may yearn for clients, he cannot even see one unless through the introduction of a solicitor; and the solicitor must be present at the interview. Between him and the litigant whose cause he is to plead there is a gulf which only a solicitor can bridge. And when the solicitor appears at his chambers, bearing the coveted brief, it must on no account be handed, not to Mr. "Wig," but to his clerk, and it is the clerk, and not the master, who arranges the delicate matter of fees.

No Touting Allowed.

Some professional men may touch for clients; but not so the barrister. It will be an evil day for him when he starts brief-hunting, though he may be starving for lack of golden guineas. If he calls at a friendly solicitor's office for a gossip, or accepts an invitation to a dinner or a dance at his house, he is going perilously near the danger-line. If he is a wise man he will avoid the company of solicitors and pass them by, like the Levite, "on the other side."

On circuit the watchful eyes of Etiquette are always on him. Even for the sake of company, if he be a sociable man, he must not travel there by any class but the first; nor may he reach an Assize town earlier than the day before the list opens.

However much his services are wanted on another circuit than his own he must turn a deaf ear, unless his brief comes to him marked with a special fee of at least fifty guineas, in addition to the fee he would receive on his own circuit. If he is unable to appear in any case for which he is retained, he must provide a substitute; for whose services, however, he may pay what he pleases. The fee he puts into his own pocket.

Even his professional dress is regulated for him to the extent that he must not appear in court in any coat but one of sober black; nor must he show his face in court if he is carrying the blue bag which may be his familiar companion in the street and train. Unless he is entitled to carry a red bag (and this he may not buy—it must be given to him by some friendly senior), he must be content to make his appearance with his briefs and papers under his arm.

Death of Mrs. Hall.

There passed away on Friday last an old and esteemed resident of Peterborough, in the person of Mrs. Hall wife of the late Albert Hall, in her 80th year. The deceased was well known and highly respected. The funeral will leave the family residence this (Monday) morning at 10 o'clock a.m., and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery for interment.

To East City.

The Mayor and Council propose to take up the matter of street railway connection with East City at once. Some time ago The Times made some suggestions regarding this matter, and it might be well if these were taken into consideration. A new bridge is badly needed at Hunter street, as the present structure has about served its day and generation. We intend to refer to this matter again in a day or two.

Our New City Editor.

Mr. Thos. J. Holden, an experienced journalist, will assume the duties as city editor of The Times to-day. It is our purpose to practically double the quantity of reading matter in The Times in a few days, as well as improve the quality. We appreciate the indulgence extended to us by our readers, while the work of installing new plant is going on and we will endeavor to make it up by giving them a much improved and better paper heretofore.

Death of an Otonabee Resident.

On Saturday morning, Mr. Wm. Weir, an old and highly respected resident of Otonabee, passed away, after a somewhat prolonged illness. Mr. Weir had resided in Otonabee the greater part of his life, and had many friends who will regret his demise. He was a carpenter-contractor by trade, and a Presbyterian in religion. He is survived by his widow six daughters, Mrs. Joseph Steele of Villiers, Mrs. John Cammell, and Mrs. George Renwick of Asphodel, Misses Maggie, Annie and Ethel, of Otonabee and one son, James, of Weyburn, Sask.

A Free Concert.

A free concert will be held in the recreation rooms of the Armouries tomorrow, Tuesday, evening. It will be held under the auspices of the regiment, and members of the regiment are invited to bring their friends and join in making the event as successful as the concerts that have preceded it. The concert will commence at 8.30. A feature of the programme will be a demonstration by the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium class. There will be ample accommodation for all, and an enjoyable evening is promised.

Crows are Plentiful.

Lindsay Post: There are quite a number of crows in this neighborhood They have been here all winter and have been seen from time to time in small flocks of two or three. A member of the Post staff saw two flying south yesterday and when coming to work this morning heard another cawing loudly as he flew here and there looking for his breakfast. There are always a few in sheltered groves, but this winter they stayed in larger numbers than usual Like a good many "weather prophets" we know, they must have been expecting an open winter.

Got Verdict for $150.

On Saturday morning judgment was given in the case of George Carter vs. the Toronto Railway Co., awarding Carter $450 damages and the costs. Mr. D. O'Connell represented Carter, while Mr. J. W. Curtis of Toronto, appeared for the Toronto Railway Co. This case was tried at the County Court sittings before His Honor Judge Hincks in December last, when Geo. Carter of this city, formerly a conductor in the employ of the Toronto Street Railway Co. brought a claim for damages against the company for $500 for injuries received while in their service.

Change in Lakefield Firm.

Lakefield News: Last week a change was made in the personnel of one of our leading business houses, when Mr. T. J. Watson was admitted as a partner to Mr. Roland Johnson. Mr. Watson has been in the employ of Mr. Johnson for the past seven years, commencing as parcel boy, and as a recognition of his faithful and valuable services Mr. Johnson has taken him in as a partner and given him full charge of the Lakefield stores. The firm will be known as the Roland Johnson Co., and with two such enterprising men at the head is sure to enjoy continued success. Mr. Watson's many friends in this vicinity extend congratulations on his advancement.

Class of Military Instruction.

Sgt. Fletcher of the Royal Canadian Dragoons is in the city, and has commenced a class of instruction for officers and non-commissioned officers of the 3rd Dragoons. The first class was held on Monday night last, when the following officers reported for duty: Lieut. Paul Trebilcocv, Lieut. G. K. Rackham, Lieut. Garnet Greer, Lieut. George Lundy, Lieut. Allan Mann and Lieut. Robt. Cleghorn. Several non-coms were also enrolled. This class will meet hereafter on Monday, Tuesday, Friday and Saturday nights at the armouries. On Wednesday of each week Sgt. Fletcher will hold a class of instruction in Colborne, and on Thursday of each week in Millbrook.

This is an entirely new departure on the part of the department and it will undoubtedly prove of great assistance in furnishing qualified officers for the rural corps. At the end of the term the officers will take a two weeks' course at Toronto before writing on their examinations.

"Joe" Reynold's Good Luck.

Old timers will remember "Joe" Reynolds, who was for years employed by the Calcutt Brewing Company, as driver of a delivery wagon. Mr. Reynolds was a local violinist of some note, and played for nearly all the dances given in Peterborough and surrounding district for years. He went to Vancouver about 15 years ago, where he apparently has done well. The World of that city says: 'Mr. Joseph Reynolds, Vancouver's pioneer musician, has just disposed of his residence on Homer street. The growth of the city's business district has crowded him out, and a Winnipeg syndicate required the property for a large apartment house, that is to be erected on the site in the spring. There was just one cypher difference between the purchase price paid for the lot over 15 years ago and the figure at which he disposed of it yesterday—but that cypher made a big difference, for it was on the right end. The lot was bought for just $2,500. The Winnipeg syndicate paid Mr. Reynolds $25,000 for the property—and they were getting it cheap at that."

IN MATCHTOWN

Fortunately No Faith Was Required, For She Had None.

"I had no faith whatever, but on the advice of a hale, hearty old gentleman who spoke from experience, I began to use Grape-Nuts about 2 years ago," writes an Ohio woman, who says she is 40, is known to be fair, and admits that she is growing plump on the new diet.

"I shall not try to tell you how I suffered for years from a deranged stomach that rejected almost all sorts of food, and digested what little was forced upon it only at the cost of great distress and pain.

"I was treated by many different doctors and they gave me many different medicines, and I even spent several years in exile from my home, thinking change of scene might do me good. You may judge of the gravity of my condition when I tell you I was sometimes compelled to use morphine for weeks at a time.

"For two years I have eaten Grape Nuts food at least twice a day and I can now say that I have perfect health. I have taken no medicine in that time—Grape-Nuts has done it all. I can eat absolutely anything I wish, without stomach distress.

"I am a business woman and can walk my 2 or 3 miles a day and feel better for doing so. I have to use brains in my work, and it is remarkable how quick, alert and tireless my mental powers have become." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

When Nostrils Are Plugged Your Catarrh is Bad

BY ACTING TO-DAY YOU CAN QUICKLY CURE CATARRH AND AVOID BRONCHITIS, PERHAPS CONSUMPTION.

Most Agreeable and Surest Cure is Catarrhozone, Which Cures Every Curable Case.

Catarrhozone proves especially good in those chronic cases where mucous drops down the throat, sickens the stomach, and pollutes the breath. When the nostrils are stuffed, only a few breaths through the inhaler are needed to clear the passages, and where there is coughing and sore bronchial tubes the soothing, healing properties of Catarrhozone act almost as magic.

Once you stop taking medicine into the stomach and get the healing oils and pure balsams of Catarrhozone at work you can be sure of quick and lasting cure for nose colds, catarrh weak lungs, bronchitis, and Speaker's sore throat.

13 YEARS OF CATARRH CURED.

"As Catarrhozone has cured me of a Catarrhal Cough and Asthma that lasted thirteen years, I feel I can honestly recommend it. I really used all kinds of medicine, but Catarrhozone was the only one that did any real good. I am entirely cured—have no cough, no bad breathing spells, not a sign of a cold or catarrh about me. But I will always occasionally use 'Catarrhozone.' I prize it so highly.

VOL XXVII NO 13 — PETERBOROUGH ONTARIO, TUESDAY, JANUARY 16 1912 — PRICE TWO CENTS

WILL EXPROPRIATE PORTION OF ARMOUR ESTATE FOR SCHOOL SITE IN THE EAST WARD

SUCH WAS THE BOARD OF EDUCATION'S DECISION LAST NIGHT.

The Three Acres at the Corner of Weller Street and the Monaghan Road, the Only Available Site Yet in View for New School in West City—No Definite Action re This Question Taken, But Board Still Lean Favorably Toward This Property Providing the Price is Reasonable.

The Board of Education met in special session last night, mainly with a view to receiving the report from the special committee appointed some time ago to select desirable sites on which to erect new and modern school buildings in East and West City.

The committee had previously reported in favor of six acres of the Armour Estate at the corner of Concession and Hunter streets as the only desirable site available in the East; and that they had secured an option on three acres of the property owned by the Toronto Savings and Loan Co., at the corner of Hunter street and the Monaghan road, in the West.

Subsequently this report met with considerable opposition from the City Council and some citizens on the ground that the lots mentioned were not sufficiently central to be desirable, and the committee pledged themselves to thoroughly investigate conditions in both wards, and consider any other desirable sites that might be found available. Their research resulted in the committee returning to the Board last night with the following recommendation:

REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON SCHOOL SITES FOR THE EAST AND WEST WARDS.

To the Members of the Board of Education,—

Gentlemen,—

Your ... leave to report ... as follows:

Providing a satisfactory agreement can be entered into between the Board and Mr. Frederick Bartlett, he be employed as architect for the school buildings to be erected, one in the East Ward and the other in the West Ward, and that the chairman and secretary be authorized to execute such agreement.

And that the Committee be authorized to take the necessary steps to acquire the six acres in the East Ward, being on the corner of Hunter and Concession streets, and known as The Armour Estate property, to be used as a site for the West Ward school. And also to acquire at the best possible price the property on the corner of Weller street and the Monaghan road, owned by the Toronto Savings and Loan Co., for the West Ward school, or other property in that vicinity to be approved of by the Board.

Dr. M. A. Morrison, chairman of the Committee, submitted the foregoing report, which was unanimously adopted.

The Board here unanimously endorsed the following resolution, which authorizes their solicitor to take expropriation proceedings by which to acquire the six acres of The Armour Estate picked upon Moved by Dr. Morrison, seconded by Mr. T. H. Adams,—That the Board proceed to expropriate for the purpose of a school site the piece of land belonging to The Armour Estate, consisting of about six acres, and being that part of block B east of Concession street on registered plan, No. 1A, City of Peterborough, situated at the north east corner of Concession and Hunter streets, and having a frontage of 510 feet on Concession street and 510 feet on Hunter street. And that the Board's solicitor take the necessary steps to carry out the provisions of this resolution.—Carried.

SITUATION EXPLAINED.

Dr. M. A. Morrison, in submitting the foregoing report of the special committee on school sites, explained that the committee had spent considerable time and gone to much trouble in investigating available sites for the two new schools to be erected the coming summer. In West City they had an agent secure prices on property in the vicinity of the present school. They could acquire the Drain, Strain and Glover properties, with land in the rear of two other properties—only 2¼ acres in all—at a valuation of $6,300. These properties would give an "L" shaped site comprising 196 feet on Mark street, 342 feet on Robinson street and extending back on the east side 346 feet. But the committee concluded this property to be too high priced especially when the value of the present school property, which would be included in the new school lot thus obtained, is taken into consideration. There is another available lot owned by the Burnham Estate lying between St. Luke's rectory and Mr. Peck's House, extending from Roger to Concession streets, and containing three acres less one lot. This is priced at $4,500, and considered too high for the quantity of land and its location.

Dr. Morrison then went on to say that in the committee's opinion the six acres of the Armour Estate still remains the only acceptable site in view. They had offered $1000 an acre for this property, however, the trustees had refused on the excuse that conditions rendered it desirable that the land be held for some time yet. Hence in order to secure the lot expropriation proceedings, which are within the Board's power, would have to be resorted to. This lot, situated at the corner of Hunter and Concession streets, the committee contended to be very desirable and the most central of all the sites available. It stands midway between the ward's northern and southern boundaries and pupils attending from the west would have no greater distance to travel than those from the north and south. Then urged Dr. Morrison, it is not good policy to erect a large and modern school on a diminutive lot; neither would it be wise to sacrifice the adequacy and appointments of a new building to an abnormally expensive lot. And in securing the Armour Estate property, we would have the present school property as an asset, the disposal of which would permit of more money being available for the new building and equipment than were we to purchase the higher priced properties adjacent to the present school premises.

In the West Ward, concluded the speaker, it is more difficult to secure a site. We have tried to get sufficient land within the corporation, but all the available sites are either too far north or too expensive. One lot we picked upon would cost $15,000 by reason of the house erected thereon, and the committee feels that it would be undesirable to sink so much money in a site alone. We must bear in mind that our school territory is always ... by near the boundary and territory even over the boundary that must eventually be annexed, must be afforded school privileges. Therefore, looking ahead of us, as it is our duty, we think that the most desirable site available is that at the corner of Weller street and the Monaghan road owned by the Toronto Savings and Loan Co., as previously recommended by us. We have an option on this land, but we do not yet know for certain if it can be purchased at a fair price or not; therefore, we do not wish yet to tie ourselves up in the matter, but be at liberty to negotiate for this site or another should one offer.

Mr. W. H. Hill heartily agreed with the report and Dr. Morrison's explanation. We want, he said, to erect good school buildings on large lots. The Queen Alexandra school to-day is suffering for want of sufficiently spacious play grounds. During intermission one may any day see 150 boys crowded into a small playground and 150 girls on the sidewalk. Similar conditions exist at the South Central school, where 250 boys and 250 girls are divided and enclosed within ridiculously abbreviated playgrounds. Such conditions are a shame and a scandal to a progressive city like Peterborough. Almost everyone knows that it is more difficult to deal with school children who have not sufficient area in which to play during intermission. Regarding these two new schools, if we don't get ample ground now we never will. Toronto is spending $900,000 on school grounds alone and Belleville is purchasing six acres on which to erect a school similar to those we are going to build. It was a mistake to sell any of the King Edward school grounds—six acres would not have been any too much, and it has been suggested that we purchase another three acres south of the present property. At the Queen Alexandra school the lot on which the little mission church stands was offered the Board a few years ago for $1000, but was refused, and I then contended it to be a mistave not to accept the proposition; to acquire that land to-day would cost a considerable advance on $1,000. In conclusion Mr. Hill urged that there is not a nicer spot in East City on which to erect a school that the Armour Estate. He had interviewed a large number of citizens in that ward most of whom had assured him that the majority of citizens across the river approved of the Board's selection. In the West more difficulty in securing a desirable lot must be expected as property is much more expensive there than in the East.

TO PAY ACCOUNTS.

Dr. Morrison's motion to pay Mr. Bartlett's account of $50 for drawing plans from which to enlarge the East City school, if such a step was considered advisable, was carried.

This account had been overlooked by mistake.

APPOINTED TO LIBRARY BOARD

Mr. W. H. Hill submitted the following:

Gentlemen.—Your committee on appointments beg to report as follows: Owing to the retirement from the Public Library Board of Mr. D. Walker, your committee recommend that Mr. W. G. Morrow be appointed a member of the Board for the term of three years from the 1st of February, 1912. During his term as Mayor Mr. Morrow was an ex-officio member of the Board.

The report was adopted.

There were present Chairman John Crane and Messrs. Col. Miller, T. H. Adams, I. M. Hayes, Dr. Burnham, R. F. Ackerman, W. H. Hill, and Dr. Morrison.

Mayor W. H. Bradburn Dines The Aldermen and City Officials

A very enjoyable and interesting function took place at Hooper's handsome Palm Parlours last night when Mayor W. H. Bradburn tendered a banquet to the Aldermen and City Officials, together with ex-Mayor Morrow, and Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P. The repast was a recherche one in every respect, served in Mr. Thos. Hooper's well known efficient and acceptable manner.

The toast list was an exceedingly interesting and lengthy one, including all the "jolly good fellows" present. It savored exceeding of municipal politics, however, inasmuch as his worship and each chairman of the several City Committees outlined their policies for the year 1912, which included many expensive, but much needed improvements, street and otherwise. George street is to be paved, East and West City to be connected by a new bridge in the neighborhood of Sherbrooke street, the hog pens cleared away from the Market Square, more parks and breathing spots provided is possible, and above all cheap power for municipal and domestic purposes. It was in truth a mayoralty function at which pleasure and the City's interests were commendably combined, and the new Council, headed by its indefatigable Chief Magistrate, have in speech inaugurated a policy of progressiveness which The Times is sanguine of being fulfilled as opportunity and available funds offers. In fact, the Aldermen gathered around his worship's festive board last night had the courage of their convictions in presenting a working slate for 1912 replete with very many desirable inovations and improvements for this electric city of ours.

TOASTS.

The first toast on the list was the King, and was proposed by Mayor Bradburn, who presided as chairman and was responded to in a hearty manner by those present by the drinking of the King's health.

A toast to the City Press was proposed by Mayor Bradburn, and responded to by Mr. W. H. Moore, who made a few complimentary remarks to the new Council, and gave a brief history of the Trust Commission, since its inception, and also advocated Government by Commission.

Ald. Gordon proposed a toast to the Water Commissioners, and made a few jocular remarks in reference to that body. Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman of the Commission, responded in a neat speech, in which he dealt briefly with the duties connected with that department.

The next was to the Police Commissioners, and was proposed by Ald Duffus. He complimented the Commissioners on the excellent manner in which they had performed their duties during the last year, and hoped that the good work would be continued during the present year. His Honor, Judge Huycke, who is a member of the Commissioners, responded on their behalf, and called attention to the growing need of addition to the force in order that the good moral conditions of the city might be maintained.

His Worship Magistrate Dumble, as a member of that body, also made a few remarks complimenting the force on their work in the past year. He outlined a policy which he believed would be for the interests of the citizens, in which was included the covering of the Market Square, heating of the market building, and beautifying the city.

Mayor Bradburn also responded to this toast, and approved Judge Huycke's suggestion, that an addition be made to the force. While he admitted that it would incur more expense, he was of the opinion that it would be a benefit to the citizens in general.

Ald. Buller proposed a toast to the Public Library Board, in a short address, which was responded to by Mr. E. H. D. Hall, chairman of the Board. Mr. Hall was pleased to note that ex-Mayor Morrow, had been appointed as member of the Board, and hoped that during the year the Council would see fit to grant them adhitional funds for the maintenance of the Library.

Ex-Mayor Morrow proposed a toast to the Provincial Legislature, and in doing so, took occasion to congratulate Mayor Bradburn on his appointment to the Office of Chief Magistrate. In dealing with Judge Huycke's suggestion of adding new members to the Police Force, he recommended that two additional men be added to the department, as was recommended by Chief Thompson in his last annual report.

This toast was responded to by Mr. E. A. Peck, the member for West Peterborough. Mr. Peck jocularly remarked that he was in the same position as Ald. Gordon and Mr. T. F. Matthews, in as much as he was newly elected. He hoped the citizens of Peterborough would deal with the Hydro-Electric proposition in a manner that would result favorably, as regards the improvement of the present conditions, and explained that ... islature is more important to us ... the Dominion ... as much as to that particular body, we are indebted for our education and municipal organizations, that appealed to us in a stronger sense than many of the Dominion Government issues and he concluded by hoping to see the hopes and ideals of the Mayor and new Council for this year, fully realized.

Sheriff Hall proposed a toast to the Board of Trade, which was responded to by Mr. V. Eastwood, the chairman of that body. Mr. Eastwood in responding on behalf of that body, expressed the hope that every member of the Council would eventually become a member and material ly assist in the propogation of the work of the Board of Trade.

A toast to the chairman of the various committees was proposed by Ald. Morgan, incorporating the Board of Works, Property Committee, Finance Committee, Fire Water and Light Committee, Legal Committee, and Manufacturing Committee. These were responded to by the chairmen of the committees respectively.

The next toast was proposed to Mayor Bradburn, by Ald. Duncan, to which the Mayor heartily responded. In a neat speech he outlined his policy for the coming year, in which he made some valuable suggestions and which was met with favor by those present.

A toast to the City Clerk, City Treasurer, Tax Collector and Engineer Hay was proposed by Mr. T. F. Matthews, and was responded to by them individually.

Chief Thompson being called upon to say a few words on behalf of the Police Department, stated that it had always been his ambition as Chief Constable to render efficient service to the city, and whether his stay be long or short, he would always endeavor to maintain that principle.

Chief Hegard, of the Fire Department, was next called upon, and in a short speech, congratulated the Mayor upon his election and also the new members of the Council.

Toast to the press followed which was responded to by the press representatives present, and what proved to be a most enjoyable evening, was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

LANCASTER WILL PRESS AT ONCE HIS MARRIAGE BILL

SAYS MR. WILL INTRODUCE TO-DAY, BUT IT MAY BE SQUEEZED OUT.

It's Directed Against the De Temere Decree—Declares Certain Marriages Shall be Valid in All parts of the Dominion—Canonical Decree or Custom Not to Affect the Rights of Parties.

Ottawa, Jan. 15.—"I am going on with it on Monday."

This was the emphatic statement of E. A. Lancaster, M.P., for Lincoln, with reference to his amendment to the Marriage Act, which, whenever it does come up, is well calculated to raise a breeze in a quarter dangerous to the Government.

The member for Lincoln certainly is in earnest about his bill. He moved for leave to introduce it almost as soon as the House met and it is number three on the list of bills. It is not, however, a Government measure, and there are always ways by which the Government can hold back a private bill which is likely to embarass it.

Mr. Lancaster was asked as soon as the House reassembled when he would bring the bill up, and replied that he was waiting until there was a full attendance of members, assuring him of an adequate debate. It does not seem likely, however, that he can get his measure before the House to-day as there are a number of Government measures which will have precedence of it.

IS WELL POSTED NOW.

Mr. Lancaster has spared no trouble to inform himself thoroughly on the question and promises to have something to say which will be worth listening to.

The bill is a short one, but has in it all the elements of a fine debate. It is, of course, aimed directly at the ne temere decree. It consists of two clauses, the first of which declares that every ceremony or form of marriage performed by a person duly authorized by the laws of the place to perform it shall be deemed valid, ... Canada, notwithstanding any differences in the religious faith of the person so married and without regard to the religion of the person performing the ceremony.

DECREE CAN'T AFFECT IT.

The second clause declares that the "rights and duties as married people of the respective persons married as aforesaid and of the children of such marriage shall be absolute and complete, and no law or canonical decree or custom of or in any Province of Canada shall have any force or effect to invalidate or qualify any such marriage or any of the rights of the said persons or their children in any manner whatsoever."

THE LATEST DECREE

London, Jan. 15.—The Home Rule excitement is becoming intense, especially in Ulster and other Northern counties. A parade against Home Rule a few days ago was participated in by 30,000 people. The Protestants contend that the Pope's decree, forbidding Catholics, under pain of excommunication from bringing ecclesiastics into court, would place Ireland under the Pope's rule as the Irish Parliament would be overwhelmingly Catholic, and therefore obedient to the Pope. The outlook is very dark just now for peace in Ireland. Bonar Law says Home Rule will never be granted.

CHASED BY FLAMES, MEN AND WOMEN CRAWLED OUT ALONG THE WINDOW LEDGE

SEVERAL INJURED IN A SUNDAY BLAZE IN JONES AVENUE APARTMENT HOUSE.

Some Heapy Losses—One Woman Rescued by Men Who Climbed Up a Telegraph Pole.

Toronto, Jan. 15.—At 2 o'clock, sitting down to their dinner in their apartments above 227 Jones avenue, at 2.30 o'clock, smothered by smoke, their lives imperilled, frantically at tempting to get out by crawling along a perilously narrow second-story window, such was the experience of the inmates of Jones avenue Apartments yesterday afternoon.

Fire broke out in the rear of the Jones avenue grocery, 227 Jones avenue, and was discovered by Mr. J. Morrison, manager of the grocery, who was just sitting down to dinner in the dining room above the store.

FIRE STARTED SUDDENLY.

"I had just been down to the basement and coaled up, and there was no sign of smoke or fire anywhere, and had come back to my dinner," said Mr. Morrison. "when I thought I smelled smoke coming up the kitchen stairs. I hurried down into the little room behind the store and saw ... caught but just as she was falling ... the whole of the ceiling on fire, immediately I rushed upstairs, and calling out to my wife that the place was on fire and to bring the little box with her, I grabbed up my little infant ... dashed down the stairs with him ... the back door into the ... little girl ... had followed and dashed back to the stairs ... to the old ... way up to help out the other ...

"The stairway ... filled with smoke and flames ... though I did my best to force a passage, the smoke overcame me and I was forced back with my hair nearly all burnt off. I then ran around to the front door, where I found my wife had crawled out onto the 10 inch window ledge and yelled to me to crawl along to the next door neighbors, which she did, being helped by Mr. Lambert, of 225, and thence down to the street in safety. My sister-in-law, Miss Rae, followed my wife's example and found the road to safety but Miss Quinn, of boarder got rattled and instead of coming down to the lower flat, got out on the window sill of the top storey and prepared to jump. A couple of men climbed up the telegraph pole and caught her just as she was falling."

MONSTER PROTEST AGAINST BRITAIN'S PERSIAN POLICY

She Will Be the Largest Battleship Ever Built In Britain, Displacing Over 25,000 Tons---Will Throw Heavier Shells

Portsmouth, Eng., Jan. 15.—The keel plate of Great Britain's twenty eighth ship of the Dreadnought class ... at Portsmouth dockyard. The new vessel is the first to be begun of the two proposed ships provided for in the British naval program of 1911-12. She will be completed in the course of the year 1914, and when launched will be added to the navy. Great Britain will possess 32 Dreadnoughts or super-Dreadnoughts, half of which will be armed with 13.5 inch guns.

The vessel laid down to-day has got as yet been named. She will be the largest battleship hitherto constructed in England, displacing between 25,000 and 26,000 tons. Although the Dreadnought cruisers of the ... are much longer, of one ... will be slightly heavier, besides throwing heavier shells than her immediate predecessors.

A number of improvements have been introduced by her constructors in the arrangement of the interna, subdivisions intended to minimize the danger of a torpedo attack, while her ante-torpedo battery will consist of 16 6-inch guns, whereas her predecessors have been armed with only 4-inch guns for the purpose of encountering torpedo boats.

PUSH PETERBOROUGH

Civic Services, Finances and Rate of Taxation.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Some of the advantages for manufacturing that Peterborough possesses have been pointed out. There are other matters that promoters of industries look into. They wish to locate where there are good civic services and where the finances of the Municipality are in a sound condition—that is promoters of substantial industries, and not promoters who are looking principally for an opportunity to pull something for themselves out of the floatation.

Sanitation is an important matter, and in this connection a system of sewers is requisite. The city has over 56 miles of common sewers with about 2400 services. It has 55 miles of concrete sidewalks, and in sewers and permanent sidewalks has expended over $400,000. The waterworks, owned by the city, is adequate and complete, the new dam, pumping station and machinery, furnishing an excellent system. There are nearly 40 miles of water mains, on which are set nearly 250 hydrants for fire protection and from which there are over 3000 services.

A competent fire brigade, continuously on duty, with a complete equipment in a commodious station, furnish protection from fire, and the department along with the waterworks system, is recognized as being so efficient that low fire insurance rates are given.

The common schools, of which there are nine, have a reputation of being among the best in the Province, and in addition there are the Collegiate Institute, and Normal school for teacher training. A reference to the hospitals, parks, churches etc., would complete an attractive list of public conveniences and institutions.

The municipal finances are in an enviable condition. The surplus of assets over liabilities amounts to the tidy sum of $354,386. Of these assets, the waterworks and valuable real estate owned by the city are revenue producing. In the sinking fund there is a surplus of $35,000.

The question of taxation is a tender one with the average citizen, and an important one for the prospective citizen. A comparison of the taxation here with other cities is an educative one for the citizen and prospective citizen alike. There are 18 cities in Ontario. A recent Government return gives the sum raised in 1910 in these cities for Municipal and School purposes. Taking these returns of the sums raised, and using the Dominion census to ascertain the population of the cities, it is found that the amount of taxes levied per head of population for municipal (apart from school) purposes varies from $3.83 to $18.80. If one heard comments made in Peterborough at times he would imagine that the highest rate is in this city. But it is not—far from it. The lowest rate is in a city where the ownership of a steam railway, operated by the C.P.R., gave returns that reduced the taxes, and I understand that an oversight of obligations also assisted and that now the rate has been raised so that in a recent letter in a paper in that city, there is the familiar reference to an "already high rate of taxation." So this city might fairly be left out of the comparison.

Counting this particular city in, however, Peterborough stands third lowest among the 18 cities in the rate of taxation per head for municipal purposes, with a rate of $6.97 per head. Only two cities have a lower rate, and fifteen have a higher rate. The rate per head of taxes for school purposes is higher than in the majority of the cities, but taking the combined taxation for all municipal and school purposes per head of population there are only four cities with a lower rate than Peterborough and thirteen with a higher rate. Peterborough's rate is $3.54 higher than the lowest (the railway owning city) and $13.67 lower than the highest.

In civic services and conveniences, in sound financial condition, and in low rate of taxation, Peterborough offers intending citizens and manufacturing establishments attractive conditions.

Yours truly,

Crows are Plentiful.

Lindsay Post: There are quite a number of crows in this neighborhood They have been here all winter and have been seen from time to time in small flocks of two or three. A member of the Post staff saw two flying south yesterday and when coming to work this morning heard another cawing loudly as he flew here and there looking for his breakfast. There are always a few in sheltered groves, but this winter they stayed in larger numbers than usual. Like a good many "weather prophets" we know, they must have been expecting an open winter.

TWO PROSPECTORS FROZEN TO DEATH

South Porcupine, Ont., Jan. 13.—J. W. Muir and Joe Lingault, two prospectors, were frozen to death crossing Night Hawke Lake on the way to Thomas Township. The temperature was over forty below, and the stiffened bodies were found by a relief party sent out from Golden City. Three other men named Burrows, O'Connor and Jonhston, are said to be missing.

All five were on the way to do assessment work, and the first two succumbed to the cold, which was intensified by a cutting west wind.

Overseer on the Treat Canal Retires On Account of Ill Health.

PUSH PETERBOROUGH

Cheap Electric Power and Other Essentials for Manufacturing.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—One of the natural advantages that Peterborough has in abundance of power. There are water powers within the city and many more close to it. Water powers developed and undeveloped are within easy reach of Peterborough. If it is required, 30,000 to 40,000 hydro-electric horse power can be furnished here as quickly as it is called for. And it is supplied at prices lower than in most cities on account of the proximity of the water powers. Compared with a number of places in Western Ontario that are bidding for factories, the price is lower here, and this is an advantage that should be effective. The companies offer power for industrial purposes for twenty horse power or over at $20.00 per horse power per year for a continuous service for the power actually consumed as determined by test at the factory when in operation, allowing a ten minute peak; or, if preferred, $12.00 per h.p per year for the rated capacity of the motors installed plus one-quarter of a cent per horse power for the current used. The latter rate is an advantageous one in a factory where all the machinery is not in continuous operation. To illustrate. Suppose the maximum demand in a factory is one hundred horse power and motors are installed to supply that demand, but the average load factor is sixty per cent of that, that is, owing to the machinery not being in operation continuously, the amount of power used averages sixty per cent of what the motors will furnish. The yearly account in that case will be $1200.00 on the basis rate of $12.00 per h.p., plus 600 h.p. hours per day at one-quarter of a cent per h.p. hour, and counting that for 300 days in the year, this will amount to $450.00, making the whole charge for the year $1660.00 or $16.50 per horse power. Even these rates might be shaded in special cases. I do not now wish to discuss in any way the question of the city obtaining power from the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission. If it does, I assume it will be to lower the price and the advantage will be greater. But as matters stand now, Peterborough can furnish all the power that can be required and at attractively low prices. This is another factor with which to Push Peterborough.

Manufacturers looking for a location for industries always enquire about labor conditions. They want to locate where mechanics will come to them and where there is good feeling between employees and employers. In this, Peterborough meets the conditions. It has the convenience and many of the attractions of a larger city, and at the same time expenses in some particulars are less, and people like to live here. This is evidenced by the large number of workmen who own their own homes here and are among the most permanent and public spirited citizens.

We have now seen that Peterborough possesses the essentials for a manufacturing centre, namely:

Central Situation.
Cheap Electric Power.
Excellent Shipping Facilities.
Good Labor Conditions.
And Most Suitable Sites.

These advantages have attracted industries; they should continue to attract them and will do so. We should all endeavor to make these advantages known and to spread the reputation of Peterborough as a manufacturing centre and one where manufacturers will find all the essentials and accessories for successful manufacturing.

Some of these accessories may be referred to later.

Yours truly,
Civis Sum.

PECULIAR HOUSES

Some Weird Erections That Make Architects Pause and Wonder How the Next Curiosity is to be Built.

A wealthy American of the name Stokes is building a new house in Connecticut. Most of it is built from the old British battleship Wellington the ninth wing is to be composed of a 13th Tudor manor-house from Suffolk, which between now and the spring will have been transported in fragments across the Atlantic.

One of the most famous of all freak houses stands on an estate on the edge of the forest of Fontainebleau, near Paris. It is a mansion built in the branches of two mighty oaks The owner, a retired silk merchant, uses it as a country house for six months in the year during the leafy period. There is nothing flimsy about it, though it is all of wood.

A staircase leads to the main floor. The house has gables, windows and chimneys, just like any dwelling on solid ground. A balcony some three feet wide runs round the whole building. With such ingenuity did the architect work that practically no cutting of timber was found necessary. In several cases the giant trees are bound together by green-painted iron chains in order to afford a solid platform.

A SUBMARINE VILLA

An equally enviable and equally original man is the owner of what may be called a submarine villa. It is situated at Lakeside, a fashionable suburb of Chicago. The owner, a well-known meat-packer, works all the year round and has no holiday.

But he escapes a great deal of the discomfort Chicago summer by transporting himself every June to the delightful cottage whose roof lies about four feet below the surface of Lake Michigan, which skirts his gardens. The house under the lake is small, but it contains a billiard-room and bedrooms as well as bed-rooms and sitting-rooms. Only one servant accompanies the owner, a supervising packer of pork and other summer home.

At the other end of the scale of [illegible] is that built by a tramp some years ago on the [illegible] of near Bedford. The fascination of the home had recalled the wandering life it was [illegible] him daub his [illegible] outside with paint [illegible] him.

Because [illegible] permanently to life on an [illegible] he had at one time [illegible] equipped house near New [illegible] in the middle of the circular [illegible] of his own block — a bedroom, [illegible] sitting-room, and a music-room. SPOILING THE JOKE.

Of all freak houses, perhaps the queerest would have been one in Sussex, England. An American, who was trying to settle down to English ways, had a small country house there, holding a commanding situation [illegible] uptop as: Inside [illegible] wager touched his American pride, and he started flaunting his defiance for all things British by ordering a squad of local painters to paint the four sides of his house in the glorious gleefully, but a solid district council soon stepped in and spoiled the joke.

DRUNKARDS PATRON

When Christians Decided to Merge Bacchus into St. Martin the Reputation of Former Was Handed On To Him.

What has come to be known as St Martin Summer consists of a few lovely days about the second week of November. We hear a great deal about St. Luke's Summer; but St. Martin's Summer and his name-day, November 11th, suffer neglect — possibly because the saint was French and not English.

Perhaps, too, the knowledge that he is the patron saint of drunkards has not added to his reputation. That office came to him by accident. The reason how this doubtful honour was thrust upon him after his death was rather curious. The Vinalia, or Feast of Bacchus, was always celebrated on November 11th Later, when the Christians decided to merge Bacchus into St. Martin, the reputation of the former was unfortunately handed on to the saint, although quite unmerited by him.

Before his conversion he was a military tribune, stationed at Amiens When one day, so the story goes, in midwinter, at the city gate of Amiens a miserable beggar appealed to him for help, the soldier drew his sword and, dividing his cloak, gave half of it to the wretched beggar. At night, so it is said, Christ in person appeared to the astonished soldier, clad in the very cloak he had divided with the beggar a few hours before.

Another legend is that the saint, having been annoyed by the behaviour of one of the geese in his poultry-yard, ordered it to be slain and served up for dinner. He died immediately after partaking of it, and the anniversary has ever since been observed in France by the eating of goose on that day, November 11th. And even now, when the sunny days of St. Martin's Summer come round, there are but few French people who do not give a passing thought to that kindly saint who divided his cloak so that a poor beggar might be protected from the cold.

"Silver Greyhounds."

ROYAL RECOLLECTIONS

The Reason Finger-Bowls Not Now Used at Royal Dinners and Some Smart Answers Given to Emperor William.

In "Some Recollections" Canon Telgmouth Shore, who has just died, tells a curious story of the reason why finger-bowls are not placed on the table during the dinners of the Royal household. The explanation was furnished by Sir John Cowell, Master of the Household.

"He explained to me," says the Canon, 'that in the old days, when there was a certain Jacobite element even in the vicinity of the Court, it had been noticed that at the toast of 'The King' being given after dinner, some of those present used to pass their glass over the finger-bowl, and it was discovered that thus they drank 'To the King over the water,' and the temptation to do so was removed by the abolition of the finger-bowls!"

An account of an interesting conversation between King Edward, the German Emperor and the Queen is also given in the book mentioned. King Edward and the Kaiser were on a brief visit to Prince and Princess Charles of Hesse, at Cronberg, and came over to the town one day to unveil a memorial to the Princess Elizabeth of Hesse.

"After the ceremony they expressed a wish to see the memorial in the English church to the late Empress Frederick. I accompanied their Majesties, and on entering the building the Emperor turned to me.

"'Now, Canon,' he said, 'how many does the church hold?'

"'In the church, your Majesty,' I replied, 'there are about three hundred or three hundred and fifty persons.'

"'And how many of them are asleep during the sermon?' he asked, with a laugh.

"'I must beg your Majesty,' I said, 'not to think that I preach every Sunday!'

"The King, who seemed amused and pleased at the answer, remarked:—

"'You see you must get up early to walk round my chaplain.'

"'Yes, and a good walk too!' said the Emperor, with a glance at my somewhat bulky figure.

"'Yes,' said the King. 'You know, Teignmouth Shore, you are putting on weight.'

"'Well, at all events,' said the Emperor, with a most gracious smile, 'she never needs to do that in the pulpit!'"

TWO AUDIENCES

Mr. Bonar Law Speaks to Lions and Hyenas.

Never, perhaps, has a leading politician delivered a speech under more extraordinary conditions than those which characterized a meeting three years ago at Mountain Ash, Glamorgan when Mr. Bonar Law, the new Leader of the Opposition was announced to speak. The pavilion at Mountain Ash, which will seat more than 10,000 people, had been let to the Tory Party for Mr. Bonar Law's meeting. Almost immediately afterwards Messrs. Hostock and Wombwell came along and offered forthwith to rent the big building for the winter. The hall was let to them, and the Conservatives were told that they could not have it for their demonstration.

Mr. Littlejohns, the organizer, informed the owners that his meeting would be held there at all costs. After some complimentary passages at arms had been exchanged it was decided that the lions and elephants and hyenas should form part of Mr. Bonar Law's audience, but that they should be walled in with canvas hoarding. They were well fed before the meeting, and the show band was engaged so that the animals should not be disturbed with strange music. Inside the wall their keepers marched to and fro with prods to prevent the lions and monkeys from interrupting the speakers.

Mr. Bonar Law arrived late, and was unconscious of the fact that he was addressing two audiences. As the human audience applauded, however, the prods were vigorously used to prevent the listeners in the cages from discording the chorus.

When Mr. Bonar Law reached his peroration one of the lions was so struck with the force of the argument that he bellowed forth his approval. It was an anxious moment. The prod, however, opposed his applause, and he subsided in disgust.

When Mr. Bonar Law had finished and had sat down he said to Mr. Littlejohns: "I thought it was a very successful attempt by some Liberal opponent to imitate a lion's voice."

THE WONDERFUL BARN

In Ireland, in the county of Kildare, not far distant from Leixlip, is a very picturesque architectural effort, commonly called "The Wonderful Barn." It is built of brick and has six storeys. Each storey internally, is dome-shaped, and in the centre of each floor is a round hole, so fashioned that by means of tackle sacks of corn can be lowered or raised from floor to floor. The ordinary means of entrance and access is by way of a cork-screw flight of steps, which is carried around and outside the building, being connected with doors on each floor. The whole structure is 75ft. high, and was built with the united object of providing employment for the out-of-works of the district.

MUFFS FOR MEN

Although the muff is now exclusively an article of feminine apparel, it was when first introduced in England, toward the close of the sixteenth century, used by both men and women. In fact, in the seventeenth century it was generally regarded as an essential part of the dress of a man of fashion. The muffs used were somewhat similar to the present fashion—large and bulky.

MADE A JOURNAL.

A Merry "Ad." That Set All Australia Laughing at a Premier and Made a Mission Ridiculous.

Although the affair happened over thirty years ago, Australia still chuckles when the name of Henderson Africanus is mentioned; for it calls to mind the biggest joke ever perpetrated "down under" — a joke which made all Australia laugh, covered a Premier with ridicule, and firmly established the reputation of the 'Melbourne Punch.'

The joke arose through Premier Berry, of Victoria, being defeated in the Upper House in his effort to change its constitution. He then upon conceived the idea of sending an embassy to England to persuade the Imperial Government towards his scheme of reform. The 'Melbourne Punch,' however, announced that as there was to be an embassy, besides should be represented, and promptly proceeded to appoint a "mock ambassador" on its own account.

As Proud as a Peacock.

After due deliberation (says the Newspaper Owners), the mock "ambassador" was chosen in Henderson Africanus, a half-witted West Indian negro who could talk politics by the hour.

He was hired at $1.50 a day, and dressed in the best-fitting and blackest suit that could be obtained in Melbourne. On his head was a fantastical top-hat half a yard high, in his pocket was a huge brass watch, and across his aldermanic stomach was a heavy chain large enough to tether a steam-engine. Dressed in this absurd raiment, and as proud as a peacock, Henderson paraded Melbourne, a delighted crowd following him wherever he went. The whole thing was a most extravagant travesty. Of course the nigger took himself seriously as the chief figure in the political pantomime.

A Splendid Circulation-Raiser.

"That Mr. Berry, sah, he have his private secretary, sah. Henderson Africanus went a private secretary, sah," was his request to 'Punch's' delighted management, and a secretary he was given. The biggest, dirtiest, ugliest nigger in Melbourne was hired, and dutifully he followed at the "ambassador's" heels as he perambulated the streets. To all and sundry Africanus introduced him gravely, "My secretary, sah."

Everybody in the country was talking about Africanus, while the circulation of the 'Melbourne Punch' went up by leaps and bounds. As the Premier's departure drew near, the paper further elaborated the joke. Public meetings were held to support the black "ambassador." A banquet was given him, to which sixty prominent citizens came and Henderson was brought to the hotel mostly of the magnificence and the importance of his mission. Brass bands blared. "See the Conquering Hero Comes," and the populace cheered madly as he drove up to the hotel steps.

Kicked Out.

The joke assumed such proportions that the Premier became quite alarmed, and he and many of his supporters really believed that their opponents intended to keep up the joke in London, and thus cover the whole mission with ridicule. A quiet hint, therefore, was given to the shipping company that, if Henderson was given a passage on the vessel in which the Premier and his friends intended to embark, they would not travel.

Africanus was sent to the shipping office to demand passages for himself and his secretary. He was promptly kicked out. This provoked an outburst of simulated fury. Indignation meetings were held to protest against the outrage put upon a Victorian citizen at the instance of the provoked Ministry, and signatures were subscribed to a petition to the Colonial Secretary at home.

But just at this psychological moment the 'Melbourne Punch' stopped the joke, which had now provided enough good copy and many, many square yards of striking, biting illustrations. The Premier went on his futile mission, and Henderson Africanus took up the humble but honest job of newsvendor. He had done the 'Melbourne Punch' a good service and established it firmly as a public favourite, which on its merits it thoroughly well deserves.

A WITTY BISHOP

Perhaps one of the best definitions of the functions of the House of Lords was that given by Bishop Wilberforce when called upon at a dinner of a City Company, London, of which he was an honorary member, to respond to the toast of "The Lords and Commons." "Gentlemen," said he, "I can only compare our two great legislative Chambers to a clock, of which the House of Commons is the mainspring and the House of Lords the pendulum — a pendulum which sways, sways, the while it keeps the mainspring in order, and prevents the clock from running down."

The story is also told of the manner in which the bishop silenced some men who endeavoured to drag him into a controversy at a time when a series of tracts, entitled, "The Road to Heaven," was creating a considerable sensation. The bishop how ever, proved too much for them, merely saying: "The best and only road I know is to turn to the right and go straight on."

Canals in Scotland

A scheme is afoot to construct a canal from the North of Scotland, recently visited by a party of experts, to the south, in addition to the rather and mother Nothing that there may only be a canal from the kitchen — presumably the part of the servants — the drawing-room if the furniture was moved till the family grew up, replied the mariner; "we'd hardly the chairs out of each other's faces, and the laddies wanna wear dune by the time they were done."

Mr. Fred Dobbin, an employee of The Review office, is taking up the study of cement and concrete work, with the object of becoming an expert in this class of work. He is bright and clever and will soon know the concrete business from A to Z.

THE GOLDEN ROE MINING COMPANY

Capitalization $500,000; Divided into 500,000 Shares; Par Value $1.00

Have decided to mine a large quantity of the Very Rich Ore shown up by recent developing work, and also intend to erect a mill to crush from 20 to 25 tons a day. This will enable the Company to pay dividends next summer. In order to provide funds for this purpose the Company now offer the balance of the 50,000 shares offered to the public in the Prospectus dated 26th day of September, 1910, filed with the Provincial Secretary, Sept. 27th, 1910. These shares are now selling at $1.25 per share until Nov. 25th. They will then advance to $1.50 per share. They will continue to advance in price as developing work proceeds. Assays got from this property run from $22.00 in gold per ton to $86,-240.40 (eighty-six thousand two hundred and forty dollars and forty cents). Part of the machinery is now at the mine—the balance will be taken in on the snow roads this winter.

The Golden Rose Mine is forty miles from Markstay Station by winter roads, and in summer it is reached by boat from Temagami Station on T. & N. O. Ry.

MILL RUN

Four and a quarter tons of ore was sent to Kingston. It averaged $50.00 in gold to the ton.

71.7 PER CENT. FREE MILLING

Four assays obtained from Hendley & Parker, Sudbury, gave, respectively, gold values of $2,419.01 $1,020.68, $787.63, $102.72. Two just recently assayed $607.20 and $393.60.

This stock is closely held, and will not be listed with any broker till the mill is installed and the first dividends paid. A small block will then be listed to make it liquid. As an investment this is second to none.

Applications for shares should be sent to

A JUDGE'S BAD BLUNDER

Bluntness of Late Lord Russell Sometimes, Led Him Quite Unexpectedly to Get a Roland for His Oliver.

The bluntness and impetuosity of Lord Russell of Killowen who died when Lord Chief Justice of England, often caused him to do and say things for which he was afterwards genuinely sorry, and sometimes led him to get, quite unexpectedly, a Roland for his Oliver. This happened on one occasion in Manchester. He and a junior started for an appointment one afternoon when Russell was in a very disagreeable mood. Things had not been going well during the day. The cabman was a big, powerful, athletic-looking fellow. On approaching the cab, Russell, as was his wont, closely scanned the horse and the man. "Why," said he, "a big, powerful fellow like you ought not to be driving a cab; you ought to be doing something else."

"What the deuce is it to you," said the cabman, "what I do? Get into the cab, and mind your own business."

Russell, Barry O'Brien tells us, in his "Life" of the famous judge, read little. He was too much a man of action to be a man of books, but wherever he went he always carried two books in his bag — Locke 'On the Human Understanding" and the "Imitation of Christ." He liked novels of excitement. "Monte Cristo" was a special favourite. He read Gaboriau's books, dipped into Tolstoi and Tourgueniff, and once, when he was ill at Leeds he got his chief clerk, Mr. Block, to read the "Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" to him. But Russell made a bad blunder through lack of literary knowledge. On one occasion, when he was introduced to Mr. Stanley Weyman, he wished to be civil to that distinguished author, so he said: "My young people, Mr. Weyman, speak constantly of your books, and tell me I ought to read them. I have read your 'Prisoner of Zenda' with much pleasure."

"Oh! That's the other man," said Stanley Weyman.

PRINCES IN POLITICS

The Recent Outburst of the Crown Prince of Germany Brings to Light Other Occasions When Princes Were Indiscreet.

Apropos of the recent outburst of the Crown Prince of Germany in the Reichstag, it might be mentioned that, although in Great Britain Royalty usually maintains a strictly silent and impartial attitude in regard to political questions of the day, it has been stated that the late King Edward, when Prince of Wales, applauded Gladstone's Home Rule speech. The last time open objection was taken to the presence of a Royal personage in the House of Commons was in 1846, when Peel introduced his Bill for the Repeal of the Corn Laws.

The Prince Consort was in the gallery on January 27th, the night of its introduction, and a few nights later Lord George Bentinck insinuated that he had been there to give Peel the assurance of his support, and that it would have been more proper if he had stayed away. This incident contributed largely to the unpopularity with which Prince Albert at the [illegible] regarded, says the "Manchester Guardian," and he never again entered the doors of the House of Commons.

During the debate on the Catholic Relief Bill, in 1829, Greville describes how the Dukes of Clarence and Sussex, who were for the Bill, attacked the Duke of Cumberland, and how "they used towards each other language that nobody else would have ventured to employ," as one might expect, perhaps, from members of the same family.

The Duke of Clarence said the attacks on the Duke of Wellington had been "infamous." The Duke of Cumberland thought the remark applied to him upon which he was told he could take it if he wished. But Cumberland was accustomed to hard knocks.

He once had to submit to being told by Brougham that, while Wellington was illustrious by his actions, he was only illustrious by the courtesy of the House.

TAKING COVER

On the occasion of the visit of the old [illegible] Admiral Sir [illegible], Commander-in-Chief [illegible], Victorians, was brave[illegible] fight or [illegible] service," said the old soldier. "Another characteristic was a sense of humour, which stood him in good stead even in the face of danger, and contributed not a little to the gaiety of his comrades.

"At the Battle of Cold Harbour just before making the charge, and while under the Confederate fire, our corporal, who was over six feet high and proportionately bigger around than a gun-barrel, became excited as the enemy's bullets ploughed up the earth about him. 'What kind of a place is this to keep a man in?' he demanded. 'Absolutely without protection!'

"He had no more than spoken when Private Stedman stuck his ramrod in the ground.

"'[illegible] corporal,' said he, 'get behind this.'"

Death of an Otonabee Resident.

On Saturday morning, Mr. Wm. Weir, an old and highly respected resident of Otonabee, passed away, after a somewhat prolonged illness. Mr. Weir had resided in Otonabee the greater part of his life, and had many friends who will regret his demise. He was a carpenter-contractor by trade, and a Presbyterian in religion. He is survived by his widow six daughters, Mrs. Joseph Steele of Villiers, Mrs. John Commell, and Mrs. George Renwick of Asphodel, Misses Maggie, Annie and Ethel, of Otonabee and one son, James, of Weyburn, Sask.

To East City.

The Mayor and Council propose to take up the matter of street railway connection with East City at once. Some time ago The Times made some suggestions regarding this matter, and it might be well if these were taken into consideration. A new bridge is badly needed at Hunter street, as the present structure has about served its day and generation. We intend to refer to this matter again in a day or two.

The weather appears to be gradually moderating, and a higher temperature is predicted.

WICKERSHAM ILL

New York. — Attorney General Wickersham is reported to be ill at his home in Washington; not seriously, it is said.

When George W. Wickersham left his $100,000 a year practice with the Wall-st law firm of Strong and Cadwalader, to become President Taft's attorney-general at less than $10,000 a year it was announced that it was with great difficulty the president persuaded him to take the job; then it was reported that the president's brother, Henry Taft, also a member of the same Wall-st law firm, and powerful corporations for whom Henry Taft and Wickersham had worked, did the persuading — persuaded the president to give him the place.

Before Wickersham's advent in the department of justice at Washington he was unknown except to the biggest of Big Business folk, J. P. Morgan, the sugar trust, the Chicago traction people, the New York street railway concerns. From them he had secured his monumental fees, which made him at one time the best paid lawyer in Wall-st. Not only was Wickersham one of the best paid, but he was one of the brainiest.

By far the most important anti-trust suit begun by Wickersham was the case against the United States steel corporation, Oct. 27, 1911.

DIZZY HEADACHES CURED IN ONE NIGHT

IF TROUBLED WITH HEAD-FULLNESS, RINGING NOISES, SPECS BEFORE THE EYES, THE STOMACH IS AT FAULT.

"I had terrible pains in my head. My appetite faded away and when I did eat anything it disagreed and made me very sick for hours after each meal. The active pains in my stomach and the dizzy headaches I had to endure almost set one wild. Sometimes attacks came on so severely that I had to go to bed. I would feel so worn, depressed and utterly miserable that for hours I wouldn't speak to my family. My system was poisoned with wastes and nothing helped me till I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Without this grand system-cleaning remedy I would be sick, but each day brought me better health and spirits. I was cured and made strong, ruddy and healthy looking as one could wish, and will always use and recommend Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

WILLIAM D. EDY
One of the Oldest Photographers in Canada.

William D. Edy, of London, is one of the oldest and best-known photographers in Canada. With his brother, the late James N. Edy, he shared the distinction of having photographed the earliest telephone instruments with which Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, was experimenting back in the early seventies.

Mr. Edy who was born 1832, in Burford Township, Brant County, will be 80 years of age in February, 1912. He was born in Canada of New England and French ancestry, and his grandfather, Roswell Matthews, built the first house in Guelph, although this is usually attributed to one or the other of two subsequent tenants by the names of Allan and Galt. He began life as a farmer in Townsend Township, Norfolk County.

Sweet Foods.

Sugar has gone up in price, and gone up materially, and, in view of the part played by jams and sweets in the general scheme of food, the fact is one which affects all sorts and conditions of people, young and old. Manufacturers say that the demand for sweet articles of diet is increasing, and that the output has gone up greatly in recent years. As a matter of fact, prices have risen to such an extent that it is hardly profitable to manufacture the cheaper kinds of sweets, but the price will hardly affect those with a taste for sweet things and these are becoming more numerous daily. Some day people may revert to the severer form of diet wherein "sweets" did not figure so largely, but for the moment they are at the height of their popularity, whether in the form of preserved fruit or confectionery. Considerations of effect upon teeth appear to weigh but little.

Col. STEELE, C.B., M.V.O.
Winnipeg.

The recent publication by Col. Steele of the military history of the prairie province, brings to mind the leading part the colonel himself played in its history, though he took too great care that he did not figure in the article, so that the reading of it was like "Hamlet" with the principal character left out.

Col. Samuel Benfield Steele was born in [illegible] 1849 and educated at Orillia School and the British American Commercial School, Toronto. He was granted his first commission in 1866 in the Militia and on the return of the Red River Expedition in which he served gallantly, in 1870 joined the Canadian Permanent Artillery. Mr. Steele joined the N. W. Mounted Police in 1873 rising to superintendence in 1885. For the next four years Col. Steele commanded the Police in most of their expeditions against the Indians and to restore order in the new districts. He was chosen to command the "Strathcona" Horse in the South African War. Col. Steele is now commanding military district No. 11.

As a sportsman Col. Steele is well known as one who takes a keen interest in every exercise that will strengthen a man bodily and mentally.

How Society Women Wards Off Wrinkles

"Wrinkles are not strangers to me, but when I acquire such disfigurements I know how to lose them in a hurry." A well-known society matron confided this to me. I had wondered how she, with her strenuous social duties and late hours, could so completely ward off the usual marks of care and dissipation.

"I don't wear wrinkles in public, nor those horrid rings beneath the eyes," she continued, "since I've learned what plain, ordinary saxolite will do. When any of those hateful marks appear, I send to the drug-store for an ounce of powdered saxolite and a half pint of witch hazel. I mix the two, bathe my face in the solution and — that's the whole secret. I've never tried anything that works so miraculously. My chin is inclined to double; this trouble, too, I keep in check in the same way."—Emily Dean in Town Talk.

Musician and Scientist.

There is no more brilliant scientist in the world to-day than Sir William Ramsay, who has been warning Britain that, at the present rate of consumption, her coal supply will only last another 175 years. His most wonderful discoveries have been in connection with new gases in the atmosphere, upon which such names as argon, neon, and xenon have been bestowed, and the experimental work which led to these discoveries ranks as the most refined ever carried out. Of xenon, for example, there is only about one part in 70,000,000 parts of air. Sir William devotes his leisure to music. He plays both the piano and violin and has written the words of not a few songs. The collecting of curios is another of Sir William's hobbies, and at his house at Regent's Park may be seen many queer treasures thousands of years old.

"Silver Greyhounds."

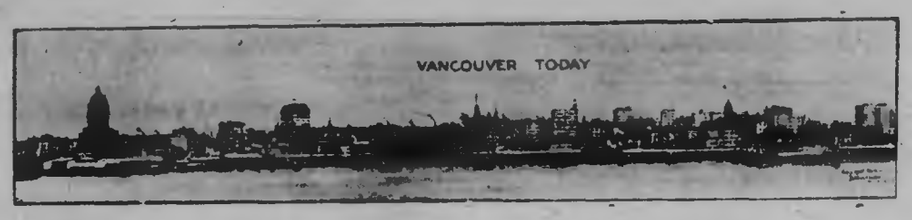
100,000 SHARES AT $1.00

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has been organized recently with an authorized capital of $500,000, to do a general building, real estate, and insurance business, and is actively engaged in Vancouver and Victoria—two most promising fields. The profits from building houses for cash and selling on instalments is well known, and will be one of the principal channels from which profits will be derived. BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS. LIMITED, has its own building department and architect, and does its own construction. In addition to building houses, BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its real estate department, where it carries on a general real estate business, discounting agreements of Sale, subdividing and transacting a general insurance business.

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS LIMITED, is a new concern, having been in business less than two months in Vancouver, but is becoming well known as the Company without any promotion shares and with a strong board of directors, made up of well known Vancouver and Victoria business men.

Shareholders may conservatively look for a 10 per cent dividend the first year, increasing thereafter and a steady advance in the value of their shares caused by the substantial reserve it will always be the policy of the directors to build up.

Companies run on similar lines, notably the Los Angeles Investment Company' and "Home Builders," both of Los Angeles, have proved phenominally successful, the former, which has been in business some sixteen years, having accumulated assets of over $6,000,000, and paying 28 per cent. dividends: and the latter, which started business three years ago, with only $1,250 capital, has assets to-day of over $1,099,000, a surplus of over $308,000, is paying 17 per cent. dividends, and its $1.00 shares are selling at $2.30.



FIRST ISSUE OF SHARES

100,000 Thousand Shares are offered at $1.00 per share, 44,500 of which have been subscribed. These shares may be purchased for cash or on the instalment plan. $10.00 cash and $5.00 per month handles 100 shares Mail your subscription To-day.

Face Paint Tabooed: Remove Skin Instead

"A few years ago only one class of women painted their faces," says Dolly Madison in Chicago News. "It was a sign of social ostracism and was tabooed in refined circles. The custom has become so universal we must admit it is to be deplored and to be shelved as soon as possible."

How foolish to seek artificial "beauty" of this sort, obnoxious from artistic and moral standpoints, when it is so easy to obtain a truly natural complexion by the use of ordinary mercolized wax. Mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, is so effective, noninjurious and inexpensive, no one need think of using anything else for the purpose. Applied like cold cream at night, and washed off in the morning, it at once begins to show its remarkable rejuvenating effects. It gently absorbs the lifeless surface skin in tiny particles, showing the fresher, livelier, beautiful underskin. Naturally it takes with it all surface defects.

WHO'S WHO IN CANADA

HON. F. D. MONK
Montreal.

It has been said with a certain amount of truth that the political plums are not always given to the best men of the parties but in the Hon. F. D. Monk — the Minister of Public Works — the Premier has one of the strongest and highest minded public men to support him. Since he was first elected to the House of Commons sixteen years ago Mr. Monk has, season in and season out, attended to his parliamentary duties with that dogged persistency that reminds one of the British legislator who makes politics his religion. Be that as it may this single minded patriot has taken his parliamentary responsibilities so seriously that his large law practice had to suffer and only his sense of duty held him on.

Mr. Monk has already convinced those who have come in contact with him in the Department of Public Works that he intends giving his whole hearted attention to his responsible duties.

Frederick D. Monk who was born in Montreal in [illegible] is the fourth son of the late Judge Monk whose family was originally a Devonshire (England) one, while his mother was of French descent.

After graduating at McGill he was called to the Bar in 1878 and made Q. C. 1893. Mr. Monk was for twelve years a school commissioner for Montreal.

Mrs. RODOLPHE LEMIEUX
Montreal.

While many of the leaders of public life in Canada [illegible] due to them, their wives, in most instances, are content to keep in the background, though they have done much to inspire their husbands in their work. Such to a large extent is the position of Mrs. Rodolphe Lemieux, wife of the brilliant man who has won for himself a great name not only in this country but in a number of foreign countries where he was sent to represent Canada. But Mrs. Lemieux takes a large interest in the social life of Montreal and Ottawa and many institutions have benefited by her practical interest.

Mrs. Lemieux, who is the daughter of Sir Louis Jetté was married to the Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux in 1896.

CHARLES BELL
Calgary

From newsboy to owning one of the finest hotels in Canada is quite a jump, isn't it? Yet that is what Charles Bell has done, and it has not taken him very long either. Born in the province of Kief, Russia, in 1874, he with his parents came to America in 1880 and settled in the state of North Dakota, where they took up a homestead, living there for three years. Young Bell's father, believing firmly in early education, immediately sent his son to school to learn the English language.

In the fall of 1883 the father decided to come to Canada, and moved to Winnipeg, but a calamity overtook the family there, in that the father died after being in the city only a week. Charles and his younger brother then started to support the family, which consisted of a mother, sister and two brothers and himself.

Today Charles Bell is one of Calgary's best known citizens and sports.

In the medical department there were 271, and in the philosophical [illegible] includes the school for teachers] there were 1949, while [illegible] 44 hours' lectures in the law department, all doors have not yet been opened for women."

KEEP YOUR EYES BRIGHT

To keep the [illegible] and bright they should be well [illegible] in a dish with [illegible] water in which a few grains of borax have been dissolved.

A well-known beauty gives the following reason for the brilliancy of her eyes. Before dressing for the evening she invariably lies for [illegible] minutes, during which time she closes her eyes and lays a soft sponge soaked in [illegible] water over them. By the time her toilet is finished, her eyes look as clear and bright as though she had been refreshed in a long sleep.

A [illegible] who says [illegible] to observe that a woman with good teeth and a pretty mouth could never be considered plain. Whether he will find many to agree with him I do not know, but there is no doubt that both of these features contribute very largely to a woman's attractiveness, and although one cannot alter the shape of one's mouth, or one's teeth, much can be done to [illegible] their general appearance.

HAIR POWDER

The first English ladies who had the [illegible] were as much pointed at for their singularity as the wearer of a crinoline would be to-day. It was in the beginning of the reign of George the First that the pioneers ventured to make themselves so conspicuous, and at the time when the next King was crowned there were only two hairdressers in London; but in the year 1795 it was calculated that there were in Great Britain no less than fifty thousand hair-dressers! A writer with a turn for statistics reckoned up the prodigious amount of flour these fifty thousand would use in a year, and arrived at the conclusion that it was equal to what would make [illegible] quarters loaves.

Apart from the question whether the hair ought not have been [illegible] considered, it must be owned that the [illegible] came for the [illegible] production of [illegible] in the days when [illegible] was in fashion.

SMART WINTER COSTUME

Fashioned of Black Velutina

An apron front edged with knitted silk fringe is the feature of a street costume of velutina.

This walking suit is of black, old blue satin being the contrasting tone in the revers upon the three-quarters-length jacket. The revers, too, are edged with fringe and are embroidered with soutache braid of the blue tone.

The coat is trimmed with Hercules braid. A touch of white is given this walking costume with marabout. This delicate feather outlines the collar and cuffs.

The lines of the skirt show a slight tendency to fullness and in length it just escapes the floor.

The model would be pretty in corduroy or cloth.

Bake in a buttered and floured [illegible]

Cause of Rheumatism

Most physicians believe that rheumatism is the result of over-feeding, followed by putrefactive changes in the contents of the alimentary canal, that the action of certain bacteria produces specific toxic (poison) substances which, when introduced into the blood, cause a deviation from the normal oxidation process, thus causing the condition that is designated rheumatic. In the majority of instances it is probably due to eating too much of the vegetable class of foods; in other cases it is the result of eating too much meat

ENGLISHMEN AND OLYMPIC GAMES.

To win the Olympic games seems to be the ruling passion of a large number of Englishmen, just now. The wave of patriotism is sweeping in England. The cry for Olympic material has reached national proportions.

Englishmen have always been wonderful distance runners. They have been weak at the sprints and in some of the field events.

The effort now being made is to find men capable of holding the old country on the field and in the sprints in the hope that the distance runners will "bring home the bacon."

Two of the best amateurs in England are Harry Green, a marathon runner of Stalybridge and W. Scott, England's 10-mile champion.

LACROSSE ON SKATES

A new game is being introduced in Rochdale this winter, lacrosse on skates. It has been tried and accepted by the sportsmen in Eastern Ontario, and will be given a trial. It is played by seven-men teams, who line up as they would on a lacrosse green. A soft ball is used and players are not allowed to raise their sticks above the shoulders. An offender against this is sent to the penalty box. This rule makes underhand passing and shooting imperative.

The Rochdale [illegible] the game in Eastern Ontario will [illegible] like to take a [illegible] at a meeting held in the Palmer House, when the following officers were elected:

Honorary president, A. W. McLeay; president, Geo. Hayward; vice-president, C. N. Gaetz; secretary, C. A. Wood; treasurer, A. A. Eastey; manager, Wm. Logan.

The following players will be in the championship: Arnold, A. Cruikshank, H. Harper, H. Ball, W. Logan, J. Staples, Barlow, D. Hogg and Jimmie McLaughlin.

VARIETY OF HOLES IN GOLF

The up-to-date golf architects generally agree nowadays that in the arrangement of courses that are in some degree there should be a complete variety of holes not only as to length, but in their character, the ways in which they are bunkered, the kind of tee shot that is required as them, and last, but not least, the kind of approach. In every case the putting greens should be thoroughly well guarded.

It has also been decreed that the shorter the hole the smaller should be the green and the more closely it should be guarded, so that on the principle when a good play a long shot can reach the green which should be fairly large and open in order to give the player encouragement to which he is entitled.

In this subject, however, there may ever be differences of opinion. There are those who argue that it is wrong to say that a fairly long course is a sufficient test to select the best player of a field of any size or one hundred competitors. In other words, no course can be a thorough test of the skill and nerves of the player which has not so closely guarded greens that on occasions there is but one line that a most skilful shot by which one may approach can get home.

FOOTBALL

Last sports, once only followed in the British Empire, have become popular all over the world, is again dominated by Association football. Its growth has been rapid and its popularity is by no means confined to the white race. Some of the native teams in the ramparts of Empire are capable of showing really good football, all of which is satisfactory. How other nations have taken to "soccer," rather curious home to one through Fulham having tried Hussern Hegarzi as centre forward on Saturday, against Stockport. He is an Egyptian, who showed capital form against English teams at Cairo before coming to England a few months ago. His play in England was closely watched, and he showed very well for a first appearance in an important game.

LONDON'S LORD MAYOR

London. — London's lord mayor, Sir Thomas Crosby, is the first physician to be thus honored, and, too, he is one of the oldest lord mayors London ever had, having just celebrated his 81st birthday. The lord mayor has nothing to do but wear the robes of his office upon state occasions and hand the municipal key over to distinguished visitors occasionally. Sir Thomas is a spry old man, and it is expected that he will handle the robes and key as deftly as his youthful predecessors did.

ROGUS DETECTIVES

Tricks and Daring Dodges of Wily Imposters to Extort Money from Unsuspecting Men and Women.

It was a well-known magistrate who, a short time ago, described the offence of two men who, by impersonating detective officers, had obtained $50 from a woman under the pretence of shielding her husband from the consequences of a robbery which they said he had committed, as one of the "worst forms of blackmailing"; and from inquiries which the writer has made there does not seem to be much doubt in official circles that quite a large number of men are going about posing as detectives and obtaining money by such pretences.

They go to work in much the same way as the ordinary blackmailer. That is to say, they get to know something detrimental to the character of a man or woman, and then endeavour to come to terms with their victims by promising to withhold their warrant for arrest and "squaring" the matter. In the majority of cases it is generally ignorant people, who do not stop to ask the "detective" to produce the warrant, or who forget that a detective, by so acting, renders himself liable to the severest punishment, who are the usual victims, although at times those bogus detectives fly to higher game.

Posing as Police Officers.

Last week, for instance, the case came to light of a wealthy manufacturer, whose son had led a wild life while in London and forged a cheque for $550, paying a man whom he believed to be from Scotland Yard, and who made out that he held a warrant for the son's arrest, $2000 to report that the boy had fled the country. The "detective" called on the father, said that he understood the son was hiding in the neighbourhood, and that he would like the father's help to execute the warrant. Not doubting the man's word, the father, to hush up the matter, suggested that he should pay the detective a price to go back to London and state that he had failed to find the culprit. Two thousand dollars was the price agreed upon and it was not until the father had an official visit from Scotland Yard in regard to the matter that he learned how he had been victimized.

Quite recently a couple of men were heavily fined for representing themselves as police officers and threatening another man with arrest on account of a cheque which they said had been dishonoured because of the false signature; while a particularly mean trick was played upon a widow some months ago when a man called and said that he held a warrant for the arrest of her son, who was a sailor, for taking part in an alleged robbery of goods from the dockyard. The mother was frightened, and, knowing that her son was to sail in a few hours, parted with $75 to induce the "detective" to hold up the warrant until he had sailed. The "detective" knew that the son would not return home again before he sailed. And relied on this fact to extort money from the widow, who could see the trick when the rest of the man, being sentenced to imprisonment for [illegible] a similar stage in another part of the town.

The Worst Feature.

Perhaps the worst feature of this bogus detective business has recently been exposed in the English law courts. Cases are known of men who set up as private inquiry agents who have no qualifications for such work, and who simply announce themselves as such in order to acquire knowledge from those who seek their services, afterwards using this knowledge to extort money from their victims.

A couple of months ago, for instance, a lady who wished to relieve herself of the attentions of a blackmailer who had learned a secret of her past life and was continually worrying her for money, rashly confided her troubles to one of these bogus detectives, whose advertisement she had seen in a certain paper. He had no sooner learned all the circumstances of the case than he, too, after finding that she would pay no more money until he had achieved some result, turned round and demanded a large sum for keeping his mouth shut regarding the secret she had confided to him. Luckily, she had the courage to go to the police about the matter, with the result that the scoundrel quickly fled the country.

Sounds of the Saw

"Oi can see red rowses bloomin'!" sang the street vocalist, and he was about to broach the second spasm when a carpenter's apprentice beckoned him to his side.

"I'll give you tuppence," he declared, "if you'll stay in this shed and sing till I come back. I'm dying for a drink of milk." And the songster assented.

Soon the apprentice reappeared, and paid over the twopence.

"I s'pose," said the vocalist, "that my voice is about the same as yours, an' you thought your boss wouldn't know the difference—eh?"

The other looked at him indignantly, and then replied:—

"Your voice the same as mine! If you want to know, it's the same as my saw's, and I wanted the guv'nor to think I was working hard on these planks."

The Wrong Bit.

An Irish Jarvie was driving an English tourist round Dublin, and on stopping for refreshment the tourist remarked to Pat how lean his horse was. Going up to the horse's head, the tourist examined its mouth, and, turning round with the air of a man who knew something, he said:—

"I am afraid that the want of flesh in your horse is due to the large bit you have in its mouth."

Pat looked at him sorrowfully as he replied:—

"Shure, yer honour, I won't argue wid ye, but I'm after thinking it's the small bit that he has in his stomach that's a-troublin' the poor baste!"

"Joe" Reynold's Good Luck.

Old timers will remember "Joe" Reynolds, who was for years employed by the Calcutt Brewing Company, as driver of a delivery wagon. Mr. Reynolds was a local violinist of some note, and played for nearly all the dances given in Peterborough and surrounding district for years. He went to Vancouver about 15 years ago, where he apparently has done well. The World of that city says: "Mr. Joseph Reynolds, Vancouver's pioneer musician, has just disposed of his residence on Homer street. The growth of the city's business district has crowded him out, and a Winnipeg syndicate required the property for a large apartment house, that is to be erected on the site in the spring. There was just one cypher difference between the purchase price paid for the lot over 15 years ago and the figure at which he disposed of it yesterday—but that cypher made a big difference, for it was on the right end. The lot was bought for just $2,500. The Winnipeg syndicate paid Mr. Reynolds $25,000 for the property—and they were getting it cheap at that."

Mr. Archie Greig, formerly of the Opera House Orchestra, is home again after a season's trip with the Young Buffalo Wild West Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Milburn, of Perth, are in the city. They were present at the "at home" given in honour of Mrs. Milburn's sister, Miss Violet Stevens on Friday evening last.

Change in Lakefield Firm.

Lakefield News: Last week a change was made in the personnel of one of our leading business houses, when Mr. T. J. Watson was admitted as a partner to Mr. Roland Johnson. Mr. Watson has been in the employ of Mr. Johnson for the past seven years, commencing as parcel boy, and as a recognition of his faithful and valuable services Mr. Johnson has taken him in as a partner and given him full charge of the Lakefield stores. The firm will be known as the Roland Johnson Co., and with two such enterprising men at the head is sure to enjoy continued success. Mr. Watson's many friends in this vicinity extend congratulations on his advancement.

KING EDWARD VACUM CLEANER

You cannot clean carpets, rugs and furniture by beating. If you think you have, just try a KING EDWARD VACUUM CLEANER and you will find the article full of dust, which breeds disease.

The KING EDWARD HAND MACHINE has no equal as compared with other hand machines. It is lighter to operate and its suction is much stronger. The suction is stronger than many of the power machines, and the dusting is done away with. On account of the short stroke one person can operate it on carpets and rugs equally as well as two, and it is about half the weight of other hand machines to carry up and down stairs or from one room to another. It is sold for less money than any of the hand machines. All machines are guaranteed.

EVIDENTLY A MISTAKE

'Twas at the skating rink, and the young man was but a beginner. Wherefore he lost his balance.

He made a wild effort to grab anything in the way of support. And, as it happened, the nearest thing was a fashionably-dressed lady, also on skates. She promptly turned on him.

"You contemptible cur!" she shrieked. "Do you think I am a lamp post, or a piece of furniture, or what? You ought not to be allowed in here. I'm coming down! What right have you to tear other people's clothes to pieces and claw them in that mad way? You are not fit ——"

But the young man had now regained his composure.

"Pardon me, madam," he remarked, "but haven't you made a mistake?"

"A mistake?" gasped the lady. "What do you mean?"

"Simply this, madam," came the quiet retort, "I am not your husband!"

"Accused of begging!" exclaimed a magistrate. "Why, you are the very man who was begging at my door on Sunday!"

"Yes," assented the vagrant, with a sneer, "and you didn't give me anything."

"Well, I'll give you something now, sixty days!"

BIG GUN DUEL

During Crimean War to Test Merits of Big Guns a Duel Was Decided Upon Between British and Russian Gunners.

Even war, with all its grim horror has now and then a bit of fun, and enemies, pitted against each other in deadly struggle, can relax into friendly controversy. A general relates a curious incident of the Crimean War. While the British Army lay before Sebastopol much speculation went on in regard to the relative merits of certain Russian and certain British guns.

One day, during an armistice, a Russian officer of artillery, came to the British lines and asked to see the commander of the British artillery.

"Your sixty-eight pounder that your people call 'Jenny' is a beautiful gun," said the Russian; "but we have one as good in the embrasure, and we should like a fair duel with her."

Arrangements were made that at twelve the next day all other firing should cease, and that the two guns should be put to the test.

At the appointed time a large number of officers were assembled to view the contest. The British sailors of the gun detachment took off their caps and saluted the Russians, who returned the compliment. The British gun, as the senior, was allowed to fire first. It struck the side of the Russian embrasure. Then the Russians returned a good shot.

The third shot from "Jenny" went clear through the enemy's embrasure. The bluejackets, thinking the victory was theirs, jumped upon the parapets and cheered. But they were mistaken. In a minute out came the Russian gun again and delivered several accurate shots. "Jenny" got a bad thump on her side, but it did no material harm.

At the seventh shot from the British side the Russian gun was knocked clean over. The British fellows cheered vociferously, and the Russians mounted the parapet and took off their hats in acknowledgement of defeat. This ended the great gun duel, and more serious hostilities were resumed.

BRITAIN'S BRICK

Of the many relics of Nelson, few appear so interesting as a humble little object in an obscure English town. At the Paston Grammar School, in Norfolk, Lord Nelson was numbered amongst the pupils, and one summer evening he spent some time in carving the initials H N on the wall that surrounds the school.

Years afterwards, when he became the people's idol, visitors made a point of viewing his handiwork on the wall, and precautions were taken to guard zealously this memento of the famous Admiral. But in 1841 a great storm blew down a tree, which in its fall partly demolished the old masonry. On the following morning, Mr. Rider Haggard (recently created a baronet), who was visiting the head master, spent some time in assisting to find the magic letters, and it was reserved for the celebrated novelist to discover the identical brick required.

He handed it over to the principal of the school, and to-day the brick remains enclosed in a glass bearing a suitable inscription, in the most prominent position in the school. Small wonder, therefore, that when a Norfolk scholar was asked the question, "Who was Nelson?" he replied: "He was a brick!"

Long Delayed in Delivery

A letter written in November, 1660, to a prominent member of the Body of Friends in Philadelphia, has just been found in the Public Record Office, having been recovered. A copy of the letter was forwarded to the descendants in the eighth generation of those for whom it was intended. The letter is addressed: "For My Loving friend Richard Hickson, a butcher in Durham to be delivered to William Gywaters, Durham, paid at"

REASONABLE REQUEST

It was a cold night. The traveller inquired at the only hotel in the little town if he could be lodged for the night, but was informed that it was full up.

"But you must give me some sort of accommodation," said the stranger. "Surely you don't want me to sleep under the starry but chilly skies?"

"Well," said the proprietor, "the best we can do is to make you up a bed in the passage and curtain it off for you." And so it was arranged.

In the dark watches of the night, the traveller awoke. A freezing draught chilled him, and the sheet which had been hung up as a partition was blowing merrily in the breeze. The traveller rose and shouted for the landlord.

"What is it?" piped a voice from the stairhead.

"Please," said the stranger, timidly, "may I have a paper of pins to fix my bedroom door with?"

THE SILENT JAP

The Japanese, alone of all races, give no sound when engaged in combat. From this national trait springs a curious regulation which prevents Japanese regiments from possessing bands, bugles, or drums. Orders are given verbally, or by means of signals with the hand or sword. No trumpets sound the charge, no drums beat the tattoo, and no bugles wake the troops with their morning calls.

A FAIR OFFER

It was a political meeting in the hall during the last recess, and the M.P., an exceptionally popular man, was addressing his constituents. The politician in question rejoiced in a luxuriant crop of hair. The audience was sympathetic for the most part; but one or two members in the front of the audience who made [illegible] interruptions—he was a [illegible] politically, and had but [illegible] hearing coils.

"Get your hair cut!" he shouted [illegible] a most pathetic passage in the [illegible]'s speech. The well-known [illegible] phrase seemed particularly applicable, so a good many of the audience laughed.

But the M.P. was equal to the occasion.

"I will make a bargain with that gentleman," he said. "I will get my hair cut if he will get his face shaved."

There were no more interruptions.

Shaughnessy: "What's the matter, Wilkins?"

Wilkins: "Matter enough. You know some time ago I assigned all my property to my wife to — to keep it out of the hands of — of people I owe money, you know?"

"Yes."

"Well, she's taken the money and gone off, says she won't live with me because I swindled my creditors."

Race Dying Out.

There is at least one native race that is not dying out. This is the case, of New Zealand. According to statistics obtained in the census of March taken in last March, the total native population of New Zealand is said to be 49,359, an increase for five years of 1617. In addition there are the Maoris on the Chatham Islands. It is a matter of difficulty to ascertain the number of half-castes living as Maoris. Probably all half-castes, and a large proportion of the Maoris [illegible] in the South Island, now live [illegible] fashion. The health of [illegible] has been generally good. [illegible] been a great advance in [illegible] sanitary laws, and the Maoris are beginning to realise [illegible] excessive mortality among [illegible] been due to unsanitary conditions.

Friends of Books

To fall in love with a good book is one of the greatest events that can befall us. It is to have a new influence pouring itself into our life, a new teacher to inspire us, a new friend to be by our side always, who, when life grows narrow and weary, will take us into his wider and calmer and higher world.

Whether it be biography, introducing us to some humble life made great by duty done; or history, opening vistas into the movements and destinies of nations that have passed away; or poetry, making music of all the common things around us, and filling the fields and the skies and the work of the city and the cottage with eternal meanings—whether it be these, or religious books or science, no one can become the friend even of one good book without being made wiser and better.

Roast Steak Boiled

If properly cooked boiled round steak will be rare, tender and juicy. Plunge the meat into sufficient boiling water to cover, boil rapidly for fifteen minutes, then push the kettle over a slow fire where it will simmer at one hundred and eighty degrees Fahrenheit for fifteen minutes to each pound of beef. Serve the beef with cream horseradish sauce, boiled turnips or cabbage and potatoes.

An old country woman and her daughter went into a shop in town to buy a bonnet. When she had purchased the bonnet the milliner, turning to the woman, said:—"What about a sailor for your daughter?" meaning, of course, a hat. The woman turning to the girl, indignantly retorted—"What about a sugar for yourself?"

EMPRESS'S DEATH MESSENGER

The Late Empress of Austria Was Warned by a Vision the Night Before Her Fate That She Would Meet Death.

A striking picture of the unfortunate Empress Elizabeth of Austria, who was so foully murdered in Geneva in 1898, is drawn by the famous French detective, M. Xavier Paoli, in "My Royal Clients". Paoli, in the course of the three visits which the Empress paid to France between 1895 and 1898, had every opportunity of studying the life and characteristics of the wife of the Emperor Joseph, and he mentions that, winter and summer alike, she rose at five o'clock, and began by taking a warm bath in distilled water, followed by electric massage; after which, even though it was still dark, she would go out into the air without informing her suite. She returned at seven o'clock, and breakfasted lightly on a cup of tea, with a single biscuit. She then disappeared into her apartments and devoted two hours to her toilet.

Her second meal was taken at eleven, and consisted of a cup of clear soup, an egg, and one or two glasses of meat juice, extracted every morning from several pounds of fillet of beef by means of a special apparatus that accompanied her on her travels. She also tasted a light dish or two, with a preference for sweets.

ALWAYS YOUTHFUL

The Empress was exceedingly proud of her youthful figure, and Paoli mentions that when she was fifty-eight years of age she looked like a girl, and had the figure of a girl and a girl's lightness and grace of movement. "I realized later that she owed her marvelous colouring to the long walks which she was in the constant habit of taking. She wore a smartly-cut riding-habit dress, all in black, which accentuated the slimness of her snake-like waist. The beauty of her figure was a matter of which she was frankly vain; she had herself weighed every day."

The Empress was extremely careful in regard to her toilet. She could not bear to have water, even for the purpose of her toilet, brought to her in any other vessel than glass-stoppered bottles. On the other hand, she never slept on any but a hard mattress, a fact which one would scarcely have suspected from the aristocratic daintiness of her person.

VERY FOND OF COWS

One of her manias was a weakness for buying cows. Indeed, she bought one in every country which she visited for the first time. She chose it herself in the course of her walks, and had it sent to one of her farms in Hungary. As soon as she saw a cow the colour of whose coat pleased her, she would accost the peasant, ask the animal's price, and tell him to take it to her hotel.

Two strange incidents incline one to the belief that the Empress received a presentiment of her tragic end. "On the eve of her departure for Geneva she asked Mr. Barker to read her a few chapters of a book by Marion Crawford, entitled 'Corleone,' in which the author describes the detestable customs of the Sicilian Mafia. While the Empress was listening to the harrowing story, a raven, attracted by the scent of some fruit which she was eating, came and circled round her. Greatly impressed, she tried to drive it off, but in vain, for it constantly returned, filling the echoes with its mournful croakings. Then she rapidly walked away — for she knew that ravens are harbingers of death when their ill-omened wings persist in flapping round a living person.

"Again, Cararay told me that, on the morning of that day, she went into the Empress's room, as usual, to ask how she had slept, and found her Imperial mistress looking pale and sad.

"'I have had a strange experience,' said Elizabeth. 'I was awakened in the middle of the night by the bright moon beams which filled my room, for the servants had forgotten to draw the blinds. I could see the moon from my bed, and it seemed to have the face of a woman weeping. I don't know if it is a presentiment, but I have an idea I shall meet with misfortune.'"

And it was a few hours later that Luccheni killed her with a three-cornered file carefully fitted to a wood-en handle.

TOOK THE ADVICE

He was a good-natured man, was Slickman, proprietor of Slickman's Stores, and he used to inspire his clerks with the same ideas. Wherefore he bought a number of big signs which read, "No Trust" and had them hung round each department.

A month or two later a friend inquired how the plan had worked.

"Well, it worked all right," Slickman answered, dolefully, "but — but not quite the way I expected."

"How's that?" queried the friend. "Tell us what actually happened."

"At the end of the first week" Slickman said, sorrowfully, "the cashier cleared with $15,000, and the second week the bookkeeper eloped with the private secretary, three clerks asked for an increase of salary, and the office-boy took all the stamps and petty cash and ran away to join Barry! no more of those big signs for me."

Y.M.C.A. Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held this evening, Jan. 10th, at 8 o'clock. Encouraging reports will be presented and the election of directors will take place. Every active member ought to be present at this meeting.

An Enjoyable Evening.

The Conservatory of Music was well filled last night to hear Miss Jessie Alexander, the popular elocutionist, and Mr. Barnaby Nelson, tenor. The Conservatory Orchestra, with Miss Pearl McKee, accompanied, were in attendance.

Poultry Association.

There will be a meeting of the Peterborough Poultry Association in Mr. J. T. C. Lang's store to-morrow night at 8 o'clock. All prize winners are asked to be present to receive their cheques which the secretary will have ready to-morrow night.

Body Not Recovered.

The body of the late Mr. Henry Fairweather, whose sad death by drowning took place on Sunday last at Nassau, has not yet been recovered. A number of men are at work searching but it is said there is little hope of success until the ice breaks up in the spring.

Charged With Desertion.

Mr. George Cochrane, County Constable, has laid an information against Alex. Windover, charged with neglecting his wife and children. He will appear before Magistrate Dumble this morning. His wife is in the hospital and his six children are in the Children's Shelter.

Tighe Gets Four Months.

Edward Tighe, the young man accused of the seduction of a girl of fourteen, pleaded guilty yesterday afternoon of the charge before Judge Huycke, and was sentenced to four months in the common jail with hard labor. His Honor scathingly addressed the prisoner, pointing out to him the seriousness and enormity of the crime.

New Post Office For Lakefield.

At the annual meeting of the Lakefield branch of the Liberal Conservative Association, Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., who was present, stated that he had every reason to expect that his request for a new post office at Lakefield would be granted. This will be good news for the villagers, as well as those who live in the country contiguous to Lakefield.

Laid at Rest.

The funeral of the late Mr. A. J. Cameron, whose tragic death by exposure occurred on Friday morning, took place from the family residence, Stewart street, yesterday, and was largely attended. There were many beautiful floral tributes. The religious services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Pogue, of St. Paul's church. The pallbearers were Messrs. Harry Long, James Long, Harry Rush, James English, J. J. Howden and W. J. Green.

Big G For 30 Years the Standard Remedy for

Diseases of Mucous Membranes

Experienced pharmacists will tell you Big G is the accepted standard remedy for diseases of mucous membranes—discharges from the nose, throat and urinary organs. Avoid substitutes. To experiment is dangerous. Big G, used every day, for 30 years has proved safe and reliable. Non-poisonous, astringent, and basic in its properties, contains no silver nitrate, zinc sulphate, alcohol, cocaine, or any narcotic. It may be used full strength without fear. Why not cure yourself? Sold by druggists, or we will send prepaid, upon receipt of $1.00, full instructions enclosed with each bottle or mailed sealed in plain envelope, on request.

A Heavy Loss.

Mr. J. H. Garbutt, the popular reeve of Smith township, had the misfortune to lose a valuable horse a short time ago. The animal took sick and died in spite of all that veterinary surgeons could do. Another horse is also in bad shape, and is not expected to live. The malady seems to puzzle the vets who have been treating the animals.

The horses are valued at $250 each.

The Late Samuel Curtis.

At the ripe old age of 95, Mr. Samuel Curtis, an old and esteemed resident, passed away at the home his nephew, Mr. William Curtis, 584 Downie street. On coming to this country, he settled in Dummer township in 1838 and some years later came to Peterborough to reside. His wife predeceased him in the year 1902. The funeral will take place at two o'clock to-morrow afternoon from the late residence to the Little Lake cemetery.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

Trains yesterday were all a little late on account of the snow.

The frost burst the water pipes at the G.T.R. Station, doing considerable damage.

A bunch of Italians, about 25 in all, sought refuge during the bitter cold nights of last week, in the G.T.R. Station.

The men employed on the wharf on George street have not been working for a few days owing to the cold weather.

The funeral of the late Mrs. McGuire of Havelock, will take place here to-morrow at 10 o'clock from St. Peter's Cathedral, and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

It is also found necessary to again warn the citizens against fast driving over Hunter street bridge. The warning at the end of the bridge is being ignored every day, and the police are going to take action.

The monthly concert of the 57th Regiment is announced for to-night, at the Armouries at eight o'clock. All friends are invited. Members of the Y.M.C.A. will take part in the program.

Headaches Over the Eyes Mean Frontal Catarrh

APT TO GET INTO EARS, CAUSING DEAFNESS, OR TO REACH THE LUNGS AND END IN CONSUMPTION.

You Can Cure Catarrh to Stay Cured by Breathing the Healing, Balsamic Fumes of Catarrhozone, and Here is Proof.

Mr. Uric Berault, a young gentleman who has lived for years in Sweetsburg, Que., inherited catarrh from his mother. The disease spread through his system till he was a physical wreck.

"As a child," said Mr. Berault, "I was prone to an ulceration of the mucous lining of the throat and nasal passages.

"I grew pale and emaciated, lost all desire for food, and got into such a dreadful condition that my friends said that Catarrh was fairly eating me up.

"Every organ of my body seemed affected, and the doctor said it was the first stage of consumption. He advised Catarrhozone and I inhaled it ten minutes at a time every few hours, and was rewarded in a few days by a wonderful improvement.

"Catarrhozone pleased me and the doctor so well that I used it continually, and took Ferrozone Tablets after each meal to build up my strength. In about three weeks I was quite recovered, and the doctor says no remedy but Catarrhozone could work such a miracle.

"Everyone in town knows I was just about dead with catarrh, and my cure is an evidence of what Catarrhozone can do. It is a pleasure to recommend Catarrhozone."

Two months' treatment, large size, price $1, and guaranteed. Small size, 50c., all reliable dealers or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont. Beware of dangerous substitutes and imitations for "Catarrhozone."

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

Cause of Rheumatism

Many physicians believe that rheumatism is the result of over-feeding, followed by putrefactive changes in the foodstuffs in the alimentary canal; that the action of certain bacteria produces specific toxic (poisonous) substances which, when introduced into the blood, cause a deviation from the normal oxidation process, thus causing the condition known as designated rheumatism. In a large majority of instances it is probably caused by eating too much of the wrong kind of foods; in other cases it is the result of eating too much meat

THE ROYAL BANK.

A Record Breaking Year for This Popular Financial Institution.

Once more the Royal Bank is able to report in its Annual Statement, all previous records broken. The Royal Bank has now been in business forty-two years, and never before in its history has it had such a satisfactory year as that which closed on the 31st day of December, 1911. Its net profits during the period mentioned amounted to 18.58 per cent. upon its paid-up capital, so that, as the Bank pays a dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum to shareholders, it is earning more than 50 per cent. in excess of the amount it distributes. This is a splendid margin to be able to set over against a less prosperous period. For the first time in its career, probably, the profits crossed the million mark, amounting to $1,152,249, which was $200,913 more than during the year 1910. The Bank brought forward at the beginning of 1911, profits amounting to $226,393. The amount carried forward at the end of the year was $243,230, being an increase of $14,837.

During the year the paid-up capital of the Bank did not show as large an increase as in the case of several other banking institutions, the figures being now $6,251,080 as against $6,200,000 a year ago. As the Bank is now putting out $2,000,000 additional stock, the paid-up capital will receive its increase during the year 1912. This will put the institution in an excellent position to increase its circulation which, it is interesting to observe, was in excess of its paid-up capital at the end of 1911, thus demonstrating the necessity for the increase in paid-up capital which is taking place. The note circulation at the end of the year was $6,438,976, being $412,186 more than at the end of 1910.

Among the most marked advances made by the Bank are the increase of over $16,215,201 in the total amount on deposit, bringing the total of such amount up to $68,294,808; and the increase of $6,144,277 in the call loans and of $7,174,957 in the commercial loans, making these two items respectively $13,322,851 and $59,646,165. The reserve now stands at $7,056,188 as against $7,000,000 a year ago, and the undivided profits at $401,480, being an increase of $158,250 as compared with a year ago, so that the reserve is largely in excess of the paid-up capital. The total assets of the Bank increased over $18,000,000 and are now $110,528,512. The percentage of liquid assets to liabilities to the public is large, being 49.54 per cent. as compared with 47.33 per cent. in 1910. As will be seen from these comparisons the Bank has experienced a most satisfactory year.

VOL XXVII NO 14 — PETERBOROUGH ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 17 1912 — PRICE TWO CENTS

REGULAR MEETING OF PUBLIC LIBRARY BOARD

A meeting of the Public Library Board was held in the Board room of the Library last evening, at 8 o'clock.

There were present Mr. E. H. D. Hall, chairman, Mayor Bradburn, Dr. McNulty, and Messrs. H. R. H. Kenner, H. Ritchie, A. Mowat, J. Corkery and D. Spence.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

In the absence of Mr. Matthews, Mr. Ritchie read the report of the Property Committee, as follows:

Gentlemen,—Your Property Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows:

1. We prepared an estimate of the money required by this committee for carrying on the work of the Library under our supervision, for the year 1912, and instructed it to be handed to the Finance Committee to be included in the estimates for the year.

2. We recommend that the insurance on the books and contents of the Library be increased from $5000 to $7000 and that a blanket policy be obtained if possible.

3. We recommend that the stops on the windows on the North, East and West sides of the building be tightened and the Board take into consideration the advisability of fitting them with either storm sash or Chamberlain metal weather strips, and that the signs, notices and the common sense binders, additional newspaper tyles and cupboards for bound copies of the local newspapers, referred to in the Librarian's letter, be procured.

4. We recommend that the societies and Associations occupying rooms in the Library Building be advised that in future they will be expected to pay a rental to cover cost of heating, lighting and services of the janitor, and that smoking in or about the premises, rented or occupied, will not be allowed.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

After some discussion the report was adopted.

The report of the Finance Committee was read by Mr. Corkery in the absence of Mr. Morrow, as follows:

January, 13, 1912.

On motion of Mr. Corkery, seconded by Mr. Mowat, the report was adopted.

Dr. McNulty in the absence of the chairman, read the report of the Library Committee, as follows:

Gentlemen,—On the various matters submitted to them your Library Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows:

1. That Miss Genevieve Sullivan be appointed Assistant Librarian at a salary of $300 per annum.

2. That for bookbinding and repairing the system now adopted of engaging extra help as occasion may require be continued.

3. That in future the Library be opened to the public for the distribution of books at 10 a.m., instead of 9.30 a.m. as heretofore.

4. That notice be given to the public that the opening of the Library in the forenoons will be resumed from this date.

Respectfully submitted.

The report was adopted as read on motion of Dr. McNulty, seconded by Mr. Spence.

Moved by Mr. Kenner, seconded by Mr. Ritchie—That we desire to express our appreciation of the valuable services rendered by Mr. Walker during the year he has been on the Board, and that we very much regret that he has decided to sever his connection with the Board for the present.—Carried.

Mr. Walker replied and thanked the Board for their kind words, and expressed the hope that at some future time, he hoped to be associated with them again.

The meeting then adjourned.

MORGAN'S ADDRESS ON THE CONFESSIONAL

"If asked what in the Roman organization I consider the most degrading, the most debasing, the most disgusting, the most deadly, the most damnable element: as being subversive and destructive of morality, of true religion, of social and family relationships of all that tends to godliness, and nobility of character, in short, everything that is good and true and holy, I would without one moment's hesitation answer "The Confessional."

"Mother Church" possesses a power in the confessional as near Almight as anything in the world could be. No wonder, then, that she defends it with all her might, and vigorously resorts any and every attempt to expose, and lay bare its infamy. It is impossible, absolutely impossible, to use language too strong in condemnation of what so debases man and dishonors God."

The foregoing remarks were made by Rev. Patrick Morgan at Park street Baptist church yesterday evening to an overflowing congregation.

"Auricular Confession," said the speaker, "like other errors of the Roman system, is founded on a misconception most simple and plain passage of Scripture: 'Confess your faults, one to another,' which as anyone may see, means mutual confession of faults, one person may commit against another, so as to obtain forgiveness of the offended party. It is not to confess to a third party, but to the party offended, in which case they are to forgive one another. The passage in question is as far as the east is from the west from meaning the one-sided confession to a priest in a confessional box. If, however, our Roman Catholic brethren will have it so, it follows, since the confession is "one to another," that when the penitent has made his or her confession of sins, and submitted to a severe and close examination even to the most secret thoughts which, generally, in the case of female penitents, on sins in connection with the seventh Commandment—the priest should, on his part go through the same process, by confessing his sins, and be closely examined, "one to another" is "another to one." If the penitent to priest, then priest to penitent."

"The instructions given to priests for their use in the confessional," continued Mr. Morgan, with the sameness of well conversant with his subject, "are so bad, so utterly and unspeakably obscene, that they are scarcely ever translated into English; certainly not by the monks themselves. To do so would be to reveal the secret of their power over their people, and lay open before the public what it is to their interest to carefully conceal: as well as lay themselves open to public contempt.

"If I were to translate in your presence this evening passages from Saint Alphonsus Liguori's Theologia Moralis, or from Peter Den's Theologia Moralis et Dogmatica, which are daily poured into the ears of the women and maidens of our fair Dominion, the result would be a prosecution under the Obscene Act."

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY

The annual meeting of the Little Lake Cemetery Company took place on Monday afternoon. Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., in the chair. The following gentlemen were re-elected directors: W. H. Moore, Charles Stapleton, B. Shortly, W. G. Morrow, J. J. Laundy, Dr. Geo Burnham, E. H.D. Hall, T. A. S. Hay, Arthur Stevenson and E. H. D. Hall.

The managing committee for last year were also continued in office namely, Messrs. T. A. S. Hay, B. Shortly, W. G. Morrow, and W. H. Moore.

On motion of Mr. B. Shortly, seconded by Mr. T. A. S. Hay, Mr. Frank Wise was given an increase of $200 per year in his salary, which brings it up to $1000.

Superintendent's Report.

Mr. Frank Wise, the superintendent presented his annual report, which was as follows:

Although the year has been a very busy one at the cemetery, very little new work has been undertaken within the cemetery grounds.

The fences and hedges ordered removed have all been taken away excepting three cedar hedges, which will be removed early next spring.

A new stable and shed has been erected on the corner of Ware and Haggart streets, costing about $1,500.00. This will allow the removal of the old sheds inside the grounds, which for a number of years have been an eyesore to the entrance of your cemetery. This work is being proceeded with as quickly as possible.

Now that the old buildings are being removed from near the entrance gates I would like to see an attempt made at replacing them with a good substantial stone and iron structure, as the old gates and fence are gone beyond repair.

Your greenhouses are unable to supply the demand for plants and flowers, of which there were over 20,000 disposed of. These were distributed between 4468 urns and 226 beds and borders. This is over and above the vases and beds supplied by the several florists of the city.

About one half the lots whereon the old receiving vault stood has been disposed of, and I expect in a short time they will be all sold, as this is a very desirable location.

The Financial Statement.

Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P., secretary-treasurer, presented the financial statement for the year, the totals of which are as follows:

Receipts	$7,065.30
Expenditure	6,806.81

Director's Report.

Mr. W. H. Moore, president, submitted the annual report of the directors, which is unavoidably held over till to-morrow.

ELOPEMENT IN HIGH LIFE.

A Texas Millionaire's Wife Is Deported From Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 15.—With his penitent wife, J. E. Snaad, millionaire, of Amarillo, Texas, left for St. Paul, to join her children and mother, Albert Boyce, with whom the woman eloped, is being held here under $5,000 bail by the federal authorities on a deportment warrant. The couple were ordered deported, and the wife left with her husband and a Burns' detective rather than wait official developments.

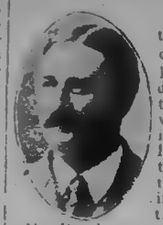
Boyce had $15,000 in currency in his pocket when arrested at a local hotel, and New York drafts for $100,000. Mrs. Snaad had diamonds on her person valued at $20,000. Her husband had much trouble persuading his wife to return home.

Is your husband cross? An irritable, fault finding disposition is often due to a disordered stomach. A great many have been permanently cured of stomach trouble by taking Chamberlain's Tablets. For sale by all dealers.

TO ABOLISH $200 DEPOSIT

Speech of Mr. J. H. Burnham in Commons

Proposal to Make It Easy For Any Man to Enter as a Candidate for the Dominion Parliament.



From Hansard we take the speech of our member, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., delivered in connection with the bill which he recently introduced in the House of Commons to do away with the deposit of $200 in Dominion elections.

Mr. Burnham moved second reading of Bill (No. 8) to amend the Dominion Elections Act. He said: The object of this Bill is to do away with the deposit in Dominion elections. In Ontario that deposit has been done away within provincial elections, and I desire to bring our Dominion Elections law in this respect in conformity with that in Ontario at least. Of course it would be out of the question to urge that the deposit should be done away with in Dominion elections in one province and not in the others, and therefore, I propose to repeal the provision requiring a deposit as regards the Dominion generally. While the deposit of $200 may seem a very small one, there are very large objections to it. From one end of the country to the other, the opinion of the labor people is against it, and they are a very prominent and forcible portion of the electorate. Since the request comes from these people, it ought to be taken seriously; and since we have adopted the provincial franchise, it is but consistent that we should follow the provincial practice as much as possible in our elections. So far as I know, the only argument against the abolition of the deposit is one of a technical or legal character. It is the argument that by doing away with this deposit, we shall encourage the candidature of irresponsible parties. Well, that has not been found to be the result in the provinces of Ontario, in the provincial election, and these are of nearly importance to the Dominion elections. Therefore, you may reasonably conclude that such a contingency would be less likely in the Dominion elections. In any event, since the doing away with the deposit in the province of Ontario has not been found to facilitate the entry of irresponsible parties into provincial contests, I do not see why that argument should have any weight in Dominion matters.

At the suggestion of the Premier, the bill was allowed to stand.

HOCKEY

The intermediate O.H.A. team defeated Belleville last night at the Brock street rink, by a score of 30—1.

There was a large crowd present, and what was expected to be a hard fought contest, turned out to be a poor exhibition of the winter game. The Belleville team had nothing but their sticks after the first ten minutes of play and the home seven scored almost as they pleased, although Lefleur of the visitors, in goal, made many difficult stops. The home seven played well all through and although not called on to extend themselves, they were prepared for a hard battle.

Belleville scored first, after about five minutes play, a shot from Ford's stick beating Desrocher. The first part of the game was featured by close checking and it looked as if the Pets would have to work to pull out a victory. However, the Pets opened up shortly after and were never headed, the half ending 11—1, in favor of the home team.

The second half proved to be little more than a procession of Peterborough players up to the Belleville goal, the home team scoring 19 goals in this period, while the visitors were blanked.

Referee Burgoyne, of Toronto, gave impartial decisions and handled the game in good style.

BISHOP'S NULLIFICATION IS ITSELF DECLARED NULL

English-Speaking Quebec Judge Rules From Bench That Decree of Ecclesiastical Court is Worthless in the Eyes of the Law

Judge Archibald, in deciding the case of Delphit vs. Cote: "No ecclesiastical authority has the right to exercise any coercive jurisdiction with regard to the validity of a marriage tie, although it may enquire into such a question for the purpose of regulating the relation of its members to itself in accordance with its enactments. FLAMES CONSUMED BUILDINGS IN THOUSANDS AS THEY SWEPT UNCHECKED ACROSS THE CITY

Osaka, Japan, Jan. 16.—A series of fires which broke out at one a.m. this morning swept unchecked across the southern half of this city, fanned by a strong wind. The conflagration was not under control until late in the afternoon, when, according to official figures, 3,226 buildings had been destroyed and 30,000 persons rendered homeless. During the first four hours the flames consumed more than 1,300 houses.

THE VENICE OF THE EAST.

Osaka, the "Venice of the East," has a population of about a million and is rated one of the most important manufacturing and commercial cities of Japan. It is located on the Island of Hondo, on the two banks of the River Yodo, and is visited by travellers for its Buddhist temple and its picturesque canals, spanned by 1,300 stone and bamboo bridges.

THE SCENE OF MANY FIRES.

It has been the scene of frequent conflagrations, mainly because its buildings are mostly flimsy bamboo or wooden structures, built close to each other and very inflammable.

WOMAN SHOT AT BY ROBBER LIFE SAVED BY CORSET STEEL

London, Ont., Jan. 16.—Mrs. S. M. Fraser, 508 English street, was held up and shot by an unknown highwayman on Central avenue near Adelaide street, shortly after eleven o'clock last night. The bullet entered her side but was fortunately deflected by a corset steel and lodged in the handkerchief in her pocket.

The woman was badly frightened, but not seriously injured. A short time before a highwayman, presumably the same man, held up a young servant girl on Colborne street near Central avenue, and took a small sum of money from her.

The police have been notified and are working on the case.

SUN LIFE'S BIG YEAR.

Income in 1911 Was $10,557,335, an Increase of $981,881.

Substantial increases in the amount of business done, in income, assets and surplus are shown in a report just completed of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada for the year 1911. Figures were given recently of the amount of new assurance written during the year. A later statement shows the total amount of assurance in force at the end of the year to have been $164,572,073, an increase of $21,022,797 over the amount in force in 1910. The income of the company has grown to $10,557,335, an increase of $981,881, or about 12.5 per cent., while the excess of income over expenditure was $5,180,452 in 1911. Assets have been increased by $5,736,095 and now amount to $43,900,985, while the surplus of the company stands at $4,717,073, or over 19 per cent. higher than a year ago. Profits paid to policy-holders during the year amounted to nearly half a million dollars. Some of the principal figures from the company's report of the year's operations are:

	1911.	Increase over 19
Assurance issued and paid for	$36,454,781.19	$2,921,103.78
Business in force	164,572,073.32	21,022,797.32

PUSH PETERBOROUGH

Civic Services, Finances and Rate of Taxation.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Some of the advantages for manufacturing that Peterborough possesses have been pointed out. There are other matters that promoters of industries look into. They furnish protection from fire, and the department along with the waterworks system, is recognized as being so efficient that low fire insurance rates are given.

The common schools, of which there are nine, have a reputation of being among the best in the Province, and in addition there are the Collegiate Institute, and Normal school for teacher training. A reference to the hospitals, parks, churches etc., would complete an attractive list of public conveniences and institutions.

The municipal finances are in an enviable condition. The surplus of assets over liabilities amounts to the tidy sum of $354,386. Of these assets, the waterworks and valuable real estate owned by the city are revenue producing. In the sinking fund there is a surplus of $35,000.

The question of taxation is a tender one with the average citizen, and an important one for the prospective citizen. A comparison of the taxation here with other cities is an educative one for the citizen and prospective citizen alike. There are 18 cities in Ontario. A recent Government return gives the sum raised in 1910 in these cities for Municipal and School purposes. Taking these returns of the sums raised, and using the Dominion census to ascertain the population of the cities, it is found that the amount of taxes levied per head of population for municipal (apart from school) purposes varies from $3.83 to $18.80. If one hears comments made in Peterborough at times he would imagine that the highest rate is in this city. But it is not—far from it. The lowest rate is in a city where the ownership of a steam railway, operated by the C.P.R., gave returns that reduced the taxes, and I understand that an oversight of obligations also assisted and wish to locate where there are good civic services and where the finances of the Municipality are in a sound condition—that is promoters of substantial industries, and not promoters who are looking principally for an opportunity to pull something for themselves out of the floatation.

Sanitation is an important matter, and in this connection a system of sewers is requisite. The city has over 58 miles of common sewers with about 2400 services. It has 55 miles of concrete sidewalks, and in sewers and permanent sidewalks has expended over $400,000. The waterworks, owned by the city, is adequate and complete, the new dam, pumping station and machinery, furnishing an excellent system. There are nearly 40 miles of water mains, on which are set nearly 250 hydrants for fire protection and from which there are over 3000 services.

A competent fire brigade, continuously on duty, with a complete equipment in a commodious station that now the rate has been raised so that in a recent letter in a paper in that city, there is the familiar reference to an "already high rate of taxation." So this city might fairly be left out of the comparison.

Counting this particular city in, however, Peterborough stands third lowest among the 18 cities in the rate of taxation per head for municipal purposes, with a rate of $6.97 per head. Only two cities have a lower rate, and fifteen have a higher rate. The rate per head of taxes for school purposes is higher than in the majority of the cities, but taking the combined taxation for all municipal and school purposes per head of population there are only four cities with a lower rate than Peterborough and thirteen with a higher rate. Peterborough's rate is $3.54 higher than the lowest (the railway owning city) and $13.67 lower than the highest.

In civic services and conveniences, in sound financial condition, and in low rate of taxation, Peterborough offers intending citizens and manufacturing establishments attractive conditions.

Yours truly,
Civis Sum.

A Heavy Loss.

Mr. J. H. Garbutt, the popular reeve of Smith township, had the misfortune to lose a valuable horse a short time ago. The animal took sick and died in spite of all that veterinary surgeons could do. Another horse is also in bad shape, , and is not expected to live. The malady seems to puzzle the vets who have been treating the animals.

The horses are valued at $250 each.

Portsmouth, Eng., Jan. 15.—The keel plate of Great Britain's twenty eighth ship of the Dreadnought class was laid to-day in Portsmouth dockyard. The new vessel is the first to be begun of the five armored ships provided for in the British naval program of 1911-12. She will be completed in the course of the year 1914, and when she has been added to the navy, Great Britain will possess 32 Dreadnoughts or super-Dreadnoughts, half of which will be armed with 13.5 inch guns.

The vessel laid down to-day has not as yet been named. She will be the largest battleship hitherto constructed in England, displacing between 25,000 and 26,000 tons. Although the Dreadnought cruisers of the Lion class are much longer, the new vessel will be slightly heavier, besides throwing heavier shells than her immediate predecessors.

A number of improvements have been introduced by her constructors in the arrangement of the interna, subdivisions intended to minimize the danger of a torpedo attack, while her ante-torpedo battery will consist of 16 6-inch guns, whereas her predecessors have been armed with only 4-inch guns for the purpose of encountering torpedo boats.

To East City.

The Mayor and Council propose to take up the matter of street railway connection with East City at once. Some time ago The Times made some suggestions regarding this matter, and it might be well if these were taken into consideration. A new bridge is badly needed at Hunter street, as the present structure has about served its day and generation. We intend to refer to this matter again in a day or two.

SEVERAL INJURED IN A SUNDAY BLAZE IN JONES AVENUE APARTMENT HOUSE.

Some Heavy Losses—One Woman Rescued by Men Who Climbed Up a Telegraph Pole.

Toronto, Jan. 15.—At 2 o'clock, sitting down to their dinner in their apartments above 227 Jones avenue, at 2.30 o'clock, smothered by smoke, their lives imperilled, frantically attempting to get out by crawling along a perilously narrow second-story window, such was the experience of the inmates of Jones avenue Apartments yesterday afternoon.

Fire broke out in the rear of the Jones avenue grocery, 227 Jones avenue, and was discovered by Mr. J. Morrison, manager of the grocery, who was just sitting down to dinner in the dining room above the store.

FIRE STARTED SUDDENLY.

"I had just been down to the basement and coaled up, and there was no sign of smoke or fire anywhere, and had come back to my dinner," said Mr. Morrison, "when I thought I smelled smoke coming up the kitchen stairs. I hurried down into the little room behind the store and saw the whole of the ceiling on fire. Immediately I rushed up stairs, and calling out to my wife that the place was on fire, and to bring the cash box with her, I grabbed up my little infant grandson and dashed down the stairs again with him, ran out the back door into the lane, gave the little fellow to some friends who had gathered, and dashed back to the stairs again to try and force my way up to help out the other folks.

"The stairway was blocked with smoke and flames, and although I did my best to force a passage, the smoke overcame me and I was forced back with my hair nearly all burnt off. I then ran around to the front door, where I found my wife had crawled out onto the 10 inch window ledge, and yelled to her to crawl along to the next door neighbors, which she did, being helped by Mr. Lambert, of 225, and thence down to the street in safety. My sister-in-law, Miss Rae, followed my wife's example and found the road to safety but Miss Quinn, or boarder, got rattled and instead of coming down to the lower flat, got out on the window sill of the top storey and prepared to jump. A couple of men climbed up the telegraph pole and caught her just as she was falling."

DRUNKARDS PATRON

When Christians Decided to Merge Bacchus into St. Martin the Reputation of Former Was Handed On To Him.

What has come to be known as St. Martin Summer consists of a few lovely days about the second week of November. We hear a great deal about St. Luke's Summer; but St. Martin's Summer and his name-day, November 11th, suffer neglect — possibly because the saint was French and not English.

Perhaps, too, the knowledge that he is the patron saint of drunkards has not added to his reputation. That office came to him by accident. The reason how this doubtful honour was thrust upon him after his death was rather curious. The Vinalia, or Feast of Bacchus, was always celebrated on November 11th. Later, when the Christians decided to merge Bacchus into St. Martin, the reputation of the former was unfortunately handed on to the saint, although quite unmerited by him.

Before his conversion he was a military tribune, stationed at Amiens. When one day, so the story goes, in midwinter, at the city gate of Amiens a miserable beggar appealed to him for help, the soldier drew his sword and, dividing his cloak, gave half of it to the wretched beggar. At night, so it is said, Christ in person appeared to the astonished soldier, clad in the very cloak he had divided with the beggar a few hours before.

Another legend is that the saint, having been annoyed by the behaviour of one of the geese in his poultry-yard, ordered it to be slain and served up for dinner. He died immediately after partaking of it, and the anniversary has ever since been observed in France by the eating of goose on that day, November 11th. And even now, when the sunny days of St. Martin's Summer come round, there are but few French people who do not give a passing thought to that kindly saint who divided his cloak so that a poor beggar might be protected from the cold.

The "Father of Southwark."

Thousands of poor people in the South of London will regret that, owing to advancing age, Canon Horsley is obliged to leave his busy parish of St. Peter's, Walworth, for a quiet living in the South of England. For years he has worked zealously on behalf of the people of the slums, and there is scarcely a branch of parish or municipal work in London with which Canon Horsley has not been connected. To the people of Southwark he has been in every sense a "father of the flock," and it is stated that he once refused a colonial bishopric that he might stay at home and work in the slums.

The canon is a man with a fund of anecdote, and describing the odd duties of English bishops some time ago, he told a story of the Bishop of Bath and Wells, who had been visiting Bodmin borough. On the way to the train he lost his reckoning, and stopped a boy. "I say, my lad, how far is it to the station?" "About a mile and a-half," said the boy, who had never seen a bishop before. Then, staring at the bishop's knee-breeches and silk stockings, he added, "Hullo, you've been up Stumbledy, eh?"

THE PRIMROSE LEAGUE

The Story of the Founding of the Famous British League. — The Primrose Was Beaconsfield's Favourite Flower.

It was really a chance remark which led to the founding of the Primrose League — that remarkable political organization which to-day has over 1,500,000 members.

When, on April 19th, 1883 — the second anniversary of Lord Beaconsfield's death — his statue was unveiled in Parliament Square, Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, arriving at the Commons late in the afternoon, was given a primrose by Mr Cove, superintendent of the members' cloakroom. When Sir Henry entered the Chamber he found the whole Conservative party similarly decorated with Lord Beaconsfield's favourite flower. The fact impressed him so much that as he walked home with Lord Randolph Churchill he remarked: "What a power of primrose! This should be turned to account. Why not start a Primrose League?"

Lord Randolph was instantly interested. "Draw up a plan," he said, "to carry out your ideas, and we will see what can be done."

Ultimately Lord Randolph and Sir Henry were joined by Sir John Gorst and Sir Alfred Slade and in due course these four gentlemen founded the League, and constituted themselves the ruling council.

It was originally intended to admit men only, banded in companies of about a hundred, to act as missionaries of the League. Ultimately, however, it was decided to admit ladies, with the result that the membership rose from 957 in 1884 to 237,283 in 1886. Not long ago it was reported that the total membership had touched 1,700,000.

It has, of course, been said that the primrose was not Lord Beaconsfield's favourite flower, and that when Queen Victoria sent a wreath of primroses to Lord Beaconsfield's funeral and wrote on it, "His favourite flower," the allusion was to the Prince Consort — not to the dead statesman. Mr Reginald Lucas, however, in "Lord Glenesk and the 'Morning Post,'" says that one who knew Lord Beaconsfield well declares that he habitually wore a single primrose in his button hole when he was at Hughenden in the early spring: while another more intimate friend can speak of having seen an abundance of primrose in Beaconsfield's house in Curzon Street that had been gathered on the slopes of Windsor Castle.

THE MEAN MAN

"Talking about meanness," said an old son of the soil, who nursed a pint of ale in a chair by the fire, "you should ha' known old Ruby what used to keep a farm out Goswell way.

"Twenty years ago, it is that his son went out with a tin bucket to milk a cow. Somehow or other, both the lad and the bucket disappeared mysteriously.

"No more was heard of him till he wandered back home ten years after, as rich as a millionaire, and loaded the old man up with gold and diamond pins and new clothes, and gave him five thousand dollars as a birthday present.

"And d'ye think old Ruby was grateful? Ne'er a bit!

"'George,' says he 'wot 'ave yer done with the bucket?'

"And George left home again, wondering whether his dad was the meanest man in the world or whether that distinction was still held by the fellow who used a wart on the back of his neck for a collar-stud."

PURE ENGLISH

"My dear, I wish you would speak more carefully," said a stickler for pure English to his wife. "You say that 'Henry Jones came to this town from Sunderland.' Don't you see that it would be better to say that he 'came from Sunderland to this town'?"

"I don't see any difference in the two expressions," rejoined the lady.

"But there is a difference in the two expressions — a rhetorical difference. You don't hear me make use of such awkward expressions. By the way, I have a letter from your father in my pocket."

"Oh, dear, is my father in your pocket?" inquired the wife. "You mean that you have in your pocket a letter from my father."

"There you go with your little quibbles! You take a delight in harassing me; you are always taking up a thread and representing it as a rope."

"Representing it to be a rope, you mean, dear?"

And then he grinned a sickly grin and wished he had never started the discussion.

RUN DOWN

The council employé had formally applied, in writing, for a holiday — with salary, of course — on the grounds that he was "run down."

"I'm a bit suspicious of this rundownitis," remarked the chairman. "It's been very prevalent among the council's employés of late. I propose the applicant be sent for."

"I beg to second that."

The proposition being carried, a messenger went in search of the applicant. Presently there was a scuffling at the door of the council chamber.

"Order there!" commanded the chairman. "Officer, why do you allow that person to try and force his way into the room? Remove him instantly!"

"Beg pardon, sir," said the officer, with a smile, the breadth of which not even his own capacious palm could conceal, "it's the man you sent for — the road foreman wot's run down."

"Oh, well, let him enter, then."

"Beg pardon, sir, I can't. He's too fat for the door."

The Late Samuel Curtis.

At the ripe old age of 95, Mr. Samuel Curtis, an old and esteemed resident, passed away at the home his nephew, Mr. William Curtis, 584 Bownie street. On coming to this country, he settled in Dummer township in 1838 and some years later came to Peterborough to reside. His wife predeceased him in the year 1900.

WHEN WOMEN LED

The Fair Sex Was Keen Well to the Fore in the Past, But Where Real Fighting Was to Be Done.

In the French Revolution women often led the bands of peasants who rose against the aristocrats. At Troyes a similar sight was seen during the champagne riots which convulsed the Aube Department of France.

At the head of the detachment which one district sent to join the "Iron Battalion" marched a splendid-looking young woman, wearing a white-knitted cap, with the Revolutionary red ribbon twined around it. Her starting-point forty miles from Troyes, this girl tramped every step of the distance between dawn and dark. She was cheered by the crowds when she arrived in Troyes.

It was a girl, too, who headed the great no-rent strike in New York, three years ago.

Nearly all the big tenements on the Bowery, the most crowded section of darkest New York, are owned by agents, who collect them in rooms or small flats to the poor. The rents are awful. A man will have to pay twenty-five dollars a month for three small rooms on a fifth floor.

It will be remembered that at the end of 1907 Eastern landlords suffered from the worst slump which had been known in the States for very many years, and the result was that evictions for non-payment of rent became more and more frequent.

A REDUCTION IN RENTS

It was Cecilia Arkin, a nineteen-year-old girl, who devised the plan of campaign, and banded together no fewer than thirty thousand families, who all vowed to pay no more rent unless a general reduction of twenty per cent. was granted. Each family pledged itself to enlist as many as possible of the landlords' victims.

The struggle was a long and bitter one. Hundreds of families were turned out, but in the end Cecilia Arkin, on a victory. The agents compromised, and a general reduction of rent was the condition on which the strike was settled.

The late Carlist rising in Spain was headed by a woman. There was in fact, and the insurrection broke out at Berga. In the turbulent province of Catalonia. The identity of the lady has never leaked out. She was a beautiful blonde, and rode magnificently.

It was rumoured at the time that she was Donna Blanca, Duchess of Braganza, and wife of Don Alfonso, brother of Don Carlos. But this surmise was proved to be false, and to this day her identity is a mystery.

There has always been a deal of smuggling along the Rio Grande, the boundary line between the United States and Mexico.

The most notorious of all these smugglers was a Mexican woman known as Lalla, Queen of the smugglers. She was quite young, and extremely good-looking, and by her extraordinary talents rose to be head of a band of most daring smugglers.

A QUEEN BETRAYED

For nearly four years she reigned supreme, and then one day, as her long train of "burros" (donkeys), bearing contraband goods, was crossing the Rio Grande, she was surprised by a sudden shower of rifle-bullets. She had been betrayed, and a strong force of Mexican "Rurales" had been ambushed among the rocks.

One of her arms was broken by a bullet, but with splendid courage she gathered her men and rode straight of the troops.

A soldier seized her bridle. She cut him down, and for some minutes a furious fight raged. Then numbers prevailed, and she and her surviving companions were pulled down. She died in hospital a few days later.

There is no part of the world and no race which does not produce its fighting women. Quite lately our Crown Colony of Southern Nigeria has been plagued by a lady of colour known as the "Omu."

Among her tribe she is reckoned officially as a man, and cannot have a husband.

After causing endless trouble to the authorities she made peace, and then coolly demanded a seat upon the Legislative Council. So far this has not been granted, but it is possible we may hear more of this coal-black Suffragette.

PERSIAN WEDDINGS

Tying the matrimonial knot is a very prolonged and serious affair in Persia. In fact, a wedding may extend for a week. On the last day of the wedding the bride, who has been treated as a sort of outcast, is conducted by a near relative to a room, where she undergoes further and more elaborate decoration.

She then returns to the guest-room, and her dowry is laid before her in trays. The dowry often comprises such queer things as cheap and highly-coloured oleographs, gaudy vases, birdcages, and many useful household articles. Having kissed the hearthstone of her home, she is then given bread, salt, and a piece of gold, and thus equipped and closely veiled she is hoisted on to a gaily-adorned donkey and, accompanied by a circus-like procession of friends, goes to her future home, where her husband awaits her.

"Are you a friend to William Biggins? That ne'er-do-well?"

"I should think not, indeed!"

"Then you'll hardly be interested to hear that he has inherited a hundred thousand pounds."

"What? Dear old chap!"

Asker: "How do you excuse those other-in-law jokes of yours to your wife?"

Funman: "I tell her they refer to [illegible] who says they are not half [illegible]."

Body Not Recovered.

The body of the late Mr. Henry Fairweather, whose sad death by drowning took place on Sunday last at Nassau, has not yet been recovered. A number of men are at work searching but it is said there is little hope of success until the ice breaks up in the spring.

THE GOLDEN ROE MINING COMPANY

LIMITED OF ORILLIA.

Capitalization $500,000; Divided into 500,000 Shares; Par Value $1.00

Have decided to mine a large quantity of the Very Rich Ore shown up by recent developing work, and also intend to erect a mill to crush from 20 to 25 tons a day. This will enable the Company to pay dividends next summer. In order to provide funds for this purpose the Company now offer the balance of the 50,000 shares offered to the public in the Prospectus dated 26th day of September, 1910, filed with the Provincial Secretary, Sept. 27th, 1910. These shares are now selling at $1.25 per share until Nov. 25th. They will then advance to $1.50 per share. They will continue to advance in price as developing work proceeds. Assays got from this property run from $22.00 in gold per ton to $86,-240.40 (eighty-six thousand two hundred and forty dollars and forty cents). Part of the machinery is now at the mine—the balance will be taken in on the snow roads this winter.

The Golden Rose Mine is forty miles from Markstay Station by winter roads, and in summer it is reached by boat from Temagami Station on T. & N. O. Ry.

MILL RUN

Four and a quarter tons of ore was sent to Kingston. It averaged $50.00 in gold to the ton.

71.7 PER CENT. FREE MILLING

Four assays obtained from Hendley & Parker, Sudbury, gave, respectively, gold values of $2,419.01 $1,020.68, $787.63, $102.72. Two just recently assayed $607.20 and $393.60.

This stock is closely held, and will not be listed with any broker till the mill is installed and the first dividends paid. A small block will then be listed to make it liquid. As an investment this is second to none.

Applications for shares should be sent to

OXFORD SLANG

Some Queer Words Used by Undergraduates Which are Bewildering to the Freshman When He First "Goes Up".

Oxford University has a jargon of its own, which is partly culled from the same kind of thing used in the public schools of England. Some of the expressions are rather bewildering to the freshman when he first "goes up" to the University.

Study, social life, and sport each have their peculiar expressions.

The first examination to be passed is Responsions, called "Smalls." The examinations are called "Schools" because they take place in the Examination Schools. After "Smalls" comes the Divinity examination, which all must pass. The undergraduate calls it "divers." Then comes Moderations — called "Mods," and the final examination for the B.A. degree called "Greats." Lectures in preparation for these examinations are called "lekkers." If at the end of any term a student is not taking a public examination he has a college examination Collections, or "Collekers."

A man who is reading Chemistry is called a "Stinks" man. If he is attending Mathematics lectures he will be a "Maths" man. The tutors are called "Pons."

In his social life, too, the Oxford man has his pet expressions. Breakfast is a favourite meal for the display of hospitality. "Come to 'brekker' with me," a "second year" man will say to the "freshers." The manservant who brings up the breakfast, makes the beds, cleans out the rooms, etc., is called a "scout." Breakfast, lunch, and tea are taken in a man's rooms, dinner is taken in "Hall." The bill for dinners is called "battels."

An average man's day put into Oxford jargon would run something like this:—

Get up and "keep a chapel," services being held every morning and evening. After "brekker" go to "lekkers." In the afternoon go and be "tubbed" or take part in a football "squash." He will, perhaps, take tea in the college Junior Common Room, or, familiarly, "J. C. R." At seven "Hall," after which he will read, having first, perhaps, "sported his oak" or closed his outer door to keep away intruders.

New Post Office For Lakefield.

At the annual meeting of the Lakefield branch of the Liberal Conservative Association, Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., who was present, stated that he had every reason to expect that his request for a new post office at Lakefield would be granted. This will be good news for the villagers, as well as those who live in the country contiguous to Lakefield.

The frost burst the water pipes of the G.T.R. Station, doing considerable damage.

REASONABLE REQUEST

It was a cold night. The traveller inquired at the only hotel in the little town if he could be lodged for the night, but was informed that it was full up.

"But you must give me some sort of accommodation," said the stranger. "Surely you don't want me to sleep under the starry but chilly skieg."

"Well," said the proprietor, "the best we can do is to make you up a bed in the passage and curtain it off for you." And so it was arranged.

In the dark watches of the night the traveller awoke. A freezing draught chilled him, and the sheet which had been hung up as a partition was blowing merrily in the breeze. The traveller rose and shouted for the landlord.

"What is it?" queried a voice from the stairhead.

"Please," said the stranger, timidly, "may I have a paper of pins to tack my bedroom door with?"

THE SILENT JAP

The Japanese, alone of all races, utter no sound when engaged in combat. From this national trait springs the curious regulation which prevents Japanese regiments from possessing bands, bugles, or drums. Orders are given verbally, or by means of signals with the hand or sword. No trumpets sound the charge, no drums beat the tattoo, and no bugles wake the troops with their ringing calls.

A FAIR OFFER

It was a political meeting in the East during the last recess, and the M. P., an exceptionally popular man, was addressing his constituents. The politician in question rejoices in a luxuriant crop of hair. The audience was sympathetic for the most part; but there was one man in the front row of the audience who made numerous interruptions. He was a coal-heaver, apparently, and had but recently been leaving coals.

"Get your hair cut!" he shouted during a most pathetic passage in the candidate's speech. The well-known catch phrase seemed particularly applicable, so a good many of the audience laughed.

But the M.P. was equal to the occasion.

"I will make a bargain with that gentleman," he said. "I will get my hair cut if he will get his face washed."

There were no more interruptions.

Brannigan: "What's the matter, Willikin?"

Willikin: "Matter enough. You know some time ago I assigned all my property to my wife to — to keep it out of the hands of — of people I owe money, you know?"

"Yes."

"Well, she'd taken the money and gone off — says she won't live with me because I swindled my creditors."

Plumduff—Here's a man mentioned in this paper who is 108 years old and can walk ten miles at a stretch.

Goodguff—Pooh! I can do that easy, and I'm not half as old as he is.—Brownlee's Magazine.

FOUL PLAY

This is the first night of that great drama, "The Clue of the Return Half-er, Did She Not Come Back?" at that home of the actor's art, the Thespian Theatre, Little Sloccombe. Little Sloccombe — and this should be noted before the curtain rises — is a great place, and is famed in several villages round about for its football. They are enthusiasts in Little Sloccombe.

But the curtain rises, and the play's the thing! Here comes the great detective, specially hired for, to inquire into the strange and enthralling mystery which envelops the moated grange. Almost immediately he finds a clue. Four people have been shot. A bush calls upon the house as the great sleuthhound makes his momentous pronouncement.

"Ha, ha!" he cries, in dramatic tones. "There has been foul play here—foul play! Now, what next shall I do?"

From the gallery came a voice, clear and insistent, to the perplexed detective-actor:—

"Give 'em a free kick, guv'nor. That's the game!"

THEY ONLY LOOKED ON.

Johnny hasn't been to school long, but he already holds some peculiar views regarding the administration of his particular class.

The other day he came home with a singularly morose look on his usually smiling face.

"Why, Johnny," said his mother, "what's the matter?"

Johnny snorted.

"I ain't going to that old school no more," he fiercely announced.

"Why, Johnny," said his mother, reproachfully, "you mustn't talk like that. What's wrong with the school?"

"I ain't goin' there no more," Johnny replied; "an' it's because all th' boys in my room's a bloomin' old bowarus!"

"Why, Johnny Johnny!"

"Yes they are. There was a boy whisperin' this mornin', an' teacher saw him an' bumped his head on th' desk ever an' ever so many times. An' those big cowards sat there an' didn't say give it up nor nothin'. They let that old teacher bang th' head off th' poor little boy, an' they just sat there an' seen her do it!"

"And what did you do, Johnny?"

"I didn't do nothin' — I was the boy!"

Made Wonderful Recovery When Dr. Hamilton's Pills Were Used.

"I was never actually sick," writes Mrs. La Pierre, wife of a well known resident of Labeniene, "yet I never could get strong like other women. I ate well enough, but somehow blood rich and red I could never make. When I married I took a great pride in my housekeeping, but it kept me tired all the time. Mrs. Lachance, my neighbor, looked well — she told me her health had been made by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I only thought of pills as a physic, but now I know that Dr. Hamilton's Pills are more, for they quickened my stomach, liver and bowels—made me stouter and stronger, gave me such color in my cheeks as I never had before. They do good to parts in ways I need not mention in this letter, but I sincerely believe Dr. Hamilton's Pills should be used at regular intervals by every woman, that's why I write this letter."

FORESTRY IN EUROPE.

The productive forest area in 1908 on the Grand Duchy of Hesse in Europe amounted to 182,263 acres. In general the standing timber is composed of sixty-nine per cent. hardwood and thirty-one per cent. coniferous forest. The fir ranks first among the coniferous species. The total yield of lumber in 1908 was 4,575,000 cubic feet. Refuse in so far as it is not suitable for lighter lumber, such as laths or for pulp, is used for firewood. The expenditures for salaries, forest cultivation and road building amounted to approximately $754,000, and the total gross income (from lumber and firewood) was $1,161,931. The capital represented by the forests ($52,665,354) brought interest accordingly at 2.21 per cent. Where intensive forestry of this kind is practised, forest fires are unknown. Sufficient money spent on Canadian Forest Reserves would greatly reduce the fire danger, maintain an adequate lumber supply for the country and in time become a source of revenue to the Government.

THE VALUE OF THE DOLLAR.

When investigating the high cost of living some consideration should be given to the fellow out in South Africa who is digging up the gold in large and healthy shovelfuls. All unknowingly he is the person who is largely responsible for this increased price of commodities. The final figures for gold production in South Africa have not been completed but it is certain that it will be about $160,000,000, thus showing the biggest increase since 1905. The average production of gold for the last five years has averaged about $140,000,000, which means that since 1905 the vast volume of $700,000,000 has been dumped into circulation.

Gold, though the standard of values, is nevertheless subject to the laws of supply and demand as other commodities are. The trouble is that there is such a large increase of gold that it has lost its purchasing power. In other words it takes more gold now to buy commodities than it did in years gone by. Only good would result at the increase of the gold supply if all prices should rise at regular rate at scheduled times. But unfortunately this does not happen. Trust made goods respond very readily to the fluctuation of gold, but trust employees find that they have a long and tedious battle before they can get an increase in their wages. That is where the pinch comes.

The fluctuation of the gold value, however, is something that must be considered by the financiers. The cost of living does not affect any person as long as the purchaser has the wherewithal to buy. It takes time to reach the level.

BOX LUMBER IN CANADA.

The reported consumption of lumber for boxes and shooks in Canada during 1910 was over one hundred and fifty-eight million feet, valued at two million two hundred and seventy three thousand dollars. These statistics have been compiled by the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior from reports received from one hundred and two box factories, over one-half of which are in Quebec. Seventy million feet of lumber or forty-five per cent. of the total was used in Quebec. Ontario used sixty million feet or thirty-eight per cent. of the total and the remainder was used in the provinces of New Brunswick, British Columbia, Manitoba and Nova Scotia. Pine, the chief species used in Ontario formed forty-five per cent. of the total box lumber and cost only $13.93 per thousand. This comparatively low price for pine, indicates that with this more than with any other species, mill waste and cull lumber is being used in the manufacture of boxes. Spruce in 1910 was used in every province in which boxes were made, and formed forty-one per cent. of the total. The cost was $13.83 per thousand or twenty-eight cents more than the average mill run price, so that manufacturers using spruce demand the finest quality. The remaining fourteen per cent. of the total was comprised of fourteen other woods, of which hemlock, basswood and balsam were the chief. The most expensive box-wood used was a million and half feet of Douglas fir at $23.06 per thousand in British Columbia. Balsam in Alberta of the three eastern provinces was the cheapest softwood reported in 1910 at $8.94 per thousand. It is a wood light in color, tasteless, fairly strong and its use in the manufacture of boxes should be encouraged.

WHO'S WHO IN CANADA

SIR ROBT. PERKS, BART.
Financier and Engineer

Capital combined with foresight and industrial confidence coupled with untiring energy and zeal, are among the requirements, and in having these Canada can thank her great men. They have developed and are still developing her resources and making the brand "Made in Canada" favorably known in the marts of the world. The position which the Dominion has assumed, not only as the foremost of the outlying sections of the British Empire but in the estimation of all civilized nations, is a tribute to her great men and a striking evidence that our opportunities have not been neglected.

SIR ROBT. PERKS, BART.

And though Sir Robt. Perks is not a Canadian his interests lately have been largely in this country particularly with his Georgian Bay scheme. A man who has sufficient confidence in Canada as to offer to invest millions of dollars of his own and friends must see a large future for the country.

HON. ADAM BECK
Toronto.

Canada's water powers are greater than those of any other country in the world. Her known or estimated flow development is about twenty-six million horse power, but it is certain that this is but a fraction of her water power asset.

So far the computation has been dependent upon somewhat unreliable statistics, but the energy displayed by the Conservation Commission has had beneficial results. This important body has stirred to action some indifferent provincial authorities, and there is now the prospect that by next Spring a complete table of waterpowers in the Dominion will be ready to place before the public, along with much valuable information relating thereto. It may be said in passing that the provincial governments for the most part have been negligent in the matter, and it is only where the federal government has control and responsibility that accurate information has up till the present time been available.

It is not the intention of the writer to convey the idea that all of the provinces have stupidly sat by and left the power question alone. There is the very notable exception of Ontario, where the Hydro-Electric Commission has done a wonderful work in developing cheap power for the people of that province. But none the less the province of Ontario has not gone to the trouble of accurately estimating the water powers of New Ontario or the great hinterland beyond.

The Hydro-Electric Commission, with which the name of the Hon. Adam Beck will always be associated, has an immense scheme under way to give the people of the whole province the cheapest possible light, heat and power that electricity can give. In general the proposal is that the power at Niagara will supply western and southwestern Ontario, from the rapids on the St. Lawrence will be derived the power for eastern Ontario from the vicinity of Ottawa will come the power for northeastern and central Ontario, while there are enough water powers in New Ontario to supply the whole of the north and the north central. Thus Ontario will have, unless it is interfered with, a complete network of transmission lines to supply every village.

Mr. Beck who was born in Waterloo Ont. in 1857 is a successful business man as well as thorough sportsman and public man. He is member of many societies and orders.

WHAT CANADIANS ARE DOING

JAMES MUIR
Newspaperman
Ottawa.

When the other day the Ottawa Journal, of which James Muir is managing editor, incidentally told its readers that every member of the editorial staff was a graduate of either a Canadian or Old Country university they must have been startled at such an assertion, but the writer could have truthfully gone further and stated that over seventy per cent of the Canadian newspapermen are university graduates. This speaks well for the future of the Canadian press and its influence, and probably no paper has, to day, a better opportunity than the Journal, and no journalist a greater privilege than Mr. Muir in making the press of this country the leaders of the people. One notices too that the smaller journals are considerably higher in tone than they used to be. This is what one expects from the class of men who are running the papers now.

Cause of Rheumatism

Many physicians believe that rheumatism is the result of over-feeding, followed by putrefactive changes in the foodstuffs in the alimentary canal; that the action of certain bacteria produces specific toxic (poison) substances which, when introduced into the blood, cause a deviation from the normal oxidation process, thus causing the condition that is designated rheumatic. In the majority of instances it is probably due to eating too much of the vegetable class of foods; in other cases it is the result of eating too much meat

BUILDERS' PROFITS with Bankers' Security

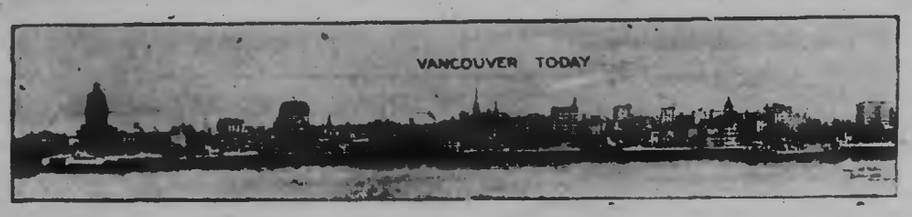
100,000 SHARES AT $1.00

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has been organized recently with an authorized capital of $500,000, to do a general building, real estate, and insurance business, and is actively engaged in Vancouver and Victoria—two most promising fields. The profits from building houses for cash and selling on instalments is well known, and will be one of the principal channels from which profits will be derived. BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its own building department and architect, and does its own construction. In addition to building houses, BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its real estate department, where it carries on a general real estate business, discounting agreements of Sale, subdividing and transacting a general insurance business.

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS LIMITED, is a new concern, having been in business less than two months in Vancouver, but is becoming well known as the Company without any promotion shares and with a strong board of directors, made up of well known Vancouver and Victoria business men.

Shareholders may conservatively look for a 10 per cent dividend the first year, increasing thereafter and a steady advance in the value of their shares caused by the substantial reserve it will always be the policy of the directors to build up.

Companies run on similar lines, notably the Los Angeles Investment Company and "Home Builders," both of Los Angeles, have proved phenominally successful, the former, which has been in business some sixteen years, having accumulated assets of over $6,000,000, and paying 28 per cent. dividends; and the latter, which started business three years ago, with only $1,250 capital, has assets to-day of over $1,089,000, a surplus of over $308,000, is paying 17 per cent. dividends, and its $1.00 shares are selling at $2.30.



FIRST ISSUE OF SHARES

100,000 Thousand Shares are offered at $1.00 per share, 44,500 of which have been subscribed. These shares may be purchased for cash or on the instalment plan. $10.00 cash and $5.00 per month handles 100 shares Mail your subscription To-day.

Advertisement by Water.

An ingenious machine has just been put on the Parisian market. According to details given in "La Publicité" the machine prints an announcement on the ground in water, which it sprays upon the soil in a fine shower. The letters or signs will last from twenty to thirty minutes, until the evaporation of the water is complete, and as the spray of water also serves the welcome purpose of laying the dust, the invention will doubtless be recorded a heartier welcome than the majority of advertising devices of this nature receive.

"Silver Greyhounds."

WOMAN WALKS 8000 MILES

A walk of 8,000 miles was recently be finished by Mrs. Stella Woolf, and her husband, Dwight H. Woolf, when they arrive at their home in Kansas City.

The trip started at San Antonio, Texas, more than thirteen months ago. The pair went first to Atlanta and then to New York, where they turned their steps toward home. Previously they made two other walking tours and have covered a total of 10,300 miles on foot.

"When you get into a rut walk out," said Woolf today, as he explained that he took up walking in order to get the outdoor life which his physician two years ago said he must have. At that time Woolf was a music dealer. His health was poor and the doctor told him he would have to get out in the open or die.

"Let's walk," suggested his wife, "for I'm going along."

With them went the family pets, a faithful pony, which has drawn a cart carrying their baggage on the long marches, and a dog.

The Woolfs have eaten and slept in the open. Since leaving San Antonio they have spent only twenty-one nights out of 411 with a roof over their heads.

BADGE FOR COMPETITORS AND OFFICIALS AT STOCKHOLM OLYMPIC GAMES.

BOB FITZ THE MOST REMARKABLE FIGHTER

Who was the most remarkable heavy-weight fighter who ever put up his gloves under the Marquis of Queensbury rules? Answer: Bob Fitzimmons. The freckled faced Cornishman, maker of horse shoes, and built like a reversed pyramid, was the most extraordinary fighter.

Fitz was thirty-five years old, when he won the championship of the world from Jim Corbett at Carson City. He was thirty-seven when he lost the title to Jeffries and the [illegible] scratch by the California[illegible] second time.

Age is a big factor in this story. It serves to show that the ruddy product of the antipedes was more extraordinary than Jeffries, who up to the recent disaster at Reno was generally conceded the distinction. Likewise it proves that care of a body can combat the advance of years to a certain extent.

Jeffries was twenty-four years old when he beat Fitzimmons at Coney Island. He was thirty-five years, two months and nineteen days old when Johnson whipped him in the "battle of the century," July 4. At thirty five he is an old man. At this same age Fitz was in the zenith of his great power.

After the two knockouts which Jeffries imposed on him, the Cornishman went out and beat all candidates except Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, with whom he drew, until the total period of his existence totalled forty-three years. What other fighter in the history of pugilism can claim such a record? None.

Fitzimmons is to be considered all the more extraordinary because of the weight handicap which he suffered after he defeated all the middleweights. Never scaling more than 170 pounds he had all the punching force of men of fifty pounds more left.

At twenty-nine Jeff retired from the ring and rested on his reputation. He did much hunting and fishing, but idleness was his principal occupation for six years. And when he was induced to train and knock the packing out of Johnson, his paunch bulged out like a submarine boat. He reduced to his old weight after much effort. In training he looked as good as when he had made mince meat of Jack Munro, as his farewell fight. But Ed Dunkhorst could have put up a better battle at Reno than the "mighty" Jeff.

BASEBALL SALARIES WONT BE CUT.

The fact that the minor baseball leagues intend to reduce salaries of players in future has alarmed members of the profession who firmly believe that in the course of time the magnates of the majors, the National and the American, will decide to adopt a similar policy. Alarmists point to present conditions in organized baseball as favorable. From the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico there isn't an outlaw circuit. The players, big and little, are at the mercy of organized major and minor leagues wherever professional baseball thrives upon gate receipts. If the major league magnates wanted to apply the screws and chop salaries the players would be compelled to submit or retire from the diamond. They could get no baseball employment anywhere else unless with semi-professional teams paying nominal salaries for one or two games a week.

Not So Easy As It Seemed

Twelve persons decided to lunch together every day and agreed not to sit twice in the same order. One of the number, a mathematician, surprised his associates by informing them that their decision meant that one and one-third million years must elapse before they would again be seated in the original order. Two men can sit together only in two different ways, three in six ways, four in twenty-four, five in 120, six in 720, seven in 5,040, eight in 40,320, nine in 362,880, ten in 3,628,800, eleven in 39,916,800 and twelve in 479,160,000.

Gratitude

A grateful manner, considered even from a sordid point of view, pays. Would you not be inclined to repeat an invitation to the grateful guest who laid stress upon heartful thanks for the pleasure received?

Certainly it is agreeable to be amply thanked, instead of feeling every entertainment is accepted as a matter of course.

Ladies' Golf Attire.

A golf kit is an essential in the wardrobe of most of the society women who are now out on holiday. The Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia who have been seen doing a round on the links at Ballater in pouring rain, are two Royal ladies who play a good game, and Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein is another Royal enthusiast for golf. The Duchess of Marlborough, Mrs. Asquith and the Premier's daughters are some of the ladies known on the links of Gullane and North Berwick. A short skirt of Harris tweed or serge with tailor-made shirt of soft silk or a fine wool, low-heeled shoes, and a jacket of knitted wool, with either a cap to match or the smallest and simplest of turbans in suede — such is the outfit of the woman golfer who is in earnest. There is greater variety than ever this year in the matter of golf coats.

Pineapple Cream

Pineapple cream is a delicious sweet for the hot weather. Required one tin of pineapple, half an ounce of isinglass, two ounces of lump sugar, and half a pint of thick cream. Put half a pint of the syrup or the pineapple into a saucepan (if there is not that quantity make it up with water.) Chop up two-thirds of the pineapple, being careful to remove any skin. Add the chopped-up pineapple and sugar for eight minutes; then add the isinglass that has been previously dissolved in a little hot water; allow all to boil gently for five minutes, and pour the mixture into a bowl. When it is cold and beginning to set whisk in the cream and beat all together until it is a thick creamy mass. Pour into a wet mould, and leave it aside until set and quite firm. Turn on to a glass dish and arrange the remainder of the pineapple around it cut into small chunks.

The Rain Complexion Cure

There are two beautiful women, well known in Irish society, says a lady writer, who frankly declare "rain cure" to be the sole cause of their exquisite skins being always in perfect condition. Every woman can take the "rain cure" if she wills. Put on a pair of strong shoes, a waterproof, a simple tweed hat, but no veil, and let the fresh soft water reach the skin. Then, on coming in, rub briskly with a soft towel, sit down in a warm but not heated room, and rest all the facial muscles, and you will be astonished at the result. Of course, damp clothing will have been removed previous to this.

Some of the new parasols are edged with narrow ostrich feathers, and have a big bow of ribbon on the handle, also edged with feathers.

For a satin slipper nothing is so effective as a small round buckle of rhinestone through which is inserted a satin or velvet ribbon.

Curls and puffs are used in profusion and quantities of false hair are still absolutely necessary. Infantile styles prevail — quite babyish, in fact.

To Remove Paint Spots

To remove paint from clothing, mix equal parts of turpentine and ammonia in a saucer and apply the solution to the paint with a piece of cloth of the same color as the garment. Rub gently until the paint is removed, then sponge with warm water and a little white soap.

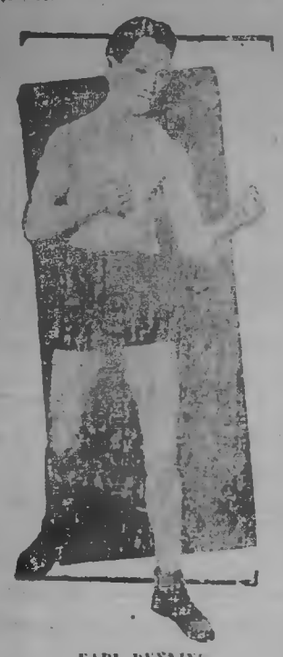
WOLGAST'S LOSS

An appendix is a useless sort of thing, doctors say. Adolph Wolgast's was worse than useless; for, when it went on a rampage and had to be knifed, it cost the whirlwind middleweight fight champion not less than $50,000. And it wasn't all surgeons' fees, either.

Wolgast was confronted with one of the happiest outlooks ever enjoyed by a fighter, two days before Thanksgiving Day. Besides good health and a strong right arm, he was confronting the following eventualities:

Bout with Fred Welsh, $10,000.
Bout with Packey McFarland, $15,000.



EARL DENNING
One of the best lightweights on this Continent.

Bout with Knockout Brown, $10,000. Lesser bouts, all told, $[illegible]

This makes a grand total of $55,000. Wolgast [illegible] to complete his clean-up of the championship field in six months. Now, however, Dr. Pollard, who is in charge of Wolgast's case, says that the latter fellow positively must not get into the ring again within six months.

It's even money he agrees with the [illegible] that an appendix is worse than useless.

CANADIAN VS AMERICAN FOOTBALL.

Reddy Griffith, the famous Varsity coach, writing on American football, says:

So much has been written and so well written during the last few days about the American football game that it is almost impossible to add anything to the criticisms. Still, the writer in a moment of weakness, promised to give a few of his views in the way of comparison between the game as it is played in Canada and in the United States.

The great outstanding difference is in the matter of offside interference. To the average Canadian offside interference is something to be avoided as destructive of most that is highly cherished in his game; to the American it is the essential, the pivot around which the whole games swings. Take it out of American football and you have at once eliminated practically every means of attack and defence known to American coaches. In fact, it is a very difficult matter to convince American footballers that runs can be made, kicks punted off, or anything else effective done unless the runner or the kicker be protected by his interference. In itself, interference is not so awful as it sounds, particularly in the open field; in a matter of fact it often is one of the prettiest [illegible] parts of the game, and [illegible] with this department highly developed is always the one most feared by others.

RALEVICH THREW SIX.

Giovanni Ralevich, holder of the Italian heavyweight wrestling title, threw six heavyweights in less than twenty minutes actual wrestling time at Madison Square Garden, upon his first appearance on the mat in America. The Italian champion undertook to throw all the men in two hours at catch-as-catch-can style, with only a moment's rest between bouts, and to forfeit $1,000 to each man he did not throw in twenty minutes.

His first victim was Harry Petopsky, who succumbed to a half-nelson in 2.02. A body hold and a half-nelson brought August Faust to the mat in 1.40. George Sandole was disposed of with a back hammerlock in 2.35. Otto Paul Schmidt, a 285-pound German, put up quite a tussle, and lasted 4.40, being pinioned with a half-nelson. A double nelson forced Hans Latzner to the mat in 4.55. Fritz Mohl, a stock Hollander, was the victim of a wrist hold and a half-nelson in 3.12.

WALTER CAMP
Editor of Spalding's

Walter Camp, who picks the All-American eleven team, has been quoted last word in football for 30 years. He is on the rules committee, was coach for Yale and his son is now [illegible] Varsity. Camp edits Spalding's [illegible] guide. His All-American team [illegible] the country's best.

MY LADY'S COLUMN.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA'S PROTEGE

At the age of three, pianists in the making take more interest in toys than in sharps and flats. But Fitz Scavenius, the famous young Grieg player, who will visit Birmingham during his coming concert tour, and who is one of the favoured few to have his name entered in the book in which Queen Alexandra writes down the names of her favourite artists, on his third birthday astonished his family by clambering on to the piano stool and playing "Ding dong bell" and "Mary, Mary, quite contrary," hammering away at the notes till he struck the right ones. Later at the age of 14 he achieved another record by being the only competitor to obtain full marks at the senior Trinity College examination. Shortly after this exploit Queen Alexandra sent for young Scavenius, who is of Danish descent, and immediately won the royal mother's approval upon his playing.

The Healthy Pose.

If the proper pose of the body be retained in all the ordinary duties of life, whether sitting or standing, it will minimize the fatigue of the daily routine. When domestic work is thrown upon some muscles, while others are idle, the result is the pain in back and limbs with which so many women suffer. To walk upright with the figure erect and not like a half-shut jack-knife, legs and joints flexible and lungs breathing properly, will not only contribute to a woman's appearance but also to her health.

MATERIAL IMMATERIAL. THE MODEL'S THE THING

Black and white continue to be the mode; whether frocks are of silk, chiffon, satin or cloth.

An exquisite model for an evening dress is composed of black chiffon over the same fabric of white. A lot of jet is used on the black tunic. The foundation of the gown is cream veiled with the sheer white. A black satin girdle gives a touch of color.

This gown would serve for a model in marquisette or it would be charming in any simple soft material. The mode is the thing.

Princess Mary's Rebuff

The following little story of the Queen and Princess Mary was told by one who could vouch for its truth. Princess Mary, when a younger child, ran one day into the sanctum of a certain well-known private secretary at Court. "I am sorry," said the much-harassed individual, "that I have no time to spare this morning for you, my little lady." The Princess, a high dudgeon, ran to her mother. "So-and-so called me a little lady," she complained, "and you know, mother, that I am a Princess." The Queen replied laughingly, "Run back, Mary, to Sir So-and-So, and tell him that you are a Princess who has not yet learned to be a little lady."

Poached Eggs with Stewed Tomatoes

Poach carefully the number of eggs required, and, after placing on hot buttered toast, put eggs and toast on a hot ashet. Now wipe some small tomatoes, and stew them for five minutes in a little butter, pepper, and salt. Make a border of the tomatoes round the poached eggs. This provides a dainty and appetising breakfast dish.

LORD STRATHCONA

cuously. His is a remarkable story. From an obscure start in one of the most distant and uninviting posts on the North American continent Donald Smith hewed his way along until to day he occupies one of the most distinguished and honorable positions in the gift of his adopted country — Canada's High Commissioner at the seat of Empire. When the full story of his achievement comes to be written, which in the natural course of events cannot be many years removed now, it will constitute a volume of intense and thrilling interest, a striking demonstration of the adage that truth is stranger than fiction. How he rose from a position of penury and privation to be a peer of the realm, with the wealth of a Croesus, combined with the philanthropy of a judicious but extremely generous nature, affords material for a narrative of intense human interest. His early association with the Hudson Bay Company, his part in the stirring events of the troubles in the northwest of a quarter of a century ago, his connection with Canada's great railway enterprises and numerous industrial ventures, and his parliamentary associations, will each furnish chapters refreshing and absorbing in their attractiveness.

Lord Strathcona, whose full titles are Baron Strathcona and Mount Royal, G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., F.R.S., LL.D., P.C., D.L., High Commissioner for Canada, was born in Scotland in 1820 and first came to Canada in his teens to enter the Hudson Bay Company's employ. His Lordship was married in 1886 and his only child (Hon. M. C. Howard) is heir to the title.

LEON GARNEAU
Montreal.

When Leon Garneau read the address of welcome from the combined Liberal clubs of Montreal to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, on his return from his coronation trip, many of the thousands who listened to the young man's words on the historic Champ de Mars felt that they were listening to a coming public man. Mr. Garneau is an opportunist of the right kind always ready to take advantage of every wind that will help the different causes he espouses. The son of the Hon. Nemese Garneau and grandson of Dr. J. B. Garneau, Quebec's historian, Leon Garneau has the right blood in his veins and as he is possessed of a vitality that sometimes surprises his friends and a lucidity born of his experience as a lawyer Canada can look forward with confidence to her clever son.

What poverty is like that of moral misery? When the head is poor, what mockery is money wealth!

Few people regret the times when they were silent, but many regret and often suffer because of imprudent speech.

THE ROYAL BANK.

A Record Breaking Year for This Popular Financial Institution.

Once more the Royal Bank is able to report in its Annual Statement, all previous records broken. The Royal Bank has now been in business forty-two years, and never before in its history has it had such a satisfactory year as that which closed on the 31st day of December, 1911. Its net profits during the period mentioned amounted to 18.58 per cent. upon its paid-up capital, so that, as the Bank pays a dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum to shareholders, it is earning more than 50 per cent. in excess of the amount distributes. This is a splendid margin to be able to set over against a less prosperous period. For the first time in its career, probably, the profits crossed the million mark, amounting to $1,152,249 which was $200,913 more than during the year 1910. The Bank brought forward at the beginning of 1911, profits amounting to $228,393. The amount carried forward at the end of the year was $243,230, being an increase of $14,837.

During the year the paid-up capital of the Bank did not show as large an increase as in the case of several other banking institutions, the figures being now $6,251,080 as against $6,200,000 a year ago. As the Bank is now putting out $2,000,000 additional stock, the paid-up capital will receive its increase during the year 1912. This will put the institution in an excellent position to increase its circulation which, it is interesting to observe, was in excess of its paid-up capital at the end of 1911, thus demonstrating the necessity for the increase in paid-up capital which is taking place. The note circulation at the end of the year was $6,338,976, being $412,186 more than at the end of 1910.

Among the most marked advances made by the Bank are the increase of over $18,215,201 in the total amount on deposit, bringing the total of such amount up to $68,294,808; and the increase of $6,144,277 in the call loans and of $7,174,957 in the commercial loans, making these two items respectively $13,322,851 and $59,646,165. The reserve now stands at $7,056,188 as against $7,000,000 a year ago, and the undivided profits at $461,480, being an increase of $158,250 as compared with a year ago, so that the reserve is largely in excess of the paid-up capital. The total assets of the Bank increased over $18,000,000 and are now $110,528,512. The percentage of liquid assets to liabilities to the public is large, being 49.54 per cent. as compared with 47.33 per cent. in 1910. As will be seen from these comparisons, the Bank has experienced a most satisfactory year.

Mrs. P. Lawerson, of Port Hope, is spending a few weeks, the guest of her brother, Mr. William Robertson, 183 Reid street.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. A. Robertson, of Pipe Stone, Man., are visiting friends in Peterborough and district.

KING EDWARD VACUM CLEANER

You cannot clean carpets, rugs and furniture by beating. If you think you have, just try a KING EDWARD VACUUM CLEANER and you will find the article full of dust, which breeds disease.

The KING EDWARD HAND MACHINE has no equal as compared with other machines. It is lighter to operate and its suction is much stronger. Its suction is stronger than many of the power machines, and the dusting is done away with. On account of the short stroke one person can operate it on carpets and rugs equally as well as two, and it is about half the weight of other hand machines to carry up and down stairs or from one room to another. It is sold for less money than any of the hand machines. All machines are guaranteed.

Tighe Gets Four Months.

Edward Tighe, the young man accused of the seduction of a girl of fourteen, pleaded guilty yesterday afternoon of the charge before Judge Haycke, and was sentenced to four months in the common jail with hard labor. His Honor scathingly addressed the prisoner, pointing out to him the seriousness and enormity of the crime.

It is also found necessary to again warn the citizens against fast driving over Hunter street bridge. The warning at the end of the bridge is being ignored every day, and the police are going to take action.

Mrs. Alex. Weddell (nee Lena Alford) will receive for the first time since her marriage on Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 17th, at her home, 301 Reid street, and after on the second Wednesday of the month.

The many friends in Peterborough, of Mrs. H. D. Robertson (formerly Miss Veva Hunter) will be relieved and delighted to hear that she with her husband and family have arrived safely at Shanghai, from the interior of China.

The men employed on the wharf on George street have not been working for a few days, owing to the cold weather.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

ANY person who is the sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Enter by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate 50 acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect house worth $300.00.

One of the most beautiful costumes ever turned out was that worn by Queen Mary at the Coronation Durbar, and there are no fewer than 5,250,000 stitches in the train, which is of Irish point lace.

The train had been presented as a gift by the ladies of Belfast to her Majesty, and was made by the Presentation Sisters of Youghal. It has been estimated that it would have taken over a quarter of a century for a single lace worker to complete the train, but sixty workers, working regularly, finished it in 98,020 hours.

This reminds one that at the Plantagenet Ball, held at Buckingham Palace in 1842, the late Queen Victoria impersonated Queen Philippa, in a silken dress made entirely in Spitalfields.

The dress, which was on view for several days at Hanover Square, cost, in materials alone, nearly $1250 while the gems that decorated it, exclusive

EVIDENTLY A MISTAKE.

'Twas at the skating rink, and the young man was but a beginner. Wherefore he lost his balance!

He made a wild effort to grab anything in the way of support. And, as it happened, the nearest thing was a fashionably-dressed lady, also on skates. She promptly turned on him.

"You contemptible cur!" she shrieked. "Do you think I am a lamp post, or a piece of furniture, or what? You ought not to be allowed in here, you clumsy lout! What right have you to tear other people's clothes to rags, and claw them in that mad way? You are not fit——"

But the young man had now recovered his composure.

"Pardon me, madam," he remarked, "but haven't you made a mistake?"

"A mistake?" gasped the lady. "What do you mean?"

"Simply this, madam," came the calm retort, "I am not your husband!"

"Accused of begging!" exclaimed a magistrate. "Why, you are the very man who was begging at my door yesterday!"

"Yes," assented the vagrant, with a sneer, "and you didn't give me anything."

"Well, I'll give you something now. Fourteen days!"

WHAT CANADIANS ARE DOING

E. M. BERLINER
Montreal

To be secretary-treasurer and joint manager of one of Canada's biggest companies at the early age of twenty-seven is something to be proud of and Edgar Berliner holds down these two positions like a veteran, as those who would try to take advantage of this smooth faced young fellow, find to their cost. But though Eddie Berliner is one of the keenest business men in Montreal, he is one of the best to meet. With a countenance beaming with good nature he grips your hand as though he was really glad to see you, and the first query "what can I do for you" is typical of the man. He is always ready to do someone a good turn, he treats his employees like men and women, not machines, and when sickness comes to any of them he is there with the "practical" support.

The firm which gives Mr. Berliner these opportunities to show what he is made of is the Berliner Gramophone Company Limited of Canada of "His Master's Voice" fame. There is quite a romantic story attached to the adoption by this firm of the famous advertisement but it must be given in another place and it is best told by Eddie Berliner himself for he is a good raconteur with a big fund of humor.

Emile M. Berliner, to give him his full name, a son of Isaac Berliner the founder of the firm and born in Washington D. C. in the year [illegible]. He received his education in his native city and the Institute of Technology where he graduated in 1[illegible]. Mr. Berliner immediately entered the great business with which he has been so successful. Whatever future Canada holds out for our brainy young men will be for Mr. Berliner's. He is a living example of the success to win, when wholesome, is good and [illegible]

It may have a influence pouring [illegible] our life, a new teacher to inspire us, a new friend to be [illegible] always, who, when life grows narrow and weary, will take us into his wider and calmer and higher world.

Whether it be biography, introducing us to some humble life made great by duty done, or history, opening vistas into the movements and destinies of nations that have passed away; or poetry, making music of all the common things around us, and filling the fields and the skies and the work of the city and the cottage with eternal meanings — whether it be these, or religious books or science, no one can become the friend even of one good book without being made wiser and better.

Women Students in Vienna.

In answer to an inquiry from an old classmate, a girl writes:—"The woman student has ceased to be an object of unsual interest here, she is just a student, and has become so numerous that no one stares at her. The catalogues for last year show that there were at the three Austrian universities 24,304 students, of whom 1993 were women, about 8 per cent. In the medical department there were 271, and in the philosophical — which includes the school for teachers — there were 1949, while [illegible] 44 heard lectures in the law department, where all doors have not yet been opened for women."

An old country woman and her daughter went into a shop in town to buy a bonnet. When she had purchased the bonnet the milliner, turning to the woman, said:—"What about a sailor for your daughter?" meaning, of course, a hat. The woman turning to the girl, indignantly retorted—"What about a sager for yourself?"

WHO'S WHO IN CANADA

CANADIAN CLUBS' MEN

The Canadian Clubs afford an invaluable machinery for educational work among the Canadian people upon the topics of social and economic importance. The spread of the Juvenile Court idea is largely due to the facilities they have presented. The Conservation Commission is now co-operating with the new Association of Canadian Clubs with a view to a great educational Campaign for the suppression of forest fires, excessive destruction of game and fish, and many other evils which threaten to eat up the national resources. Nearly all of the delegates to the Imperial Press Conference of last year made known the results of their visits to the Canadian Clubs, and the influence thus extended was perhaps the largest part of the fruits of the Conference. The clubs have enabled the men of the extreme East to talk face to face with the men of the extreme West, and have contributed immensely to the better understanding between the different parts of Canada.

WILLIAM GODFREY
Vancouver
Canadian Club

The chief limitation that now faces the Canadian Clubs in this day of their great prosperity is the difficulty of getting good speakers for the smaller clubs in the more out-of-the-way cities. It is easy to get distinguished men to address the big clubs, for there is no better way of reaching the people of Canada as a whole, and moreover the honor of addressing a club like that of Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa, Halifax, St. John, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Vancouver, London or Victoria more than compensates

MAJOR GRIESBACH
Edmonton
Canadian Club

for any trouble involved. But distinguished visitors to Canada do not always stop over in the smaller cities, and "men with a mission" are apt to think that when they have spoken in Toronto and Montreal and been pretty fully reported they have done about all they need do. To remedy this is one of the chief aims of the new Association, of which Mayor Sanford Evans is president and Mr. R. Wilson Reford of Montreal vice-president, and of which Mr. William Godfrey of the Vancouver and Major Griesbach of Edmonton Clubs are active supporters. The plan is to "book" speakers whenever possible for a series of addresses including not only the big cities but a proportion of the little ones.

J. A. MACDONALD
Calgary

J. A. Macdonald, the well known architect of Calgary, is an old westerner. A brief history of Mr. Macdonald's career since he came to the west would not be out of place, so we herewith give it.

Coming from Eastern Canada to Winnipeg in 1872, he remained there for ten years. From there he removed to the United States, practicing his profession in the cities of Chicago, Ill., and Minneapolis, Minn. He then came back to Canada [illegible] while, and then went to the States, where he stayed for five years, then came back to Canada again, and went to Nelson, B. C., where for years he was supervising architect for the government. From there he went to Lethbridge, where under his supervision the majority of the best buildings were erected. Seeing a wider field in Calgary, he removed there eighteen months ago, during which time he has put up a good many buildings.

KINGS IN TRADE

Most of the Monarchs of Europe Have Made Fortunes by Shrewd Speculation in Business Undertakings.

Monarchs are not above making money. And perhaps the Kaiser should be given first place among reigning Sovereigns for shrewd commercialism. He makes a strong point of cultivating the friendship of financial magnates, not only in his own, but in other countries as well.

The Kaiser has some very large holdings in the Hamburg-American Steamship Line. He is extensively interested in the diamond-mine enterprises of German West Africa. In connection with the vast forests comprised in the Crown domains and on his private estates, he carries on a large lumber business. His horse-breeding establishment in Western Prussia brings him in a handsome revenue. He is the principal stakeholder in the municipal lager-beer brewery at Hanover. And he carries on an extensive manufactory of pottery on his private estates at Cadinen.

GATHERING GOLDEN GRAIN

Gustavius, the present ruler of the Swedes, is a total abstainer. On coming to the throne he abandoned his late father's extensive brewing interests. But he still retains many other profitable investments. He has money in mills and mines, and he seldom neglects to exist cigars at of the Grand Hotel of Stockholm, in which he is by far the largest shareholder.

He is a successful speculative builder. In this way: When property in the slum districts of the Swedish metropolis is going dirt cheap, along comes the King and buys it. And soon on the sites of the dilapidated buildings rise handsome houses and thoroughfares which increase the value of the property many times over.

Few monarchs have shown themselves cleverer managers of a wife's property than the King of Denmark. By shrewd investments he has already multiplied its value many times. In a large number of his enterprises he is associated with his Royal brother, King George of Greece, who possesses an immense fortune, which he owes in a great measure to undertaking certain operations in American grain about thirty-five years ago, which the closing of Odessa and other Southern Russian seaports to the export of grain, owing to the war with Turkey, rendered extremely profitable.

From the sale of beer, the Prince Regent of Bavaria draws immense sums. In Munich are grim, dirty taverns in which the Royal Court beer has been sold for the last three centuries. You never see a waiter or waitress. You must attend to your own wants, whether you be prince or peasant. Indeed, when the Kaiser visited Munich, he and the Bavarian Princes took their places in line, and awaited their turn for a stone mug, which they themselves rinsed out!

EXPENSIVE ALBUM

$200,000 For An Autograph Album With 853 Signatures of World Renowned Celebrities and Their Remarks.

Seven years ago Councillor Louis Barth, of Arad, in Hungary, commenced to collect autographs, and today can boast of possessing one of the finest collections in the world. Indeed, he recently refused an offer of no less than $200,000 for his album, which contains the names of 853 world-renowned celebrities, whose remarks have been written in forty-three languages. Already ninety-three of them are dead.

Recently he visited Marlborough House to obtain the signature of Queen Alexandra, and at Her Majesty's request left his priceless volume there for twenty-four hours, in order that she might examine at leisure his wonderful array of signatures of Kings, Queens, Emperors, Ministers, scientists, artists, and writers. Herr Barth has gone all over the world to add to his book, and has spent between $45,000 and $50,000 in travelling expenses. The Emperor Francis Joseph, who favoured him with an autograph, told him he was the only person, not a Minister, who had ever received his signature.

"I was at Biarritz one year," says Herr Barth, "at the same time as King Edward. I showed him my volume, and, in giving me his signature, he said: 'Your book is an extraordinary treasure. It has only one defect — it is not mine.'"

Herr Barth is preparing a history of how his autographs have been obtained. This book will contain in facsimile every autograph he possesses. It is to be issued in an edition of 100,000 copies, and the proceeds of its sale will be devoted to international charities.

Inquest at Cordova Mines.

Yesterday County Crown Attorney Reid and Mr. G. N. Gordon, went to Cordova Mines, where an inquest will be held to-day on the body of William Easton, who was killed there a few days ago.

Y.W.C.A. Literary Evening.

Last night, Rev. Dr. Marsh gave a talk on "A Night on the Caribbean Sea," in the Y.W.C.A., which was greatly enjoyed by those present. The lecture was made additionally interesting and instructive by stereopticon views.

Will Remain in China.

Miss McCalla, general secretary of the Y.W.C.A., has received letters from her two sisters who are located in Honan, China, to the effect that they are in safety and in possession of passports. They, however, hope to remain at their labors.

Family Deported.

Deporting Officer Devlin came to Peterborough on Monday night and left yesterday morning for Toronto, in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fountain and child, the family who came to Peterborough as emigrants last April, from the old country. The family will be sent back to England.

Funeral Notice.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Ellen McGuire, of Havelock, will leave the residence of her nephew, Mr. Alf. H. Lehane, 332 Reid street, this (Wednesday) morning at 10 o'clock, and proceed to St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to Roman Catholic cemetery for interment.

Windover Remanded.

At the Police Court yesterday morning Alex. Windover was arraigned before Magistrate Dumble, charged with non-support of his wife and family. He pleaded not guilty and the case was enlarged until Friday, in order that a little more evidence could be brought.

Died at St. Joseph's.

At St. Joseph's Hospital on Monday, Eva, the eldest daughter of the late William and Mary Hankinson, passed away after an illness of two years from anaemia.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from 434½ George street, to Little Lake cemetery, Rev. Mr. Fee officiating.

The Search Continues.

The search for the body of the late Henry Fairweather continues. Yesterday divers were employed without result. A large force of men are also at work from daylight till dark. Many believe the body has gone down the river, and will not be recovered till the ice breaks up in the spring.

Wants to be Secretary.

On account of the resignation of Mr. Gilchrist, secretary of the Y.M.C.A., that institution is on the lookout for a successor. On Monday night, Mr. P. Deeth, assistant secretary of Ottawa Y.M.C.A., was in the city to meet the executive of the local Board of Directors with a view of taking the position. No action was taken.

Too Many Dogs.

The attention of The Times was called yesterday to the number of dogs that are to be found on our streets. He said that Peterborough was the worst place that he ever visited in this respect. He counted no less than 14 dogs while walking three blocks, varying in size from a cat to a sheep. He thinks it would be well if every dog found running at large on the streets would be chloroformed.

At Sacred Heart Church.

Yesterday morning the Sacred Heart Church was the scene of a pretty wedding, when Mr. William Anglesey and Miss Sophia LeGrander, both of Peterborough, were united in the bond of holy mattimony by the Rev. Father McCauley. Miss Delphine LeGrander, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, while the best man was Mr. James J. Anglesey, brother of the groom. After their return from a short visit, Mr. and Mrs. Anglesey will reside on Perry street.

Married in Ennismore.

Yesterday morning a very pretty wedding took place in Ennismore, at St. Martin's church, when Mr. P. G. Sullivan, of that township, was united to Miss Mary, daughter of Mr. John Young, also of Ennismore. The Rev. Father Fitzpatrick performed the ceremony. The bridesmaid was Miss Lizzie Young, sister of the bride and the best man, Mr. Edward O'Donoghue. Miss Ballard, the organist, played the wedding march. Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan left for Detroit, and on their return will reside in Ennismore.

MR. WM. EYERS DEAD.

Failed to Rally After an Operation At Nicholls' Hospital.

Mr. Wm. Eyers, who passed away at Nicholls' Hospital on Monday afternoon was an old and respected citizen of Peterborough. The late Mr. Eyers took ill the previous Monday evening, and was removed to the hospital, where he underwent an operation of a serious nature.

The funeral service will be held at his late residence, 118 Antrim street, on Friday Morning at ten o'clock. After the service the remains will be taken by train to Millbrook for interment.

Chronic Throat Trouble Permanently Cured

SEVEN DAYS' USE OF CATARRHOZONE PERFORMED REGULAR MIRACLE.

Miss Counter's Case Proves the Wonderful Efficacy of Catarrhozone in All Throat and Nose Troubles.

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 17.—Miss Counter's case will prove of great interest to everyone troubled with sore throat bronchitis or weak lungs.

When asked for a statement, Miss Counter said: "About seven years ago I contracted a heavy cold that settled on my lungs and resisted a treatment. After I had tried several doctors here and specialists in Detroit without benefit, I went to my druggist and asked him for the best remedy he had for cold on the lungs. He recommended Catarrhozone, which cured my cold in one week. It brought back my voice, and I have been ever since free from my old trouble. For coughs, colds and lung trouble I am sure that Catarrhozone is the best remedy. It goes right to the sore spot, gives quick relief, and makes a lasting cure."

Catarrhozone cures because its healing vapor is inhaled to the very places that are sore and inflamed.

To permanently cure your winter ills, your coughs, sneezing and Catarrh, by all means use a tried and proven remedy like Catarrhozone. But beware of the substitutor and imitator. Look for Catarrhozone only, 50c. and $1.00, at all dealers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

A Test Case.

Has the city the power to compel a resident to keep the snow off his sidewalk, as well as clear the trench in front of his premises? The City of Guelph has a test case of this kind before the courts. The unusual spectacle was seen in the Police Court at Guelph an alderman, a member of the Board of Works, being under prosecution for failure to clear his sidewalk as well as a trench a foot wide in front of his store on Dundas street. The prosecution was really in the interests of the Board of Works, which desires to find out whether or not the board has the power to compel property owners along the street to clean out the trenches and walks, or whether the worv should be done by the board, and Alderman Hobson consented to be the defendent. Judgment was reserved for a week.

PUBLIC GUARANTEE.

That most beautiful picture, entitled "Home Again," has brought such an enormous amount of new subscriptions to The Family Herald and Weekly Star, that the publishers are finding it impossible to keep up with the filling of orders, but in the columns of that paper this week we notice a positive guarantee from the Publishers that every subscriber to that great weekly for 1912 will receive a copy of the picture, "Home Again." Their guarantee is sufficient and subscribers need not feel anxious although the picture may be delayed for a few weeks. Those who have not yet subscribed to The Family Herald and Weekly Star should do so at once and make sure of having a copy of the picture "Home Again." We learn that the Publishers are contemplating something for next season that will make this picture even more valuable than at present. One dollar pays for a full year's subscription to the paper, and the picture

Big G For 30 Years the Standard Remedy for

Diseases of Mucous Membranes

Experienced pharmacists will tell you Big G is the accepted standard remedy for diseases of mucous membranes—distinguish from the name, throat and urinary organs. Avoid substitutes. To expedient is dangerous. Big G, used everywhere since 1896, has proved safe and reliable. TRENT VALLEY COMPANY IS READY TO FIGHT THE HYDRO

T. B. Macaulay Says It Will Agree to Arbitration If the Commission Cares to Buy---Beck Can't Compete For Two Years

BUT IT WOULD RATHER SELL OUT ON FAIR TERMS

Montreal, Jan. 17.—When spoken to this morning about the decision of the Hydro-Electric Commission to fight the Electrical Company, Limited, over the Trent Valley power business, T. B. Macaulay, president of the Electrical Company, Ltd., said that if the Commission wanted a fight, it could be accommodated. He further said that his company was willing to accept the valuation of its property fixed by an arbitration Board of experts, the Hydro-Commission to select one representative, the company to choose one, and the two to select a chairman.

Mr. Macaulay said that if the board fixed the value of the company's property at $4,000,000, well and good, the company would accept the price. The Commission would, however, have access to the books of the company, and would find that its bonds alone were valued at $4,000,000. After this came the stock and the value of properties added to the business since it started operations.

Mr. Macaulay said his company was not afraid of competition, as the Hydro-Electric Commission could not do anything for two years anyway.

P. C. KIDD DISCOVERS FIRE IN THE NICK OF TIME

The fire department had a call last night to the corner of George and Brock streets. It appears that some hot ashes were thrown at the rear of R. H. Hunter's grocery store, and they set fire to the casing of the cellar window.

P. C. Kidd, who was on duty at the time, smelled smoke, and immediately sent word to the Fire Department to be ready for an alarm, and if it had not been for the sharpness of the Constable, a bad fire might have been the result, with heavy damages.

The Fire Brigade were soon on the scene and found that the fire had got through the building into a wooden case that enclosed the water pipes, and which was packed with sawdust. The blaze was a little difficult to get at, but the fire fighters soon extinguished it.

PARENTS GIVE DETAILS ABOUT POISON TRAGEDY

GIRL ARRIVED HOME AT TWELVE O'CLOCK, AND HER LOVER STAYED FOR NIGHT.

Pair Went Down Stairs—Bailey Said He Found Her With Cup in Hand—Denied She Had Taken Anything.

Uxbridge, Jan. 17.—The inquest into the death of Evelyn Baker, the 23 year old school teacher, who is supposed to have committed suicide by taking strychnine, was held at the home of her father, Elias Baker, one mile east of Sandfield. Coroner Mellow, of Port Perry presided.

Crown Attorney Farewell represented the Crown, and H. P. Cook was present in the interests of Ed. Bailey V.S., of Uxbridge, a friend of the dead girl.

Only two witnesses were examined Miss Baker's parents—and their stories were substantially the same. The daughter had left home at 12.45 on Friday to take the mixed train to Uxbridge, ostensibly to do some shopping. She did not return until Saturday night, and was accompanied by Mr. Bailey, who drover her from Uxbridge. The mother called to the daughter on her arrival and reproved her for being out so late, to which the girl replied: "I won't be here long," or "I won't bother you long."

The mother thought she referred to her intention to leave shortly for Hamilton, to take a course at a business college. Evelyn seemed to be in her usual cheerful spirits, and prepared a lunch for her father, brother, and Mr. Bailey.

BOTH WENT DOWN STAIRS.

Bailey went later to a room of Stanley Baker, Evelyn's brother, to remain for the night, and Evelyn went to her room. A few minutes later she descended to the kitchen, and Mr. Bailey followed her down. He discovered the girl with a cup in her hand and at once asked her: "Haveyou been taking anything Evelyn?" to which she replied: "No, Ed. I have not." They returned to their rooms, and a few minutes later Miss Baker was heard to groan several times and then cry out with pain twice calling, "Mother I am dying." The household was aroused and rushed to her room, to find her in convulsions. In reply to the mother's "What's the matter with her?" Bailey replied that it was poison. Dr. Mellow of Sandfield was sent for but she died in a few minutes after his arrival, without making any statement.

Mr. Bailey, the parents said, had been keeping company with their daughter for a year, and stayed at their home two or three times a month over night. After the girl's death, the mother asked Bailey if there had been a quarrel, to which he replied "No, Mrs. Baker. If I was dying, there was no quarrel."

The father said his daughter had told him three months ago that Bailey thought more of her than any other girl, and that she thought enough ofhim to marry him.

In answer to a juror, Mrs. Baker said n opoison of any kind was kept in the house, and they had been unable to find any trace of Evelyn having purchased any anywhere.

BAKER WAS TOO ILL.

It was intended to call Stanley Baker, to whom his sister was much attached, but he was too ill from grief to be present.

Mr. Bailey arrived after the proceedings were over, but he, as well as Stanley Baker, will be called when the inquest is resumed on February 5th in the hotel at Saintfield.

In the meantime the stomach of the deceased will be sent to Prof. Ellis, analyst at Toronto.

ENDS HIS LIFE

Kingston, Jan. 17.—About three o'clock yesterday afternoon an unknown man, probably 30 years of age while sitting in the waiting room of the K. & P. Ry. Station, pulled out a revolver and shot himself. The bullet entered the left side of his head, and he fell to the floor, dying a few minutes later. In his pockets were found a slip of paper with the name Charles E. Herrow, 161 Carpenter street, Chicago.

PUSH PETERBOROUGH

Industrial Advancement and Growth of the City.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—In the letters I have written I have indicated some of the advantages that Peterborough possesses. Let us now look at some of the things that have been accomplished—at the advancement that has been made.

In the past ten years this city has grown faster than in any previous decade, although its growth has always been steady. The assessor's figures show an increase of population in that time of 70 per cent.; the census returns show 63 per cent. The increase in the population in the Dominion was 32 per cent., and in the Province of Ontario 13 per cent., so Peterborough with 63 per cent, seems to have got its share.

Of the cities of Ontario, only four showed a more rapid growth than Peterborough during that period. One of these was Toronto, with 80 per cent.; two others were Fort William and Port Arthur in which the circumstances were exceptional, and the fourth is Niagara Falls, where amalgamation accounts for part of the addition. When Peterborough has grown more rapidly than Hamilton, London, Brantford, Windsor, Guelph, Galt and the other western cities, it has nothing to complain of. In Eastern Ontario urban growth was slower than in Western Ontario. Kingston's increase of population was only 5 per cent., and Belleville's 8 per cent.; showing that Peterborough outstripped the other eastern cities by great strides.

The building permits record gives similar evidence of advancement. Building permits were not issued in Peterborough until 1907, and the record during the past few years has been:

In 1908	$238,963
In 1909	343,489
In 1910	517,958
In 1911 (11 months)	341,357

New factory buildings and additions to others are erected and some of them scarcely noticed by the people generally. Within a short period several such buildings have been constructed. Among these, last year, the Canadian General Electric Co. put up a large building, the Quaker Oats Co., two buildings, B. F. Ackerman, Son & Co., a large addition the Peterborough Canoe Co., a substantial building, the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Co., an addition and Adam Hall a new factory building.

Within the year the Canadian Canoe Co. has erected a large, new building, as has also the Canadian Chicle Co., and the Peterborough Creamery and Adam Hall have put up additions. The Bonner-Worth Co. erected a building for their new industry, and the Model Foundry and Pump Works and the Diamond Wire Mattress Co. occupied premises with new industries.

Other enlargements are contemplated and will probably be proceeded with in the spring. I do not profess that this covers all that has been done in the line of new concerns or factory enlargement, but it shows very creditable progress in manufacturing. When a citizen of another city tells of what has been done there, one is apt to consider it good progress, and may mentally compare it with what has been done in his own city to its disparagement, but does so because he does not know what the names of concerns in the other places represent and because he has not kept himself informed or has not borne in mind what has been done in his own city.

How many of us, if asked, could give a fair idea of the number of factories in operation in Peterborough? A count brings to mind over fifty and some of these are among the largest in the Dominion.

The number of factories, and the industrial advancement, the building record and the increase in population in Peterborough in recent years are very encouraging, and should be an incentive to the citizens to work together to have this rapid progress continue, for it demonstrates that Peterborough is admirably situated for manufacturing.

Yours truly,
Civis Sum.

NE TEMERE IS DECREE NOT UNDER LAWS OF IRELAND, SO JUDGE HAS DECIDED

Man Who Turned Catholic and Was Married to Housemaid in Her Bedroom by a Priest Fails to Quash the Marriage, Though Only One Witness Was Present

PRIEST HIMSELF THOUGHT THE MARRIAGE VALID

London, Jan. 17.—In the Dublin Matrimonial Court to-day, judgment was given in the case in which W. A. Ussher, a Galway landlord, married late at night or a bedroom to a housemaid by a Roman Catholic Priest, with only one witness present, sought to annul his marriage. The judge held the marriage to be valid.

W. A. Ussher, aged 32, of Eastwell Loughren, married Miss Mary Caulfield, at his house on the night of April 24, 1910. His family were Catholic, but he was not a member of the Roman Church till April 22, when he went to Rev. Father Fahy and said he wanted to be married according to the rites of that church. The ceremony was performed in an upper room of the house, after Ussher had been received into the Church, but without the knowledge of his parents. The girl was a domestic in the house.

"IF HOLY CHURCH IT PERMITS."

It was claimed the priest inserted in the marriage service the words, "If the Holy Church will it permit." Only one witness was present, and this was the principal ground for asking for annulment. The Council of Trent, by one of its decrees or ordinances, provided that in the case of two Catholics getting married any ceremomal, to have legal effect, for the purpose of making them husband and wife must be performed by a Roman Catholic clergyman in the presence of two witnesses.

A female child was born to the couple in January last.

In the box, Father Fahy was asked: "Was this marriage, from the point of view of the Council of Trent, null and void?" "Yes."

"Would the two persons who went through the ceremony that night, if they cohabited together, be living in sin according to the law of the Roman Catholic Church?"

"If they were in good faith and did not know anything about the invalidity, there would be no sin."

"But at present, knowing there was only one witness, would they be living in sin?"

"I would not say so."

"Are they married according to the law of the Catholic Church or not?"

"No."

"Are they living in sin if they cohabit to-morrow with knowledge?"

"Oh, yes."

PRIEST THOUGH IT VALID.

Mr. Justice Kenny—"Did you believe you were celebrating a valid marriage?"

"Yes."

"Although you told him it would be no marriage unless their were two witnesses present?"

"Yes."

"How do you reconcile that?"

"I had special faculties from the Bishop."

The Bishop said he did not remember giving Father Fahy special faculties to dispense with the two witnesses, but may have done so.

Judge Kenny, in delivering judgment, said that though the marriage was invalid in the eyes of the Roman Catholic Church, yet it was capable of being validated any time. It was, however, already absolutely valid, according to the marriage laws of Ireland. It would have been invalid by the penal law up to 1870, because Ussher had been a Protestant within the previous twelve months, but that law was repealed in 1870.

NE TEMERE DEGRADES MOTHER AND CHILD.

The judge found nothing in the common law or the church law nullifying a marriage between Catholics by a Catholic priest, because of the absence of witnesses, except the decree of the Council of Trent (which promulgated the ne temere decree), which had no legal effect in Ireland. The result of the granting of the petition would be to make a child illegitimate and to degrade the mother but that was their present position in the eyes of the Church of Rome, which had passed the decrees of Trent and the ne temere decree against clandestine marriages. The petition, therefore, was dismissed with costs.

THE DIRECTORS' REPORT LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY

The following is the report of the Directors of the Little Lake Cemetery Company, which was presented to the meeting of the shareholders at their annual meeting.

To the Shareholders of the Little Lake Cemetery Company,—

It having become evident that a great source of danger existed in the possible happening of fire to a number of wooden buildings that occupied a part of the cemetery grounds and were used for barns, stable, sheddine and ice house, that had been erected for more than thirty years, and had become dangerous to occupy, and in which if fire occurred would do incalculable damage to the beautiful grove of pine trees near where they stood, your Directors decided to pull them down and build a new stable with sheds and ice house on the Company's property fronting on Ware street, one hundred and fifty feet south of the superintendent's residence. This they have done by the erection of a brick stable 22 feet by 40 feet on a concrete foundation with ample loft room for hay etc., and a cellar underneath. The whole is well built, of lasting materials, and most of the old buildings have been taken down and all will soon be removed. The cost of the new stable and sheds has been $1500-00. The ground recovered when put in condition, will on sale, more than repay the expenditure on the buildings.

The removal of a number of hedges in the cemetery during the past year and the improvements of the lots they enclosed, and the filling up of many sunken graves, the general appearance of the grounds has been rendered more attractive, and your Directors are gratified to learn that this action has received the commendation of lot owners.

At the close of the year 1911 the Company owned City Debentures to the value of $12,917.31 as an investment for the perpetual maintenance of the cemetery. There was also at the same time in Bank to the credit of the company $2,500.38. A new debenture for $1000.00 bearing 4½ per cent interest has been purchased. There remains on hand over $2,000.00 for which probably another debenture may be obtained, and will make a total of $15,917.31 held in trust for future care of the cemetery.

There will also be laid before you the reports of the Treasurer and the superintendent from which it will be seen the Company has had in a financial sense, a most prosperous year. Your Directors also believe it has been one in which continued advance has been made towards rendering the grounds more worthy of the name of "God's Acre."

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. H. MOORE,
President.

WHY I LEFT THE CHURCH OF ROME

Morgan Again Addresses Packed Church

"The worst priests in the Roman organization," said Rev. Patrick Morgan, in his concluding lecture at Park Street Baptist church yesterday evening, "are not those who leave it from Scriptural motives, but those who continue in it, although unbelievers at least, because of their daily bread, and for baser motives. I have known a good many priests and monks, and my private investigations have brought the conviction to my mind that a good many priests are real believers, conscientious pastors, and morally good; that another third are sceptics, not believing the rights or the doctrines of 'Our Holy Mother, the Church,' and another third are immoral and often scandalous."

"Frantic denunciations are not calculated to make converts, my former brethren, however, have pursued this favorite papistral method of refuting arguments, ever since I turned my back on Rome.

"The first notice I received in the Roman periodicals in Canada, appeared in an editorial of the 'Catholic Record' of London, Ont., dated, July 17, 1909. The editor doubted whether I ever saw the inside of a Capuchin Monastery, but however, inconsistently stated that he 'proposed looking up the ex-Capuchin Friars' antecedents.'"

A month later, August 28, 1909, the editor quoted from a letter, which he informed his readers, he received from the professors of St. Cuthbert's College, Ushaw, Durham, England; the editorial ran:

"We wrote to Ushaw for information about Morgan. The college authorities discovered that he was by character unfit for the priestly state. After his departure from Ushaw, Morgan went to the Franciscans in North Wales."

After reading the above, I penned a letter to the editor, commending his genius—the fabrication being so apparently clumsy.

The editor, in order to keep in touch with the clericals, gave out this gamboge story with a Neuchatel flavor, therefore, I felt it my duty to remind him that the Franciscan Capuchin Friars are acknowledged on all sides to be superior to the secular clergy, both in virtue and learning, and are most particular in demanding excellent testimonials from the candidate's seminary professors and bishops.

A lengthy editorial, brimful of censure and satire, sprang into existence on October 8, 1910. The editor apparently forgot his former statement viz., "that the authorities at Ushaw discovered that Morgan was unfit for the priestly state," and affirmed that "he (Morgan) spent some time at Ushaw College, which he left with a certificate of good character in 1906."

This, as I again pointed out in a private letter, placed the editor of the Record in a very peculiar predicament, and I have written, to the monks at St. David's Monastery, Pantasaph, North Wales, and explained to them his dilemma, for on December 17, 1910, among the editorials of the Record, I found a letter signed by the present guardian of the monastery:

"Patrick Morgan studied at Ushaw. He was certified as of good conduct and enjoyed freedom from any taint, which place he left on the 19th April, 1906.

"To start with he was satisfactory, but later became strange and irregular. The cause of this was discovered to be opium, which he derived from poppy heads taken from the garden. He was cautioned and did not amend, therefore, he was dismissed. No doubt opiates explain much of his rascality."

If I were such a really nasty character as the dear fathers paint me—if together with John Chinaman and his bundle of washing, I endeavor to rival Quirmbach's Opium Fiend, why when I arrived in his country was I received by the Capuchin Father in Ottawa?

Here I must leave the Jesuitical editor of the 'Catholic Record,' in order that he might, if possible, explain matters, to the editor of the 'Catholic Register,' of Toronto, who wrote on December 22, 1910:

"No doubt, he (Morgan) was with the Fathers (Capuchin) for a time in Ottawa."

"The late Father Chiniquy remarked, 'We have a French proverb which says, 'Le menteur n'a pas de memoire et se contredit souvent'—'The liar has no memory, and often contradicts himself.'"

A Test Case.

Has the city the power to compel a resident to keep the snow off his sidewalk, as well as clear the trench in front of his premises? The City of Guelph has a test case of this kind before the courts. The unusual spectacle was seen in the Police Court at Guelph an alderman, a member of the Board of Works, being under prosecution for failure to clear his sidewalk as well as a trench a foot wide in front of his store on Dundas street. The prosecution was really in the interests of the Board of Works, which desires to find out whether or not the board has the power to compel property owners along the street to clear out the trenches and walks, or whether the worv should be done by the board, and Alderman Hobson consented to be the defendent. Judgment was reserved for a week.

Judge Archibald, in deciding the case of Delphit vs. Cote: "No ecclesiastical authority has the right to exercise any coercive jurisdiction with regard to the validity of a marriage tie, although it may enquire into such a question for the purpose of regulating the relation of its members to itself in accordance with its rules of discipline, and under the express or implied contracts by which such members are bound to it. THE DECREE, THEREFORE, OF THE ECCLESIASTICAL AUTHORITY IN THIS CASE PURPORTING TO ANNUL THE MARRIAGE TIE BETWEEN PLAINTIFF AND DEFENDANT, IS ITSELF A NULLITY."

Osaka, Japan, Jan. 16.—A series of fires which broke out at one a.m. this morning swept unchecked across the southern half of this city, fanned by a strong wind. The conflagration was not under control until late in the afternoon, when, according to official figures, 5,268 buildings had been destroyed and 30,000 persons rendered homeless. During the first four hours the flames consumed more than 1,300 houses.

THE VENICE OF THE EAST.

Osaka, the "Venice of the East," has a population of about a million and is rated one of the most important manufacturing and commercial cities of Japan. It is located on the Island of Hondo, on the two banks of the River Vodo, and is visited by travellers for its Buddhist temple and its picturesque canals, spanned by 1,300 stone and bamboo bridges.

THE SCENE OF MANY FIRES.

It has been the scene of frequent conflagrations, mainly because its buildings are mostly flimsy bamboo or wooden structures, built close to each other and very inflammable.

The annual meeting of the Little Lake Cemetery Company took place on Monday afternoon, Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., in the chair. The following gentlemen were re-elected directors: W. H. Moore, Charles Stapleton, B. Shortly, W. G. Morrow, J. J. Landy, Dr. Geo. Burnham, E. H. D. Hall, T. A. S. Hay, Arthur Stevenson and E. H. D. Hall.

The managing committee fot last year were also continued in office, namely, Messrs. T. A. S. Hay, B. Shortly, W. G. Morrow, and W. H. Moore.

On motion of Mr. B. Shortly, seconded by Mr. T. A. S. Hay, Mr. Frank Wise was given an increase of $200 per year in his salary, which brings it up to $1000.

Superintendent's Report.

Mr. Frank Wise, the superintendent presented his annual report, which was as follows:

Although the year has been a very busy one at the cemetery, very little new work has been undertaken within the cemetery grounds.

The fences and hedges ordered removed have all been taken away, excepting three cedar hedges, which will be removed early next spring.

A new stable and shed has been erected on the corner of Ware and Haggart streets, costing about $1,500.00. This will allow the removal of the old sheds inside the grounds, which for a number of years have been an eyesore to the entrance of proceeded with as quickly as possible.

Now that the old buildings are being removed from near the entrance gates I would like to see an attempt made at replacing them with a good substantial stone and iron structure, as the old gates and fence are gone beyond repair.

Your greenhouses were able to supply the demand for plants and flowers, of which there were over 20,000 disposed of. These were distributed between 4468 urns and 226 beds and borders. This is over and above the vases and beds supplied by the several florists of the city.

About one half the lots whereon the old receiving vault stood has been disposed of, and I expect in a short time they will be all sold, as this is a very desirable location.

The Financial Statement.

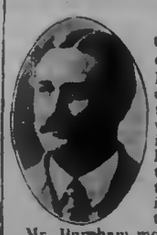
Mr. F. A. Peck, M.P.P., secretary-treasurer, presented the financial statement for the year, the totals of which are as follows:

Receipts	$7,065.30
Expenditure	6,906.81

TO ABOLISH $200 DEPOSIT

Speech of Mr. J. H. Burnham in Commons

Proposal to Make it Easy For Any Man to Enter as a Candidate for the Dominion Parliament.



From Hansard we take the speech of our member, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., delivered in connection with the Bill which he recently introduced in the House of Commons to do away with the deposit of $200 in Dominion elections.

Mr. Burnham moved second reading of Bill (No. 8) to amend the Dominion Elections Act. He said: The object of this Bill is to do away with the deposit in Dominion elections. In Ontario that deposit has been done away within provincial elections, and I desire to bring our Dominion Elections law in this respect in conformity with that in Ontario at least. Of course it would be out of the question to urge that the deposit should be done away with in Dominion elections in one province and not in the others, and therefore, I propose to repeal the provision requiring a deposit as regards the Dominion generally. While the deposit of $200 may seem a very small one, there are very large objections to it. From one end of the country to the other, the opinion of the labor people is against it, and they are a very prominent and forcible portion of the electorate. Since the request comes from these people, it ought to be taken seriously; and since we have adopted the provincial franchise, it is but consistent that we should follow the provincial practice as much as possible in our elections. So far as I know, the only argument against the abolition of the deposit is one of a technical or legal, character. It is the argument that by doing away with this deposit, we shall encourage the candidature of irresponsible parties. Well, that has not been found to be the result in the province of Ontario, in the provincial election, and these are of minor importance to the Dominion elections. Therefore, you may reasonably conclude that such a contingency would be less likely in the Dominion elections. In any event, since the doing away with the deposit in the province of Ontario has not been found to facilitate the entry of irresponsible parties into provincial contests, I do not see why that argument should have any weight in Dominion matters.

At the suggestion of the Premier, the bill was allowed to stand.

SUN LIFE'S BIG YEAR.

Income in 1911 Was $10,557,335, an Increase of $981,881.

Substantial increases in the amount of business done, in income, assets and surplus are shown in a report just completed of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada for the year 1911. Figures were given recently of the amount of new assurance written during the year. A later statement shows the total amount of assurance in force at the end of he year to have been $164,572,073, an increase of $21,022,797 over the amount in force in 1910. The income of the company has grown to $10,557,336, an increase of $981,881, or about 12.5 per cent., while the excess of income over expenditure was $5,180,452 in 1911. Assets have been increased by $5,736,095 and now amount to $43,900,885, while the surplus of the company stands at $4,717,073, or over 19 per cent. higher than a year ago. Profits paid to policy-holders during the year amounted to nearly half a million dollars. Some of the principal figures from the company's report of the year's operations are:

	1911.	Increase over 1910
Assurance issued and paid for	$38,436,701.19	$2,924,441.70
Business in force	164,572,073.32	21,022,797.32
Assets	43,900,885.90	5,736,095.64
Income	10,557,336.32	981,881.68
Surplus	4,717,073.73	764,696.19
Profits paid policy-holders	569,126.81
Excess of income over expenditure	5,180,452.99

NICHOLLS' HOSPITAL MEETING.

Mr. Richard Hall Again Elected as Chairman of the Trust.

At the annual meeting of the Nicholls' Hospital Trust, Mr. Richard Hall was again elected chairman and Mr. W. H. Hill Hon. Secretary.

Committees were appointed as follows:

Supervisors—Messrs. Madill, Peck, McBain.

Finance—Messrs. Fair, McClelland, and Greer.

Property—Messrs. Aldridge, McCulloch and Keys.

Visiting committees were appointed as was also a special building committee to consider certain additions and improvements to the hospital.

The statement of receipts and expenditure foc the year ending Dec. 31, 1911, was read and adopted. The expenditures were $6,215.64.

The many friends in Peterborough of Mrs. H. D. Robertson (formerly Miss Vera Hunter) will be relieved and delighted to hear that she with her husband and family have arrived safely at Shanghai, from the interior of China.

MADE A JOURNAL

A Merry "Ad." That Set All Australia Laughing at a Premier and Made a Mission Ridiculous.

Although the affair happened over thirty years ago, Australia still chuckles when the name of Henderson Africanus is mentioned; for it calls to mind the biggest joke ever perpetrated 'down under" — a joke which made all Australia laugh, covered a Premier with ridicule, and firmly established the reputation of the 'Melbourne Punch.'

The joke arose through Premier Berry, of Victoria, being defeated by the Upper House in his effort to change its constitution. He thereupon conceived the idea of sending an embassy to England to persuade the Imperial Government towards his scheme of reforms. The 'Melbourne Punch,' however, announced that, as there was to be an embassy, both sides should be represented, and promptly proceeded to appoint a "mock embassy" on its own account.

As Proud as a Peacock.

After due deliberation (says the 'Newspaper Owner'), the rival "ambassador" was chosen in Henderson Africanus, a full-blooded West Indian negro, who could talk politics by the league.

He was hired at $1.50 a day, and dressed in the worst-fitting and blackest suit that could be obtained in Melborune. On his head was a fantastical top-hat half a yard high. In his pocket was a huge brass watch, and across his aldermanic stomach swung a brass chain large enough to tether a steam-engine. Dressed in this absurd raiment, and as proud as a peacock, Henderson paraded Melbourne, a delighted crowd following him wherever he went. The whole thing was a most extravagant travesty. Of course the nigger took himself seriously as the chief figure in the political pantomime.

A Splendid Circulation-Raiser.

"That Mr. Berry, sah, he have his private secretary, sah. Henderson Africanus want a private secretary, sah," was his request to 'Punch's' delighted management, and a secretary he was given. The biggest, dirtiest, ugliest nigger in Melbourne was hired and dutifully he followed at the "ambassador's" heels as he perambulated the streets. To all and sundry Africanus introduced him gravely, "My secretary, sah."

Everybody in the country was talking about Africanus, while the circulation of the 'Melbourne Punch' went up by leaps and bounds. As the Premier's departure drew near, the paper further elaborated the joke. Public meetings were held to support the black "ambassador." A banquet was given him, to which sixty prominent citizens came and Henderson was brought to the hotel wagon of the magnificence and the importance of his mission. Brass bands played "See the Conquering Hero Comes," and the populace cheered mightily as he drove up to the feast.

Kicked Out.

The joke assumed such proportions that the Premier became quite alarmed, and he and many of his supporters really believed that their opponents intended to keep up the joke in London, and thus cover the whole mission with ridicule. A quiet hint, therefore, was given to the shipping company that, if Henderson was given a passage on the vessel in which the Premier and his friends intended to embark, they would not travel.

Africanus was sent to the shipping office to demand passages for himself and his secretary. He was promptly kicked out. This provoked an outburst of simulated fury. Indignation meetings were held to protest against the outrage put upon a Victorian citizen at the instance of the provoked Ministry, and signatures were subscribed to a petition to the Colonial Secretary at home.

But just at this psychological moment the 'Melbourne Punch' stopped the joke, which had now provided enough good copy and many, many square yards of striking, biting illustrations. The Premier went on his futile mission, and Henderson Africanus took up the humble but honest job of newsvendor. He had done the 'Melbourne Punch' a good service and established it firmly as a public favourite, which on its merits it thoroughly well deserves.

A WITTY BISHOP

Perhaps one of the best definitions of the functions of the House of Lords was that given by Bishop Wilberforce when called upon at a dinner of a City Company, London, of which he was an honorary member, to respond to the toast of "The Lords and Commons." "Gentlemen," said he, "I can only compare our two great legislative Chambers to a clock, of which the House of Commons is the mainspring and the House of Lords the pendulum — a pendulum which wags, wags, wags, the while it keeps the mainspring in order, and prevents the clock from running down."

The story is also told of the manner in which the bishop silenced some young men who endeavoured to drag him into a controversy at a time when a series of tracts, entitled, "The Road to Heaven," was creating a considerable sensation. The bishop however, proved too much for them, merely saying: "The best and only road to Heaven I know is to turn to the right and go straight on."

Canale Scotland

A gentleman called at a house in the North of Scotland recently, where there was a family of six sons, in addition to the father and mother.

Noticing that there were only two chairs in the kitchen — presumably for the use of the parents — the visitor asked if the furniture was being saved till the family grew up.

"No, sir," replied the mother, "we're just keepin' the chairs oot o' sicht, sae that the laddies winna wear dune their breeks ower sune!"

BEST LIGHTWEIGHT IN THE SOUTH

Near Champion as Result of Friends' "Joshing".

Many persons, including Ray Bronson, Grover Hayes and Abe Attell, boxers, claim credit for bringing out Joe Mandot, the New Orleans lightweight, who looms up as a dangerous opponent to Champion Wolgast. Mandot says Johnny Lynch, of Boston, is responsible for him.

Two and a half years ago, Mandot, pushing a delivery wagon about New Orleans for his father's bakery, was induced to enter an amateur tournament. He did not know who his first opponent would be until the night of the fight. Imagine his surprise to find himself matched against a boy larger than himself, who had been the neighborhood bully for years. Mandot's heart almost failed, and although he knocked out his opponent, he took a hard lacing.

Joe had enough "nerve" left, and there, but friends "kidded" him into another match. The little southerner didn't know anything about the game, but among the spectators was Johnny Lynch, training for a fight with Freddy Andrews, of Milwaukee. Lynch heard Mandot's friends making fun of him and asked the boy to train with him.

Joe learned rapidly and Lynch secured a preliminary engagement for him and he won handily.

After this Mandot learned from every top-notcher who landed in New Orleans. He made friends for him among the boxers and they helped him along.

Mandot's rise has been little short of phenomenal. Since he joined with Blackey Reggio, a Memphis Sportsman, he has defeated all comers.

Had it not been for the "kidding" of his friends, Mandot would not be a near champion. His determination to silence the "joshing" and his natural ability made him a star, although he never fails to credit Lynch as the man who really gave him the first encouragement.

PEDESTRIANISM

A good performance was accomplished by C. Harris when beating Pat White for the 10 miles Irish professional running championship recently. The event was decided at Dublin, and as rain fell in torrents during the race, the track was very heavy. In spite of this handicap Harris covered the journey in 53 mins. 58 secs., winning by 100 yards. A very smart bit of running on the part of the ex-amateur.

The times accomplished in the series of sprint races between A. B. Postle and J. Donaldson, at Melbourne, make interesting reading. The course was grass, but a good turf track is quite as fast as cinders. Postle's 7 4-5 secs. for 80 yards, and Donaldson's 8 3-5 secs. for 100 yards, are both splendid, but Donaldson's 10 4-5 secs. for 100 yards does not strike one as remarkable. On the 100 yards' line Donaldson ought to have shown 10 1-2 secs. at least, though possibly Postle failed to push him. There can be little doubt that the winner is a wonderful sprinter, and the writer can testify from personal experience that Donaldson is very modest about his great ability.

QUEBEC HOCKEY CLUB

The Quebec Hockey Club have completed arrangements with the Quebec Skating Club, and it has been decided to build a new gallery at the far end of the rink. This will give increased accommodation. The architects are very busy upon the preparation, and the work will be rushed through for the opening match. Three new exits will be installed.

The line-up of the Quebec team is expected to be one of the strongest it has had for a long time. Outside clubs are still dickering for some of last year's players, but nothing definite has yet been done.

The locals expected to get to work on the ice, but owing to the mild spell the ice was not in condition.

An old country woman and her daughter went into a shop in town to buy a bonnet. When she had purchased the bonnet the milliner, turning to the woman, said:—"What about your daughter? (meaning, of course, a hat for the woman herself). The alternative retorted—"I suppose I'll have to get one for yourself!"

INTENTIONS OF GREAT BRITAIN

Two Great Nations Must Not Be Embroiled by Actions of Any Individual, Says British Foreign Secretary.

(Publishers Press News Service)

London. — Referring to the Persian question during a discussion of foreign affairs in the House of Commons, the foreign secretary, Sir Edward Grey, said that the Anglo-Russian agreement was not intended to impair the independence and integrity of Persia. A declaration to that effect had been made to the Persian Government, but, he added, Great Britain was not undertaking any obligation to protect the integrity of Persia.

The Russian Government, continued the Foreign Secretary, had demanded

BY UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD.

TREASURER SHUSTER

that Mr. Shuster should be withdrawn. The British Government had said that it did not object to that demand, Mr. Shuster's intentions in appointing British officials in Northern Persia were good, but the spirit and intention of the Anglo-Russian agreement could not be permitted to be upset, and two great nations embroiled by the action of any individual no matter how good the intentions were.

After what had happened he agreed with Russia's demand that the consent of the British and Russian legations should be obtained for the appointment of foreign advisers to Persia.

In conclusion, Sir Edward said that as Persia was unable to pay any indemnity he hoped Russia would be induced not to press that demand.

Philip Edward Morrell, Liberal, said that a poorer excuse for taking away the independence of Persia than that advanced in the case of Mr. Shuster had never been put forward in the House of Commons. The exact crime committed by Shuster, said Mr. Morrell, was that he did not call at the Russian legation as often as he ought to.

A Frenzied Population

The Teheran correspondent of the Times says that a grave situation has arisen at Shiraz, capital of the province of Fars. The chief mollah, Mirza Ibrahim, has stirred popular fanaticism against the British. He has declared that the imperial bank notes are unclean and as a result they are being presented at the bank wholesale for payment, while the shopkeepers refuse to sell even the smallest article to the Indian troops. The leaders of the religious hordes are urgent in their resistance to Russia and they are preaching a holy war. The Cabinet refuses to resign and it is difficult to see how Russia can obtain other than a poor victory against the frenzied population in the present state of affairs.

Cause of Rheumatism

Many physicians believe that rheumatism is the result of over-feeding. Followed by putrefactive changes in the foodstuffs in the alimentary canal, that the action of certain bacteria produces specific toxic (poison) substances which, when introduced into the blood, cause a deviation from the normal oxidation process, thus causing the condition that is designated rheumatic. In the majority of instances it is probably due to eating too much of the vegetable class of foods; in other cases it is the result of eating too much meat.

Rump Steak Boiled

If properly cooked boiled round steak will be rare, tender and juicy. Plunge the meat into sufficient boiling water to cover, boil rapidly for fifteen minutes, then push the kettle over a slow fire where it will simmer at one hundred and eighty degrees Fahrenheit for fifteen minutes to each pound of beef. Serve the beef with cream horseradish sauce, boiled turnips or cabbage and potatoes.

PROFESSIONAL ETIQUETTE

Some Barristers' Curious Customs and Traditions Belonging to the Old Country.

From the day when he eats his first student's dinner to the day when he pockets his last professional fee, the man of wig and gown in England has to observe customs and to obey traditions such as the members of no other learned profession have any knowledge of and which are not even known in Canada amongst the lawyers.

The Temple, where for the most part the would-be Lord Chancellor has his legal nursery, is an effete nest of old-world observances, linking it with the far-away time when it was the home of Crusading Knights, who feasted, six and more centuries ago, on the very spot on which the young Templar of our day eats the dinners that go some way towards qualifying him for his wig.

Brothers All!

The very grace that heralds his meal and the grace that concludes it are the same, in the Inner Temple, that the Knights of the Cross listened to when the Plantagenet Kings were wearing their crowns. Like their martial predecessors, the Benchers file into the Middle Temple Hall preceded by the mace, the substitute for the old-time battle-axe. Their entry is heralded by a loud blow of the mace on the floor, as was that of the senior Knights Templar of old by a similar blow with the butt-end of a lance; and the grace is preceded by three blows with a wooden mallet, the ancient knightly form of invoking the Trinity.

Barristers and students mingle and feast together at the same tables, without any regard to seniority — a survival of the ancient Templar practice of the essential principle of brotherhood. If one of them is dissatisfied with his food, he may send a sample of it to the Treasurer for his verdict, just as the most junior Templar in King John's time would submit any food of which he disapproved to the Senior Knight; and the fragments of the modern Grand Day banquet are given to the servants of the Inn just as the surplus food was always given by the Knights of old to the poor.

The Knights Templar were summoned to the hall of feasting by the blowing of a horn and to-day the Middle Templar is similarly called to the table by blasts of the very horn which summoned his predecessors in Elizabethan days. These, and the ceremonial of passing the cup round at bowing, the introduction of the loving-cup and many another custom, all serve to link the Templar of to-day with his martial "forefathers" of long-dead centuries.

Briefs and Fees.

And those are but a few of the many quaint customs and regulations which the man of wig and gown must observe, if he does not wish to get himself into trouble with the authorities. When he is qualified to accept briefs and to play the part of a counsel "learned in the law," he must walk very warily to avoid the countless pitfalls of etiquette that mark his path to the Woolsack.

However an empty purse may tempt him, he must not accept a professional fee that falls short of the irreducible guinea, with a half-crown added for his clerk, whether he has one or not. Nor must he accept less than the fee, however big it is, that is marked on his brief for all to see.

However much he may yearn for clients, he cannot even see one unless through the introduction of a solicitor; and the solicitor must be present at the interview. Between him and the litigant whose cause he is to plead there is a gulf which only a solicitor can bridge. And when the solicitor appears at his chambers, bearing the coveted brief, it must be handed, not to Mr. "Wig," but to his clerk, and it is the clerk, and not the master, who arranges the delicate matter of fees.

No Touting Allowed.

Some professional men may tout for clients; but not all the barrister. It will be an evil day for him when he starts brief-hunting, though he may be starving for lack of golden guineas. If he calls at a friendly solicitor's office for a gossip, or accepts an invitation to a dinner or a dance at his house, he is going perilously near the danger-line. If he is a wise man he will avoid the company of solicitors and pass them by, like the Levite, "on the other side."

On circuit the watchful eyes of Etiquette are always on him. Even for the sake of company, if he be a sociable man, he must not travel there by any class but the first; nor may he reach an Assize town earlier than the day before the Court opens.

However much his services are wanted on another circuit than his own he must turn a deaf ear, unless his brief comes to him marked with a special fee of at least fifty guineas, in addition to the fee he would receive on his own circuit. If he is unable to appear in any case for which he is retained, he must provide a substitute; for whose services, however, he may pay what he pleases. The fee he puts into his own pocket.

When his professional dress is regulated for him to the extent that he must not appear in court in any coat but one of sober black; nor must he show his face in court if he is carrying the blue bag which may be his familiar companion in the street or train. Unless he is entitled to carry a red bag (and this he may not buy — it must be given to him by some friendly senior), he must be content to make his appearance with his briefs and papers under his arm.

Piundaff—Here's a man mentioned in this paper who is 108 years old and can walk ten miles at a stretch.

Goodguff—Pooh! I can do that easy, and I'm not half as old as he is.—Brewster's Magazine.

PUBLIC GUARANTEE.

That most beautiful picture, entitled "Home Again," has brought such an enormous amount of new subscriptions to The Family Herald and Weekly Star, that the publishers are finding it impossible to keep up with the filling of orders, but in the columns of that paper this week we notice a positive guarantee from the Publishers that every subscriber to that great weekly for 1912 will receive a copy of the picture, "Home Again." Their guarantee is sufficient and subscribers need not feel anxious although the picture may be delayed for a few weeks. Those who have not yet subscribed to The Family Herald and Weekly Star should do so at once and make sure of having a copy of the picture "Home Again." We learn that the Publishers are contemplating something for next season that will make this picture even more valuable than at present. One dollar pays for a full year's subscription to the paper, and the picture.

A CARLIER MODEL.

A fur scarf that is wrapped around the body and then hangs gracefully over the arms is one of the latest freaks of French femininedom. This confection is as charming as it is unusual. The model from the French, a petite Carlier affair of seal skin trimmed with white fox. The color and fabric contrasts were carried out in the hat and muff.

The scarf was about three-quarters of a yard wide and long enough to enfold the figure twice. In this way it forms a complete wrap. It has a band of white fox on one side and is lined with salmon pink satin. The muff is perfectly flat and has the fox on either end, in this way differing from the scarf.

The tall crown of the hat of this three-piece fur set, is of seal skin. The narrow brim where it turns up is touched with the white fox and on top of the high crown saucily toss a bunch of Prince of Wales feathers. This is of salmon pink. This set could easily be copied in black velvet and swansdown. This combination would be pretty and inexpensive.

GOOD MANNERS

One may not require nowadays the ultra-politeness of our forefathers; it would appear almost stilted and unnatural. At the same time the modern maid and youth are apt to run in the opposite extreme. Lack of courtesy is rather a growing evil, though it is often only the result of ignorance, owing to the unawareness which led such a free and easy "set" as the importance of manners has been left uncultivated.

Casual Manners

The older generation frequently complains of the treatment of the courtesies, and the following examples are not uncommon:

Accepting an invitation and throwing it up at the last moment.

Agreeing to meet at a certain time and keeping the other person waiting.

Accepting hospitality and not troubling to repay by any appreciative and entertaining manner.

Failing to write a line of thanks after a week-end visit—old-fashioned perhaps, but a courtesy no hostess

Women's Ailments Caused by Neglect

ARE QUICKLY CURED AND BOSOM, SOUND HEALTH RESTORED BY DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS.

Women are on the whole more sickly than men. One reason is that their system is more complicated; another and more important reason is they put off measures of relief too long. At the beginning, constipation is the cause of nine-tenths of women's ailments. The blood becomes weakened and polluted—the nerves suffer, and a run-down condition takes root.

Because of their mildness of action as a system regulator, because of their undoubted power to remove constipation, irregularities, no medicine for women can compare with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The kidneys quickly respond to the remedial action of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and the result is as you would expect, pain in the back and side, shortness of breath, and bad color disappear—the functions of the body then operate naturally, congestion and pain are prevented and perfect health returns.

Thousands of happy women say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the greatest and best blood-purifier, the finest complexion renewer, the most certain regulating medicine known. All dealers in 25c boxes, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

THE ELECTION DEPOSIT.

There is a good deal to be said in favor of the bill introduced into the House of Commons by J. H. Burnham, M. P. for West Peterborough, which proposes to abolish the deposit of $200 now required by a candidate for the House of Commons, says the Ottawa Free Press. The deposit has disappeared from provincial election contests, and no great evil appears to have been done to the body politic. It may be true that the duties of a member of the House of Commons are more responsible than those belonging to a member of any of the Legislative Assemblies, but the difference is not so striking as to be worth $200.

On the other hand, there are so many anomalies in the present Dominion Elections act that it may be much better to undertake the revision of the act in a deliberate manner rather than by piecemeal instalments.

One reform which cannot be long delayed is that involved in the disparity of representation. Why, for instance, should the county of Soulanges, with a voting strength of 1,931 be given one member, whilst dozens of other constituencies, with five and six times that voting strength, are also given only one member? We are rapidly coming to the point where we will have to give some serious consideration to the question of proportional representation (which means real representation, according to voting value), and it is hoped that Hon. F. D. Monk, who was so earnest an advocate of the reform when in Opposition, will, now that he is in power, endeavor to impress the need for the reform upon his colleagues as earnestly as he did upon the Laurier Government.

Meanwhile, as there is little chance of any drastic amendment of the Dominion Elections act this session, Mr. Burnham's bill will probably go by the board; but it can be used as a source of education of the people, so that when the time is ripe for the reform, public opinion will be ripe for the change.

VERY DARK PROPHECY

French Soothsayer Predicts Awful Time in 1912.

London, Jan. 15.—Mme. de Thebes, most celebrated of Parisian soothsayers, is pessimistic as to 1912, and predicts:

War, which will wreck Europe and other continents as well.
Conspiracies.
Assassinations.
Total ruin of Paris.
Downfall of the German Emperor.
Riots.
Epidemics.
Evil destiny for England.
Fusillades and bloodsheds in Spain.
Tears and misery elsewhere.

Zadkiel's almanac and book of prophecy foreshadows worries for the Kaiser, Czar, and King of Spain. As far as Great Britain is concerned, the sixpenny prophet states that the spring will be marked by political tumult and a serious risk of foreign warfare, consequent upon the breaking of a treaty, binding upon Great Britain, by a foreign power. However, it will all end happily, because King George's horoscope is stronger and more fortunate than that of any other living monarch.

MY LADY'S COLUMN.

AN EFFECT OF BACK DRAPERY

Quite like the manner of a gown in one of Steven's pictures was one worn by a leader of the Paris modes; its skirt, a bit full, dragged a little, and there was an apron overskirt, heavily fringed, which was pulled in wrinkling folds to the back and disposed of in a large looped bow only a little below the belt line. Narrower fringe edged the fichu corsage and bordered the short, straight sleeves, which opened over little undersleeves of white muslin drawn below the elbow into a narrow, embroidered band. The fichu left a space in the back and front that was covered with an unlined muslin guimpe, its little round collar tied with a knot of cerise ribbon. Black feathers waved from her wide hat of cerise-colored velvet.

A Pretty Sash

A new serge dress for the winter very simple, to be worn with white collars and cuffs, has a black satin ribbon sash tied cleverly, and easy to copy. The ribbon is about six inches wide, and passes straight around the waist, being only tacked in place. Where it meets at the back it is tied in a regular knot the width of the ribbon being enough to make it one of good size. Then below this are tied two loops, and these droop gracefully on either side, the big knot forming the middle. The whole is one of those simple touches by which the French accomplish a good effect.

A MUCH TRIMMED FUR COAT WITH ADAPTABLE IDEAS

Old clothes may easily be refurbished this season. Many different fabrics may be used in one garment. Coats are much trimmed. A bit of velvet and bands of broad tinan braid give a decided air to the simplest coat.

A handsome caracul jacket serves as an example. A band of velvet is set a couple of inches above the bottom, while the flat deep collar and very deep cuffs of velvet are trimmed with tinan braid. The collar extends into a point and through the broad band around the coat and falls far down upon the dress skirt.

A muff and hat of caracul add to the effect.

The Empress Eugenie

The Empress Eugenie spends most of her time in England.

'I am not getting younger,' she says, 'and Farnham is now my home.'

There is a series of rooms in the house at Farnham devoted to mementoes of Napoleon IV. as the Emperialists still like to call the Prince Imperial, who was killed during the Zulu War. In a locked cabinet are the remains of the Prince's uniform, which his mother brought back from Africa when she made the journey to see the spot where he was slain. But most interesting of all is the sword with which he defended himself, the same that Napoleon I. wore at Arcola, at Austerlitz and at Waterloo.

It was not a sword of state, but a plain fighting sword in a simple sheath. When King Cetewayo was conquered this sword, which had terrified Europe, was found among the spoils in his kraal.

The best product of the prairie is not wheat but men, and the quarter section that produces a thinking man, full fledged in all his powers, may well be held to have performed its mission.

Parson (to youngster indulging in Sunday morning fishing): "I am surprised to find you fishing here, my boy!"

Boy: "Wye? D'ye know any place where they bite better, guv-nor?"

CANADIAN BALL LEAGUE

McCaffery Declares Against a Club for Toronto.

There will not be a Canadian League Club in Toronto next season as its promoters had hoped for. The proposition was turned down by President McCaffery in no uncertain manner when he met Manager Shaughnessy of Ottawa on Saturday. Mr. McCaffery gave the Ottawa man three reasons why the scheme would not work, as follows:

First—The Eastern League would oppose it.

Second—It would be a death blow to the city amateur clubs.

Third—A club that would draw in Toronto would be too strong for the other cities in the league, with the result that it would have a tempestuous career.

"PAT" WELLS HOME AGAIN

Matt Wells, the English lightweight champion, is back in London and tells of the good time he had in the United States. He says: "I have had the time of my life, and put in the pleasantest and most profitable six months I ever dreamed of. Nothing was too good for me. They treated me like a prince, and if I am only half as well received in my native land, I will be a happy lad." This will please the Americans, and coming on top of what the English polo players and H. H. Hilton say, demonstrate that visitors to the United States may count on a good reception.

Wells has issued a challenge to the world, and is prepared to box anyone at the lightweight limit, for £500 aside. His rise to fame since leaving the amateur ranks has been rapid and he may yet go further. Naturally the Englishman feels sorry he did not get a chance of meeting Wolgast or McFarland, when in America, but as he hopes to pay another visit, he may yet attain his wish.

Complexions Flaked Off At Home

(From Pilgrim Magazine.)

The girl with the poor complexion complains, "I have to touch up my cheeks. I am sallow and a sight, and only my make-up saves me."

Now, as a matter of fact, more women spoil their good looks than improve them with cosmetics. The practice certainly is unnecessary, now that the virtues of ordinary mercolized wax as a beautifier have become known. It has been found that the mercolide in the wax has wonderful absorbent powers. It causes the faded or discolored scarf skin to flake off in minute, almost imperceptible particles, so gently, gradually as to cause no inconvenience at all. In this way the old complexion is actually removed—likewise all fine lines, pimples, blotches, moth patches and other surface defects. A new complexion appears—a clear, smooth, youthful, healthy-hued skin such as no paint, powder or lotion can produce. Mercolized wax, to be had at any drug store, is applied like cold cream.

JUDGE UPHOLDS BOXING

Circuit Judge D. E. Blair recently upheld boxing exhibitions in Joplin, his decision affecting every athletic club in Missouri. A test case was brought recently to determine the legality of local exhibitions. Young Jack Johnson, of Memphis, and Jeff Clarke, of Philadelphia, were arrested at the end of a 15 round bout before the Southwest A. C. of Joplin. Pending the decision of Judge Blair, permitting the bouts, many Missouri clubs cancelled exhibitions.

SULLIVAN COMING BACK.

Mike (Twin) Sullivan, former champion welterweight, who has been out of the class, and who has been giving a touch of the game to a [illegible] Cambridge, Mass., will [illegible] cows and chickens and try [illegible] the arena again. Mike is to meet Paddy Lavin at Buffalo, and if he wins he will go after the [illegible] in the 150-pound division and the middleweight class. If Mike is right he is hard to beat.

AFTER THE BANTAMWEIGHT

Al Delmont, who has fought Jimmy Walsh about as often as Jim Barry has mixed with Sam Langford, wants to get the bantamweight belt and has challenged Johnny Coulon at 116 pounds. Albert is a great little fighter, but he will not be able to make 116 pounds ringside and Johnny Coulon absolutely refuses to make a lower weight for any star.

McGOORTY IN ENGLAND

Eddie McGoorty, Wisconsin middleweight, is in England again this winter, as his manager, Patsy Callahan, has received an invitation to box Jim Sullivan at the National Sporting club.

Some roosters do almost as much crowing as some men.

To Remove Paint Spots

To remove paint from clothing, mix equal parts of turpentine and ammonia in a saucer and apply the solution to the paint with a piece of cloth of the same color as the garment. Rub gently until the paint is removed. Then sponge with warm water and a little white soap.

[illegible] of their three sets, matches of [illegible] points up at Holborn Hall (London). All three are to be played out, even should one man win the first two, and so make sure of the $2500 aside in stakes. As Stevenson has agreed to play with borrowed balls, it is difficult to see where his chance comes in, unless he has quietly [illegible] the secret which made Gray so famous. There is also very much to the fore with a challenge to Stevenson, and offers to play the champion 16,000 up level, with ivory balls for $500 aside, the winner to take all the gate. There is a genuine ring about the latter clause, and the conditions are the same as will govern the Reece vs. Inman match. The Oldham man is certainly in rare form and in his heat of the big London tournament with Diggle lately he scored 7,500 points, whilst Diggle made 5,935.

A Great Climb

A wonderful feat of rock-climbing in the Grindenwald, Switzerland, has been accomplished by Mr. Percy H. Thorp. He succeeded in climbing up the face of the Eiger to the Eigerwadi station of the Jungfrau Railway (a tunnel railway), and clambered in through the aperature by which travellers admire the view.

This aperature is situated at a great height above the valley, and the rock wall reaching up to it is almost as deep and smooth as the side of a house. The feat has never been accomplished before.

I Am Willing To Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10,000 - Worth of Medicine

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this medicine, and anyone suffering from these diseases can get a box of it absolutely free. All that is necessary is to send me your address.

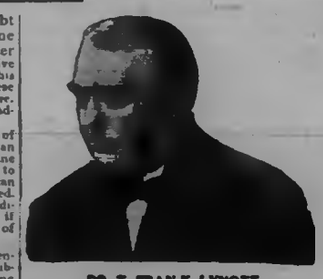
I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and pay me if cured. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the Uric Acid sufferers of the world, so I can show them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, nor would I accept it now or later if you sent it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying calls to urinate. But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to listen to anyone thereafter. Happily, I am in a position now to demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to spend any money to find out; I don't ask them to believe me, nor even to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my own cost. That is surely fair.

To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars, which will be used to compound my medicine. Much of it is ready now to be sent out, all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there be thousands of them. And anyone who needs it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have a disease for which this medicine is intended, I ask you to send me some of your leading symptoms. If you have any of the symptoms in the list printed here you need my medicine and if you will write me I will gladly send you a box of it free with full directions for your use. Look the symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, then write me about as follows: "Dear Dr., I notice symptoms number"—here put down the numbers, give your age, full address, and send it to me. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 857 Franklin Building, Toronto, Can.

The ten thousand dollars I am spending for the compounding of my medicine is only a part of the money I am devoting to this cause, for the package of medicine I send you will be fully prepaid at my expense. From any standpoint you view it, YOU incur no expense or obligation. Just tell others who you know are suffering who sent you the medicine that cured you.

I am promising to give away ten thousand dollars' worth of medicine, and I will do that. I am promising to send any sufferer who writes me a box of this medicine and full directions free of charge, and I will do that.



DR. T. FRANK LYNOTT
who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

I can say further that this medicine has been vouched for according to law as complying in every detail with all requirements. It will stop rheumatism, it will stop pain and backache, it will stop too frequent desire to urinate; it will heal, soothe and strengthen. You will be better in every way for having taken it. There is not an ingredient that can injure; not one but will benefit. All that I ask is that you use it yourself so that you may be personally convinced.

Owing to the large number of requests I have had ten thousand more copies of my medical book printed. This book is new and up to date and contains complete descriptions, symptoms, causes, effects and cures of kidney, bladder and rheumatic diseases. All who write for the free medicine will be sent a copy of this grand illustrated medical book—the largest ever written on these diseases for free and general distribution.

If you need medicine such as I have, if you are anxious to be cured and don't want to spend any money LOOKING for cures, write me. Read the symptoms over and let me hear from you today.

These Are the Symptoms:

1—Pain in the back.
2—Too frequent desire to urinate.
3—Burning or obstruction of urine.
4—Pain or soreness in the bladder.
5—Prostatic trouble.
6—Gas or pain in the stomach.
7—General debility, weakness, dizziness
8—Pain or soreness under right rib.
9—Swelling in any part of the body.
10—Constipation or liver trouble.
11—Pain, fulness or pain under the heart.
12—Pain in the hip joint.
13—Pain in the neck or head.
14—Pain or soreness in the kidneys.
15—Pain or swelling of the joints.
16—Pain or swelling of the ankles.
17—Pain and soreness in nerves.
18—Acute or chronic rheumatism.

CHANDOS.

Inaugural Meeting of the Council Routine Business Transacted.

The municipal elections in the township of Chandos were somewhat of an exciting nature. It was expected by many of the ratepayers, that Mr. Campbell would have been elected reeve by acclamation, but his opponents introduced irrelevant matters into the contest, and, as a result, it was a three-cornered contest.

The contest for councillors was also fought with considerable earnest ness and the ratepayers are satisfied that a good council has been elected. Mr. Campbell, the Reeve, is very highly esteemed, and is worthy of the position. Mr. Post is a new man 23 years of age, and should prove a valuable acquisition to the Council.

The personnel of the Council is as follows: For Reeve, Mr. D. S. Campbell; Councillors, Messrs. E. J. Bullied, Joseph Whitmore, Michael mobbins and Warren Post.

The first meeting of the new Council was held on Monday last. Mr. L. Bullied was appointed Clerk in place of Mr. Andrews.

After the routine business had been disposed of the Council adjourned.

"It is a pleasure to tell you that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best cough medicine I have ever used," writes Mrs. Hugh Campbell, of Lavonia, Ga. "I have used it with all my children and the results have been highly satisfactory." For sale by all dealers.

BUILDERS' PROFITS with Bankers' Security

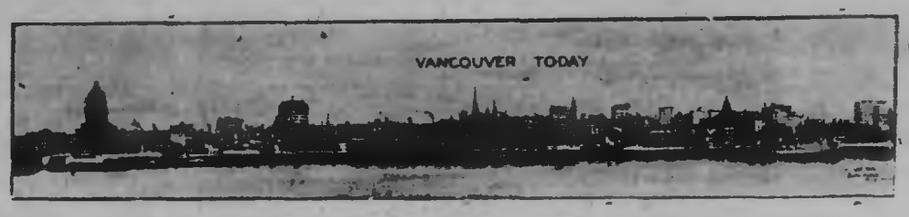
100,000 SHARES AT $1.00

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has been organized recently with an authorized capital of $500,000, to do a general building, real estate, and insurance business, and is actively engaged in Vancouver and Victoria—two most promising fields. The profits from building houses for cash and selling on instalments is well known, and will be one of the principal channels from which profits will be derived. BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its own building department and architect, and does its own construction. In addition to building houses, BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its real estate department, where it carries on a general real estate business, discounting agreements of Sale, subdividing and transacting a general insurance business.

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS LIMITED, is a new concern, having been in business less than two months in Vancouver, but is becoming well known as the Company without any promotion shares and with a strong board of directors, made up of well known Vancouver and Victoria business men.

Shareholders may conservatively look for a 10 per cent dividend the first year, increasing thereafter and a steady advance in the value of their shares caused by the substantial reserve it will always be the policy of the directors to build up.

Companies run on similar lines, notably the Los Angeles Investment Company' and "Home Builders," both of Los Angeles, have proved phenominally successful, the former, which has been in business some sixteen years, having accumulated assets of over $6,000,000, and paying 28 per cent. dividends: and the latter, which started business three years ago, with only $1,250 capital, has assets to-day of over $1,089,000, a surplus of over $308,000, is paying 17 per cent. dividends, and its $1.00 shares are selling at $2.30.



FIRST ISSUE OF SHARES

100,000 Thousand Shares are offered at $1.00 per share, 44,500 of which have been subscribed. These shares may be purchased for cash or on the instalment plan. $10.00 cash and $5.00 per month handles 100 shares Mail your subscription To-day.

"Silver Greyhounds."

Advertisement by Water.

An ingenious machine has just been put on the Paris market. According to details given in "La Publicité" the machine prints an announcement on the ground in water, which it sprays upon the soil in a fine shower. The letters or signs will last from twenty to thirty minutes, until the evaporation of the water is complete, and as the spray of water also serves the welcome purpose of laying the dust, the invention will doubtless be accorded a hearty welcome than the majority of advertising devices of this nature receive.

The men were matched for 20 rounds and for 19 they fought like wildcats. Tim more than held his own for 15 rounds, but in the sixteenth Johnny began to get home some terrific short arm jabs on the jaw and to keep the game staff-legged boy wobbling, but could not make him back up on them. It looked like a draw in the nineteenth, but toward the end Johnny dazed Tim with a hard one to the jaw.

As they came up for the twentieth Thompson landed a hard right swing on Land's jaw, putting him down for the count. As he came to, Tim asked for Covell and said: "Well, I kept my word, didn't I?"

Land demanded a return with Thompson and got it about a month later. He lasted but two rounds. I believe Thompson's first victory worried Land and he lost confidence. Thompson afterwards told me that he never had a tougher fight in his life.

The "Father of Southwark."

Thousands of poor people in the South of London will regret that, owing to advancing age, Canon Horsley has resigned to leave his busy parish of St. Peter's, Walworth, for a quiet living in the South of England. For years he has worked zealously on behalf of the people of the slums, and there is scarcely a branch of parish or [illegible] work in London with which Canon Horsley has not been connected. To the people of Southwark he has been in every sense a "father of the flock," and it is stated that he once refused a colonial bishopric that he might stay at home and work in the slums.

The canon is a man with a fund of anecdote, and describing the odd dress of English bishops some time ago, he told a story of the Bishop of Bath and Wells, who had been visiting Scarborough. On the way to the train he he lost his reckoning, and stopped a boy. "I say, my lad, how far it is to the station?" "About a mile ahead," said the boy, who had never seen a bishop before. Then, staring at the bishop's knee-breeches and silk stockings, he added, "Hallos, guv'nor, wasn't you somebody stripped your bike?"

DRUNKARDS PATRON

When Christians Decided to Merge Bacchus into St. Martin the Reputation of Former Was Handed On To Him.

What has come to be known as St. Martin Summer consists of a few lovely days about the second week of November. We hear a great deal about St. Luke's Summer, but St. Martin's Summer and his name-day, November 11th, suffer neglect — possibly because the saint was French and not English.

Perhaps, too, the knowledge that he is the patron saint of drunkards has not added to his reputation. That office came to him by accident. The reason how this doubtful honour was thrust upon him after his death was rather curious. The Vinalia, or Feast of Bacchus, was always celebrated on November 11th. Later, when the Christians decided to merge Bacchus into St. Martin, the reputation of the former was unfortunately handed on to the saint, although quite unmerited by him.

Before his conversion he was a military tribune, stationed at Amiens. When one day, so the story goes, in midwinter, at the city gate of Amiens a miserable beggar appealed to him for help, the soldier drew his sword and, dividing his cloak, gave half of it to the wretched beggar. At night, so it is said, Christ in person appeared to the astonished soldier, clad in the very cloak he had divided with the beggar a few hours before.

Another legend is that the saint, having been annoyed by the behaviour of one of the geese in his poultry-yard, ordered it to be slain and served up for dinner. He died immediately after partaking of it, and the anniversary has ever since been observed in France by the eating of geese on that day, November 11th. And even now, when the sunny days of St. Martin's Summer come round, there are but few French people who do not give a passing thought to that kindly saint who divided his cloak so that a poor beggar might be protected from the cold.

The Town-Troubler.

A certain battalion — the Terrors — possessed but a very small band. The commanding officer's feet — he was a burly farmer — were — well, very large. One day the battalion was to march out, but the music was not forthcoming.

"Where on earth is the band?" queried the adjutant.

For some time there was no reply, but when the question was repeated a gruff voice was heard from the rear rank:—

"I do believe, sir, the colonel trod on it by accident."

THEY ONLY LOOKED ON.

Johnny hasn't been to school long, but he already holds some peculiar views regarding the administration of his particular class.

The other day he came home with a singularly morose look on his usually smiling face.

"Why, Johnny," said his mother, "what's the matter?"

Johnny snorted.

"I ain't going to that old school no more," he fiercely announced.

"Why, Johnny," said his mother, reproachfully, "you mustn't talk like that. What's wrong with the school?"

"I ain't goin' there no more," Johnny replied; "an' it's because all th' boys in my room is bloomin' old cowards!"

"Why, Johnny, Johnny!"

"Yes, they are. There was a boy whisperin' this mornin', an' teacher saw him an' bumped his head on th' desk ever an' ever so many times. An' those big cowards sat there an' didn't say give it up nor nothin'. They let that old teacher bang th' head off th' poor little boy, an' they just sat there an' seen her do it!"

"And what did you do, Johnny?"

"I didn't do nothin' — I was the boy!"

A JUDGE'S BAD BLUNDER

Blindness of Late Lord Russell Sometimes, Led Him Quite Unexpectedly to Get a Roland for His Oliver.

The bluntness and impetuosity of Lord Russell of Killowen who died when Lord Chief Justice of England, often caused him to do and say things for which he was afterwards genuinely sorry, and sometimes led him to get, quite unexpectedly, a Roland for his Oliver. This happened on one occasion in Manchester. He and a junior started for an appointment one afternoon when Russell was in a very disagreeable mood. Things had not been going well during the day. The cabman was a big, powerful, athletic-looking fellow. On approaching the cab, Russell, as was his wont, closely examined the horse and the man. "Why," said he, "a big, powerful fellow like you ought not to be driving a cab; you ought to be doing something else."

"What the deuce is it to you," said the cabman, "what I do? Get into the cab, and mind your own business."

Russell, Barry O'Brien tells us, in his "Life" of the famous judge, read little. He was too much a man of action to be a man of books, but wherever he went he always carried two books in his bag — Locke "On Human Understanding" and the "Imitation of Christ." He liked novels of excitement. "Monte Cristo" was a special favourite. He read Gaboriau's books, dipped into Tolstoi and Tourguenieff, and once, when he was ill at Leeds, he got his chief clerk, Mr. Block, to read the "Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" to him. But Russell made a bad blunder through lack of literary knowledge. On one occasion, when he was introduced to Mr. Stanley Weyman, he wished to be civil to that distinguished author, so he said: "My young people, Mr. Weyman, speak constantly of your books, and tell me I ought to read them. I have read your 'Prisoner of Zenda' with much pleasure."

"Oh! That's the other man," said Stanley Weyman.

PRINCES IN POLITICS

The Recent Outburst of the Crown Prince of Germany Brings to Light Other Occasions When Princes Were Indiscreet.

Apropos of the recent outburst of the Crown Prince of Germany in the Reichstag, it might be mentioned that although in Great Britain Royalty unanimously maintain a strictly silent and impartial attitude in regard to political questions of the day, it has been stated that the late King Edward, when Prince of Wales, applauded Gladstone's Home Rule speech. The last time open objection was taken to the presence of a Royal personage in the House of Commons was in 1846, when Peel introduced his Bill for the repeal of the Corn Laws.

The Prince Consort was in the gallery on January 27th, the night of its introduction, and a few nights later Lord George Bentinck insinuated that he had been there to give Peel the assurance of his support, and that it would have been more proper if he had stayed away. This incident [illegible] largely to the unpopularity which Prince Albert at [illegible] Manchester Guardian, and he never again entered the doors of the House of Commons.

During the debate on the Catholic Relief Bill, in 1829, Greville describes how the Dukes of Clarence and Sussex, who were for the Bill, attacked the Duke of Cumberland, and how "they used towards each other language that nobody else would have ventured to employ," as one might expect, perhaps, from members of the same family.

The Duke of Clarence said the attacks on the Duke of Wellington had been "infamous." The Duke of Cumberland thought the remark applied to him, upon which he was told he could take it if he wished. But Cumberland was accustomed to hard knocks.

He once had to submit to being told (by Brougham that, while Wellington was illustrious by his actions, he was only illustrious by the courtesy of the House.

TAKING COVER

One of the characteristics of my old comrade, Amos Stillman, Company A, Twenty-third Massachusetts Volunteers, was bravery in actual fighting service," said the old soldier. "Another characteristic was a sense of humour, which stood him in good stead even in the face of danger, and contributed not a little to the gaiety of his comrades.

"At the Battle of Cold Harbour, just before making the charge, and while under the Confederate fire, our corporal, who was over six feet high and scarcely bigger around than a gun-barrel, became excited as the enemy's bullets ploughed up the earth about him. 'What kind of a place is this to keep a man in?' he demanded. 'Absolutely without protection!'

"He had no more than spoken when Private Stillman stuck his ramrod in the ground.

"'Here, corporal,' said he, 'get behind this.'"

BILL NYE'S COW

Bill Nye, once had a cow to sell and advertised her as follows:—

"Owing to my ill-health, I will sell at my residence, in township nineteen range eighteen, according to the Government's survey, one pure raspberry cow, aged eight years. She is of undoubted courage, and gives milk frequently. To a man who does not fear death in any form she would be a great boon. She is very much attached to her present home with a hay-chain, but she will be sold to anyone who will agree to treat her right. She is one-fourth shorthorn and three-quarters hyena. I will also throw in a double-barrel shotgun which goes with her. In May she usually goes away for a week or two and returns with a tall red calf with wobbly legs. Her name is Rose. I would rather sell to a non-resident."

MR. WM. EYERS DEAD.

Failed to Rally After an Operation At Nicholls' Hospital.

Mr. Wm. Eyers, who passed away at Nicholls' Hospital on Monday afternoon was an old and respected citizen of Peterborough. The late Mr. Eyers took ill the previous Monday evening, and was removed to the hospital, where he underwent an operation of a serious nature.

The funeral service will be held at his late residence, 168 Antrim street, on Friday morning at ten o'clock. After the service the remains will be taken by train to Millbrook for interment.

BOGUS DETECTIVES

Tricks and Daring Dodges of Wily Impostors to Extort Money from Unsuspecting Men and Women.

It was a well-known magistrate who, a short time ago, described the offence of two men who, by impersonating detective officers, had obtained $50 from a woman under the pretext of shielding her husband from the consequences of a robbery which they said he had committed, as one of the "worst forms of blackmailing"; and from inquiries which the writer has made there does not seem to be much doubt in official circles that quite a large number of men are going about posing as detectives and obtaining money by such pretences.

They go to work in much the same way as the ordinary blackmailer. That, is to say, they get to know something detrimental to the character of a man or woman, and then endeavour to come to terms with their victims by promising to withhold their warrant for arrest and "squaring" the matter. In the majority of cases it is generally ignorant people, who do not stop to ask the "detective" to produce the warrant, or who forget that a detective, by so acting, renders himself liable to the severest punishment, who are the usual victims, although at times these bogus detectives fly at higher game.

Posing as Police Officers.

Last year, for instance, the case came to light of a wealthy manufacturer, whose son had led a wild life while in London and forged a cheque for £250, paying a man whom he believed to be from Scotland Yard and who made out that he held a warrant for the son's arrest, $2000 to report that the boy had fled the country. The "detective" called on the father, said that he understood the son was hiding in the neighbourhood, and that he would like the father's help to execute the warrant. Not doubting the man's word, the father, to hush up the matter, suggested that he should pay the detective a price to go back to London and state that he had failed to find the culprit. Two thousand dollars was the price agreed upon and it was not until the father had an official visit from Scotland Yard in regard to the matter that he learned how he had been victimized.

Quite recently a couple of men were heavily fined for representing themselves as police officers and threatening another man with arrest on account of a cheque which they said had been dishonoured because of the false signature; while a particularly mean trick was played upon a widow some months ago when a man called and said that he held a warrant for the arrest of her son, who was a sailor, for taking part in an alleged robbery of goods from the dockyard. The mother was frightened, and, knowing that her son was to sail in a few hours, parted with $75 to induce the "detective" to hold up the warrant until he had sailed. The "detective" knew that the son would not return home again before he sailed, and relied on this fact to extort money from the widow, who found out the trick when she met [illegible] in another part of the town.

The Worst Feature.

Perhaps the worst feature of this bogus detective business has recently been exposed in the English law courts. Cases are known of men who set up as private inquiry agents who have no qualifications for such work and who simply announce themselves as such in order to acquire knowledge from those who seek their services afterwards using this knowledge to extort money from their victims.

A couple of months ago, for instance, a lady who wished to relieve herself of the attentions of a blackmailer who had learned a secret of her past life and was continually worrying her for money, rashly confided her troubles to one of these bogus detectives, whose advertisement she had seen in a certain paper. He had no sooner learned all the circumstances of the case than he, too, after finding that she would pay no more money until he had achieved some result, turned round and demanded a large sum for keeping his mouth shut regarding the secret she had confided to him. Luckily, she had the courage to go to the police about the matter, with the result that the scoundrel quickly fled the country.

Sounds of the Saw

"Oi can see red rowses bloomin'," sang the street vocalist, and he was about to broach the second spasm when a carpenter's apprentice beckoned him to his side.

"I'll give you tuppence," he declared, "if you'll stay in this shed and sing till I come back. I'm dying for a drink of milk." And the song ster assented.

Soon the apprentice reappeared and paid over the twopence.

"I s'pose," said the vocalist, "that my voice is about the same as yours, an' you thought your boss wouldn't know the difference—eh?"

The other looked at him indignantly, and then replied:—

"Your voice the same as mine! If you want to know, it's the same as my saw's, and I wanted the gur'nor to think I was working hard on these planks."

The Wrong Bit.

An Irish Jarvie was driving an English tourist round Dublin, and on stopping for refreshment the tourist remarked to Pat how lean his horse was. Going up to the horse's head the tourist examined its mouth, and turning round with the air of a man who knew something, he said:—

"I am afraid that the want of flesh in your horse is due to the large bit you have in its mouth."

Pat looked at him sorrowfully as he replied:—

"Shure, yer honour, I won't argue wid ye, but I'm after thinking it's a small bit that he has in his stomach that's a-troublin' the poor baste!"

ROYAL RECOLLECTIONS

The Reason Finger-Bowls Not Now Used at Royal Dinners and Some Smart Answers Given to Emperor William.

In "Some RecoHections" Canon Teignmouth Shore, who has just died, tells a curious story of the reason why finger-bowls are not placed on the table during the dinners of the Royal household. The explanation was furnished by Sir John Cowell, Master of the Household.

"He explained to me," says the Canon, "that in the old days, when there was a certain Jacobite element even in the vicinity of the Court, it had been noticed that on the toast of 'The King' being given after dinner, some of those present used to pass their glass over the finger-bowl, and it was discovered that thus they drank 'To the King over the water,' and the temptation to do so was removed by the abolition of the finger-bowls!"

An account of an amusing conversation between King Edward, the German Emperor, and the Canon is also given in the book mentioned. King Edward and the Kaiser were on a brief visit to Prince and Princess Charles of Hesse, at Cronberg, and came over to the town one day to unveil a memorial to the Princess Elizabeth of Hesse.

"After the ceremony they expressed a wish to see the memorial in the English church to the late Empress Frederick. I accompanied their Majesties, and on entering the building the Emperor turned to me.

"'Now, Canon,' he said, 'how many does the church hold?'

"'In the season, your Majesty,' I replied, 'there are about three hundred or three hundred and fifty present.'

"'And how many of them are asleep during the sermon?' he asked, with a laugh.

"'I must beg your Majesty,' I said, 'not to think that I preach every Sunday!'

"The King, who seemed amused and pleased at the answer, remarked:—

"'You see you must get up early to walk round my chaplain.'

"'Yes, and a good walk too!' said the Emperor, with a glance at my somewhat bulky figure.

"'Yes,' said the King. 'You know, Teignmouth Shore, you are putting on weight.'

"'Well, at all events,' said the Emperor, with a most gracious smile, 'he never needs to do that in the pulpit!'"

TWO AUDIENCES

Mr. Bonar Law Speaks to Lions and Hyenas.

Never, perhaps, has a leading politician delivered a speech under more extraordinary conditions than those which characterized a meeting three years ago at Mountain Ash, Glamorgan when Mr. Bonar Law, the new Leader of the Opposition was announced to speak. The pavilion at Mountain Ash, which will seat more than 10,000 people, had been let to the Tory Party for Mr. Bonar Law's meeting. Almost immediately after[illegible] Lloyd George and Wedgwood came along and offered forthwith to rent the big building for the winter. The hall was let to them, and the Conservatives were told that they could not have it for their demonstration.

Mr. Littlejohns, the organizer, informed the owners that his meeting would be held there at all costs. After some complimentary passages at arms had been exchanged it was decided that the lions and elephants and hyenas should form part of Mr. Bonar Law's audience, but that they should be walled in with canvas passing. They were well fed before the meeting, and the show band was engaged so that the animals should not be disturbed with strange music. Inside the wall their keepers marched to and fro with prods to prevent the lions and monkeys from interrupting the speakers.

Mr. Bonar Law arrived late, and was unconscious of the fact that he was addressing two audiences. As the human audience applauded, however, the prods were vigorously used to prevent the listeners in the cages from discording the chorus.

When Mr. Bonar Law reached his peroration one of the lions was so struck with the force of the argument that he bellowed forth his approval. It was an anxious moment. The prod, however, opposed his applause, and he subsided in disgust.

When Mr. Bonar Law had finished and had sat down he said to Mr. Littlejohns: "I thought it was a very successful attempt by some Liberal opponent to imitate a lion's voice."

THE WONDERFUL BARN

In Ireland, in the county of Kildare, not far distant from Leixlip, is a very picturesque architectural effort, commonly called "The Wonderful Barn." It is built of brick and has six storeys. Each storey internally, is dome-shaped, and in the centre of each floor is a round hole, so fashioned that by means of tackle sacks of corn can be lowered or raised from floor to floor. The ordinary means of entrance and access is by way of a corkscrew flight of steps, which is carried around and outside the building, being connected with doors on each floor. The whole structure is 76ft. high, and was built with the chief object of providing employment for the out-of-works of the district.

MUFFS FOR MEN

Although the muff is now exclusively an article of feminine apparel, it was when first introduced in England, toward the close of the sixteenth century, used by both men and women. In fact, in the seventeenth century it was generally regarded as an essential part of the dress of a man of fashion. The muffs then used were somewhat similar to the present fashion — large and bulky.

BOX LUMBER IN CANADA.

The reported consumption of lumber for boxes and shooks in Canada during 1910 was over one hundred and fifty-eight million feet, valued at two million two hundred and seventy three thousand dollars. These statistics have been compiled by the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior from reports received from one hundred and two box factories, over one-half of which are in Quebec. Seventy million feet of lumber or forty-five per cent. of the total was used in Quebec. Ontario used sixty million feet or thirty-eight per cent. of the total and the remainder was used in the provinces of New Brunswick, British Columbia, Manitoba and Nova Scotia. Pine, the chief species used in Ontario formed forty-five per cent. of the total box lumber and cost only $13.93 per thousand. This comparatively low price for pine, indicates that with this more than with any other species, mill waste and cull lumber is being used in the manufacture of boxes. Spruce in 1910 was used in every province in which boxes were made, and formed forty-one per cent. of the total. The cost was $13.83 per thousand or twenty-eight cents more than the average mill run price, so that manufacturers using spruce demand the finest quality. The remaining fourteen per cent. of the total was comprised of fourteen other woods, of which hemlock, basswood and balsam were the chief. The most expensive box wood used was a million and half feet of Douglas fir at $23.00 per thousand in British Columbia. Balsam fir used in the three eastern provinces was the cheapest hotwood reported in 1910 at $8.04 per thousand. It is a wood light in color, tasteless, fairly strong and its use in the manufacture of boxes should be encouraged.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

THE VALUE OF THE DOLLAR.

When investigating the high cost of living some consideration should be given to the fellow out in South Africa who is digging up the gold in large and healthy shovelfuls. All unknowingly he is the person who is largely responsible for this increased price of commodities. The final figures for gold production in South Africa have not been completed but it is certain that it will be about $160,000,000, thus showing the biggest increase since 1908. The average production of gold for the last five years has averaged about $140,000,000, which means that since 1900 the vast volume of $700,000,000 has been dumped into circulation.

Gold, though the standard of values, is nevertheless subject to the laws of supply and demand as other commodities are. The trouble is that there is such a large increase of gold that it has lost its purchasing power. In other words it takes more gold now to buy commodities than it did in years gone by. Only good would result at the increase of the gold supply if all prices should rise at regular rate at scheduled times. But unfortunately this does not happen. Trust made goods respond very readily to the fluctuation of gold, but trust employees find that they have a long and tedious battle before they can get an increase in their wages. That is where the pinch comes.

The fluctuation of the gold value, however, is something that must be considered by the financiers. The cost of living does not affect any person as long as the purchaser has the wherewithal to buy. It takes time to reach the level.

Wants to be Secretary.

On account of the resignation of Mr. Gilchrist, secretary of the Y.M.C.A., that institution is on the lookout for a successor. On Monday night, Mr. P. Beeth, assistant secretary of Ottawa Y.M.C.A., was in the city to meet the executive of the local Board of Directors with a view of taking the position. No action was taken.

FORESTRY IN EUROPE.

The productive forest area in 1908 on the Grand Duchy of Hesse in Europe amounted to 182,263 acres. In general the standing timber is composed of sixty-nine per cent. hardwood and thirty-one per cent. coniferous forest. The fir ranks first among the coniferous species. The total yield of lumber in 1908 was 4,575,000 cubic feet. Refuse in so far as it is not suitable for lighter lumber, such as lathe or for pulp, is used for firewood. The expenditures for salaries, forest cultivation and road building amounted to approximately $754,000, and the total gross income (from lumber and firewood) was $1,161,931. The capital represented by the forests ($52,065,054) brought interest accordingly at 2.21 per cent. Where intensive forestry of this kind is practised, forest fires are unknown. Sufficient money spent on Canadian Forest Reserves would greatly reduce the fire danger, maintain an adequate lumber supply for the country and in time become a source of revenue to the Government.

WONDERFUL GOWNS

Dresses Rich and Wonderful That Make Women Gasp and Men Sit Up and Wonder If It Is Worth the Candle.

One of the most beautiful costumes ever turned out was that worn by Queen Mary at the Coronation Durbar, and there are no fewer than 3,250,000 stitches in the train, which is of Irish point lace.

The train had been presented as a gift by the ladies of Belfast to her Majesty, and was made by the Presentation Sisters of Youghal. It has been estimated that it would have taken over a quarter of a century for a single lace worker to complete the train, but sixty workers, working regularly, finished it in 96,020 hours.

This reminds one that at the Plantagenet Ball, held at Buckingham Palace in 1842, the late Queen Victoria impersonated Queen Philippa, in a silken dress made entirely in Spitalfields.

The dress, which was on view for several days at Hanover Square, cost, in materials alone, nearly $1250 while the gems that decorated it were extensive.

EVIDENTLY A MISTAKE

'Twas at the skating rink, and the young man was but a beginner. Wherefore he lost his balance.

He made a wild effort to grab anything in the way of support. And, unfortunately, the nearest object happened to be the young lady in front of him.

She promptly turned on him.

"You contemptible cad!" she shrieked. "Do you think I am a lamp post, or a piece of furniture, or what? You ought not to be allowed in here, you clumsy lout! What right have you to tear other people's clothes to rags, and claw them in that mad way? You are not fit ——"

But the young man had now recovered his composure.

"Pardon me, madam," he remarked, "but haven't you made a mistake?"

"A mistake?" gasped the lady. "What do you mean?"

"Simply this, madam," came the calm retort, "I am not your husband!"

"Accused of begging!" exclaimed a magistrate. "Why, you are the very man who was begging at my door yesterday!"

"Yes," asserted the vagrant, with a sneer, "and you didn't give me anything."

"Well, I'll give you something now. Fourteen days!"

ELOPEMENT IN HIGH LIFE.

A Texas Millionaire's Wife Is Deported From Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 15.—With his penitent wife, J. E. Snead, millionaire, of Amarillo, Texas, left for St. Paul, to join her children and mother. Albert Boyce, with whom the woman eloped, is being held here under $5,000 bail by the federal authorities on a deportment warrant. The couple were ordered deported, and the wife left with her husband and a Burns' detective rather than wait official developments.

Boyce had $15,000 in currency in his pocket when arrested at a local hotel, and New York drafts for $100,000. Mrs. Snead had diamonds on her person valued at $20,000. Her husband had much trouble persuading his wife to return home.

Is your husband cross? An irritable, fault finding disposition is often due to a disordered stomach. A great many have been permanently cured of stomach trouble by taking Chamberlain's Tablets. For sale by all dealers.

London, Ont., Jan. 16.—Mrs. S. M. Fraser, 506 English street, was held up and shot by an unknown highwayman on Central avenue near Adelaide street, shortly after eleven o'clock last night. The bullet entered her side but was fortunately deflected by a corset steel and lodged in the handkerchief in her pocket.

The woman was badly frightened, but not seriously injured. A short time before a highwayman, presumably the same man, held up a young servant girl on Colborne street near Central avenue, and took a small sum of money from her.

The police have been notified and are working on the case.

The boy's appetite is often the source of amazement. If you would have such an appetite take Chamberlain's Tablets. They not only create a healthy appetite, but strengthen the stomach and enable it to do its work naturally. For sale by all dealers.

Miss Ethel Rahill left on Friday last for Owen Sound, where she will be the guest of friends for a month.

MY LADY'S COLUMN.

RIBBON PAINTING

A vogue which will commend itself to the home artist in the use of hand-painted ribbon for trimming evening and other gowns. Both silk and satin ribbon are treated to water-colour designs of a "sketchy" artistic type usually in colours of "chintzy" suggestion, or imitative of Japanese colour schemes with the "Chinese" tones, pure greens and reds, and in suitable touch of black.

A broad satin ribbon hand-painted in a bold conventional design makes an excellent skirt "band" of the fashionable kind. It can, if desired be veiled with chiffon, in order to reduce the attractive "blurred" effect so well liked this season. Narrower ribbons serve to trim tunics and fichus, the edges of the ribbon being turned under to make it simulate piece satin, or a beaded edge can be worked over the selvedge in beads coloured like the painted design. It is an original detail of this character which just now distinguishes the most expensive gown.

Some Sickroom Rules

The doctor's orders must be scrupulously obeyed. The patient should be in a room as remote as possible from the "bustle" of the house. The window should, as a rule, be kept open but there must be no draughts. The fire must be mended quietly — not with tongs, but with gloved fingers. The nurse's dress should be simple washable, and make no rustling sounds. The patient must not be regaled with minute accounts of the terrible illnesses of other people. The household worries must not be mentioned in the sick-room. The patient's meals — no matter how simple they are — must be served up daintily, with specially attractive tray-cloth and china. Flowers must be taken out of the room at night. Visitors must be admitted with the doctor's permission, and not otherwise.

A Mother's Creed

Mrs. Osora S. Davis gives the following beautiful "mother's creed":

I believe in the eternal importance of the home as the fundamental institution of society.

I believe in the immeasurable possibilities of every boy and girl.

I believe in the imagination, the faith, the hopes, and the ideals which dwell in the hearts of all children.

I believe in the beauty of nature, of art, of books, and of friendship.

I believe in the satisfaction of duty.

I believe in the little homely joys of everyday life.

I believe in the goodness of the great design which lies behind our complex world.

I believe in the safety and peace [illegible] the

To Cure Forehead Creases

A perfectly smooth brow is not the least of youth's enviable possessions, and it is one of these tiresome accidents which makes a "fringy" style of hairdressing best becoming just when the forehead begin, to record the wear and tear of time.

For the heavy lines known as "frown marks" the beauty doctors advocate what they call "wrinkle plasters." The lines are pressed out with the fingers and the plaster is applied while the "frown mark" is thus forcibly held in abeyance. The plaster should be applied, it seems, every time one proposes to go into a "brown study," as well as during sleep.

To eradicate the fine lines, flannel wrung out of hot water and laid on the forehead for ten minutes at a time, and followed by a similarly lengthy dabbling not rubbing, with olive oil is the treatment prescribed. Adopted twice a day for a fortnight, these means are said to ensure a smooth white brow. The oil must be freely applied, as it is the oil which feeds the wasted tissues that cause the lines.

Browned Crumbs.

Keep all scraps of crust until there is a good quantity; cut off any black bits, and put the rest on a baking-tin in the oven until they are a bright golden brown all over and quite crisp. Then ground them in a mortar, or, if there is not one available, put them between two pieces of paper and crush them with a rolling-pin. Next pass them through a sieve—this ensures them being all of one size. Put them in a tin with a tight-fitting lid.

These crumbs are useful for shaking over boiled ham or bacon, and can often be used for puddings instead of white crumbs, giving the mixture a richer appearance.

Seared Round Steak

Have the butcher cut the steak thick. Lay it on your meat-board, sprinkle lightly with flour and pound until the flour disappears. Continue this, turning the steak over occasionally, until about half a cupful of flour to one pound of steak has been used. Put a little butter or suet in the frying-pan and heat smoking hot. Sear the steak on both sides, being careful not to burn. Now add a little hot water, about a cupful, cover closely, and set back to simmer for about half an hour. Add more water if necessary. Season with butter, pepper and salt just before serving. You will have a rich, brown gravy, which may be thickened if liked.

Friendship of Books

To fall in love with a good book is one of the greatest events that can befall us. It is to have a new influence pouring itself into our life, a new teacher to inspire us, a new friend to be by our side always, who, when life grows narrow and weary, will take us into his wider and calmer and higher world.

Whether it be biography, introducing us to some humble life made great by duty done; or history, opening vistas into the movements and destinies of nations that have passed away; or poetry, making music of all the common things around us, and filling the fields and the skies and the work of the city and the cottage with eternal meanings — whether it be these, or religious books or science, no one can become the friend even of one good book without being made wiser and better.

WHAT CANADIANS ARE DOING

THOMAS GRIGG
Qu'Appelle

For nineteen years Thomas Grigg has farmed near Qu'Appelle, meeting with ups and downs, but prospering. Although a Canadian, he and his wife came to the Stringbrook district from South Dakota. Generally speaking, wheat growing has been the mainstay. Horse-raising, also, has received attention to an extent sufficient to lead Mr. Grigg to pass opinion that a man can make as much money on a half section of rough land raising colts as he can on a real good quarter at present growing. Pigs, also, are kept, and on different occasions have helped him "out of a tight place." He finds that, as a rule, there is enough feed around to fatten a bunch. The farm comprises 640 acres of which about one-quarter is summerfallowed annually. Wheat is grown for two years, and then oats or barley. Recently, Mr. Grigg has rented his farm for a year in order that he and his good wife may spend the winter in California and take a well-earned rest.

HON. HUGH J. MACDONALD
Police Magistrate
Winnipeg

Mr Hugh Macdonald who was lately appointed Police magistrate of the Gateway city was formerly premier of Manitoba. Probably the importance of his magistracy lies principally in the fact that the man he succeeded was the famous late T. Mayne Daly, and though Mr. Macdonald is not in his famous father's rank he is big hearted enough to make the attempt to fill a big man's shoes. Nothing attempted, nothing done is certainly not in his make up.

Squire Macdonald is a son of the late John A. Macdonald, and might have been premier of Canada today, if he had remained in Dominion politics, and followed closely in the footsteps of his dad. But he chose the nearer honors offered by a provincial premiership and got out of the running for the post of prime minister of Canada.

DR. A. BEVERLEY WELFORD

It is well for this country that the doctors take such a large and disinterested part in its public life. True they cannot take an active interest in the larger problems because it would mean their giving up their professional duties, but in every community you will find at least one medical man taking an active interest in teh local affairs.

Such a one is Dr. A. Beverley Welford of Woodstock Ont. who is one of the pioneers of the Canadian Club movement in his district, though the doctor's energies are not confined to this laudable work. He is practically connected with every movement that has for its object—the raising of the standard of life.

NELLIE L. McCLUNG
Canadian writer

Mrs. McClung has lived in Manitoba for the last thirty years, having come from Owen Sound with her parents in the very early days of the province. However, she is always very careful to explain that she was only a "mere child" at that time, and yet her stories of some of the happenings of the long journey by ox-train from Winnipeg to the point on the Souris river where her parents located, are so vividly told that we are forced to believe that she must have been a very bright child for her years.

Mrs. McClung, who before her marriage was Nellie L. Mooney, received her education at a country school and afterwards at the Central Collegiate in Winnipeg. She taught school for five years and then married Mr R. W. McClung, who was engaged in the drug business in Manitoba, Man. They lived in Manitou until last summer, when they removed to Winnipeg, and have taken up their residence on Chestnut street. Mrs. McClung was elected president of the local branch of the Canadian Woman's Press club for this year.

Mrs. McClung has written two books, "Sowing Seeds in Danny," and "The Second Chance;" also many short stories. Last year she gave a series of recitals, from her own books, in Manitoba, and also in Ontario.

At the present time she is engaged in writing another book.

Mrs. McClung chooses for her characters the plain people of every day life, when we all know. The keen subtlety of her writing makes a strong appeal to the discriminating reader.

Women Students in Vienna.

In answer to an inquiry from an old classmate, a girl writes: "The woman student has ceased to be an object of unusual interest here, she is just a student, and has become so numerous that no one stares at her. The catalogues for last year show that there were at the three Austrian universities 24,864 students, of whom 1293 were women, about 5 per cent. In the medical department there were 271, and in the philosophical — which includes the school for teachers — there were 1949, while only 44 heard lectures in the law department, where all doors have not yet been opened.

Charlotte Street Soloist.

Miss Brock, late of Toronto, has been secured as soloist for the Charlotte street Methodist church choir. Miss Brock possesses a beautiful, rich and well-cultivated contralto voice, and through her singing for the past two Sundays at Charlotte street church, has been enthusiastically welcomed to the choir. Miss Brock resides here with her father, who is manager of the Brinton Carpet Company. While residing in Toronto she was soloist at times in many of the leading churches.

A Garbage By-law.

A garbage by-law has long been badly needed in Peterborough, and it is therefore pleasing to note that this long-felt want is soon to be supplied. When garbage is moved regularly each day or two, especially from the crowded business section, we can hope for a clean bill of health for the people. An effort is, we understand, being made in this direction, which will take the form of a petition to the Council at its next meeting.

Needy People Ask Help.

Many calls for assistance are coming from people from all over the city, many of whom are comparative strangers and of whose presence and condition the City Relief Officer was unaware. Investigation reveals that one family in particular is in very low circumstances, the father being out of work and seemingly unable to secure employment, and the mother is ill. Much is being done by the churches towards assisting those in need, and many generous citizens are contributing freely in order to help, still the requests continue to come to the relief officer for aid.

On Charge of Vagrancy.

Mr. George Cochrane, agent of the Children's Aid Society, visited Lakefield, and after a short, though pitched battle took a woman into custody charged with vagrancy. The woman had acquired considerable notoriety in her neighborhood and it is reported that she at one time kept a disorderly house near Lakefield. At the time of her arrest she was living with a strange man and was in charge of three children. One of which is at present in the Children's Shelter. One is in Lakefield and the other is in Warsaw. The authorities intend to have her deported.

The Purity of the Ice.

The matter of pure ice is just now engaging the attention of a number of our leading citizens. Yesterday a gentleman in connection with The Times expressed his opinion regarding the harvesting of ice from the Little Lake, in a forcible manner. He did not see any difference between using ice taken from the Little Lake or using drinking water from the same place. If the water of the lake is impure, it must follow of course that the ice also is impure. The Times, would however, remark that most of the ice taken from the lake is used for cooling purposes. Besides it would be a serious matter to compel the Allin Ice Company, who have put up a good service in the past, and who are practically alone in the business, to move their storehouses for ice to another locality, which would have to be done in case of the Little Lake ice being condemned.

A Novel Catarrh Remedy Cures Without Drugs

THE HEALING VAPOR OF CATARRHOZONE LOOSENS THE COUGH, STOPS ALL DISCHARGES, PREVENTS SNEEZING.

The real danger of Catarrh lies in its insidiousness. You may have Catarrh yourself, but you may not know it. Before the disease spreads from your nose to the stomach, lungs or bronchial tubes, root it out—cure it with "Catarrhozone." Look over the following symptoms—then examine yourself:

Bad Breath	Stuffy Nostrils
Frequent Sneezing	Ears Buzzing
Watery Eyes	Hacking Cough
Bad Taste	Droppings
Raising Phlegm	Difficult Breathing

Don't continue to burden your system for another day when the germs of such a filthy, loathsome disease as Catarrh. Get Catarrhozone to-day—inhale its soothing vapor, fill your breathing organs with its balsamic essences, and all trace of Catarrh will forever depart. Read what Elwood S. Lee, of Sydenham, Ont., says of his cure with Catarrhozone:

"I was a chronic sufferer from continuous colds in the throat and nose, and for many years have constantly had Catarrh. I was recommended to try Catarrhozone, and find that by using the Inhaler on the first touch of a cold or la grippe I am able to stay it in a few hours. I have been able to breathe through my nose freely since using Catarrhozone; in fact, I am completely cured.

"(Signed) ELWOOD S. LEE.

Once you try Catarrhozone you'll realize how indispensable it is—the large dollar size contains an indestructible hard rubber inhaler and sufficient medication to last two months. Beware of the substitutor and imitators of Catarrhozone—use the genuine and you'll get cured. By mail from the Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

Easier To Remove Than Conceal Wrinkles

(National Hygienic Review)

"When you try to conceal your wrinkles with paste made from beans you deceive yourself, not me. Let a defect, which is possibly but small, appear undisguised. A fault concealed is presumed to be great."

This little epigram of Martial's suggests the present day tendency to avoid the use of cosmetics which can only conceal or hide facial defects, and to adopt instead rational means of removing the same. For the removal of wrinkles, saggy cheeks and baggy chins, the saxolite prescription which goes to the foundation of these troubles, seems to have come into general use since its virtues became known but a short time ago. One ounce of saxolite, procurable at any drug store, is dissolved in a half pint witch hazel. Used as a wash lotion this tightens the skin immediately, effectually smoothing out wrinkles and "drawing in" hanging skin or folds.

A very enjoyable evening was held at the home of R. Cornelius on Jan. 6th. The music was furnished by Messrs. A. Whilde, E. Howley and D. O'Leary. The floor managers were D. Sullivan, and Wm. Doherty, our village blacksmith. Stephen Murphy carried off the prize for being the best buck and wing dancer, the tune being "Pop Goes the Weasel", which was fluted and fingered by D. O'Brien.

The bachelors held their annual meeting last week at the club rooms at Judes Pines. Mr. Pugnacious Sullivan was made president, although he being ruled out of lodge No. 31 for bad behaviour and going west too much and neglecting his business. Mr. Sullivan is greatly indebted to Concrete Maurice for getting him enrolled. It was moved and seconded by Texas J. Clancy and Hotshin Smith that Injector O'Brien be elected vice-president. It was moved by Mammoth Casey that Concave F. O'Brien be made treasurer and seconded by Silent Joe Leahy. Wandering Willie Ryan's application was rejected on account of his boisterous laughter. Riverside Bill Hefferman was accepted on condition that he report weekly to the president. Huge John Callaghan was fined $11.65 for coming into the hall galloping, but John's money was refunded on condition that he would sing a song, and John cut loose with the following:

For every man under the sun,
There is a lady or there is none,
If there be one, seek her and find her
John says he will never mind her.

The president was highly pleased with John's decision and thinks he will be a life-long member. The meeting was than brought to a final, with a few words from the president. Any person wishing to become a member may apply at the rooms, or communicate with the president.

Mr. W. Hayes passed through this village going south, which indicates cold weather.

Messrs. J. Lonergan and John O'Toole payed the Graham Bros. horse stables a visit last week. Mr. O'Toole says they all lack a shade.

VOL XXVII NO 16 — PETERBOROUGH ONTARIO, FRIDAY, JANUARY 19 1912 — PRICE TWO CENTS

OLD AGE PENSION SYSTEM IS SUGGESTED FOR CANADA

A Splendid Speech By Mr. J. H. Burnham in the House of Commons

A committee of the House of Commons, will in all probability be appointed to consider the advisability of establishing an old age pension system in Canada. The Finance Minister replying to a motion made by Mr. J. H. Burnham, intimated that the Government would assent to the latter's proposal "that a select special committee be appointed to make an enquiry into an old age pension system for Canada." The Minister was not prepared to state at the moment whether or not he favored such a plan for assisting indigent persons over seventy years of age, but he thought that it would be well to permit a Parliamentary committee to continue the investigation undertaken some years ago. In that instance a committee was appointed and secured some valuable information, but no report was made to the House of Commons.

Mr. Burnham who has made extensive researches into the subject, made an excellent speech in introducing his resolution, and Mr. Nickle, the new Conservative member for Kingston, also delivered one of the best addresses heard in the House this session in supporting it. It was his maiden speech, and was highly commended by members on both sides of the House. Major Currie (N. Simcoe) also contributed to the debate. Mr. E. M. Macdonald (Pictou) had been expected to second Mr. Burnham's resolution, but he was unable to be present this afternoon, and the discussion was adjourned in order that his views might be heard.

In presenting his resolution, Mr. Burnham pointed to the success of the old age pension system of Germany and in Great Britain. The basis of the pension idea was the abolition of promiscuous poor relief. Persons who were forced in their declining years to look here and there for charity would be placed in positions of security by a pension scheme and would be dependent not on any individual or individuals, but upon the state. Mr. Burnham calculated that in Canada about 30,000 persons would be entitled to benefit from the Act providing pensions for claimants over seventy years age, and without other means of support. An annual expenditure of about two millions and a half dollars would be, he believed, sufficient to pay these people pensions amounting to $1.50 a week.

Hon. W. T. White complimented Mr. Burnham upon his address, and said he could see no reason why the committee he desired should not be appointed. The object which Mr. Burnham had in view would enlist the sympathy of the House, because there are few spectacles more pathetic than that of helpless old age confronted by privation and poverty. The question to be considered was whether Canada required advanced legislation such as had been suggested. There had been no agitation in favor of old age pensions such as had taken place in Great Britain. Mr. White thought that if a man had honestly failed in the industrial strife it might be only right that the state should care for him after he had passed a certain age. The man whose powers were waning might not be in a position to help himself.

The Finance Minister said that there might not be the same body of public opinion behind an old age pension scheme in Canada as there had been in Britain, because there was in Canada little or no unemployment. Canadian industries were thriving, and Canadians artisans were generally speaking employed, and well able to take care of themselves. In cases of accident or disability the need was to a great extent met by provincial and municipal charity, and by filial piety. The thrifty, industrious man could in Canada provide for his family and lay aside something for his old age.

Half of the population moreover was engaged in agricultural pursuits Finally Mr. White was not altogether convinced that Canada should announce that she had reached the stage where a pension scheme was required, but had no objection to the adoption of the motion.

KING GEORGE TO PAY VISIT TO AUSTRALIA

Perth, Western Australia, Jan. 18.—A great international exposition which is to be opened by King George and Queen Mary is to be held in three years on the occasion of the completion of the trans-Australian Railroad. The line, which is now under construction, crosses Australia from North to South, and is to be connected with West Australia on the West and Queenland and Victoria on the East. The total cost is estimated at $50,000,000.

PUBLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions of its correspondents

PUSH PETERBOROUGH.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Peterborough has the essentials and accessories for a manufacturing centre in a superior degree. We have seen that this is true. It has grown rapidly, more rapidly than nearly every city in Ontario in the past ten years. The returns have demonstrated this. What further can be done, in addition to what is now being done, to Push Peterborough forward?

At present this work is in the hands of a committee of the Council on which the Board of trade has three representatives. A keen lookout is kept for new factories or foreign manufacturing concerns that contemplate entering Canada, and correspondence is continually going on with these, as well as personal interviews. To explain all that is done would probably be in oditious, as it would give valuable hints to other cities, but I am assured, and have been shown evidence to sustain that assurance, that the committee is a alert and active.

An alert and active committee, no matter how competent and aggressive, must be supported by the citizens generally. When by-laws are submitted the electors must vote for them in sufficient numbers to satisfy, an absurdly drastic law or the committee's efforts may come to naught.

Here are some examples of what has been done recently in some other places in the way of carrying by-laws to aid industries.

In Owen Sound—To loan $15,000 to a furniture factory and to loan $20,000 to a baby carriage factory. Altogether Owen Sound passed by laws involving $110,000 for industrial assistance.

In Guelph—to loan $20,000 to the Independent Tire Co., and to give fixed assessment to four factories.

In Belleville—To guarantee bonds to the amount of $25,000 for and give a fixed assessment to one industry and to aid another concern.

In Dunnville—To authorize a loan of $30,000 to one Company and to purchase a site and put up a building for another at a cost of $10,000.

In Wingham—To grant $10,000 and a fixed assessment to a foundry.

In Mount Forest—To loan a carriage company an additional sum of $14,000.

In Drayton—To grant a loan of $4,000, a free site and exemption from taxes to a flax mill.

In Newmarket—To grant a loan of $25,000 to a motor car company.

In Port Arthur—To guarantee bonds to the amount of $30,000 to a factory to make interior furnishings, and for granting assistance to a match factory. In all Port Arthur voted to raise $150,000 in five industrial by-laws.

In Aurora—To loan a company $10,000 and grant exemption from taxes.

In St. Catharines—To give a lock factory nine acres of land, free water exemption for ten years and a fixed assessment for another ten years.

In Merriton—To give a fixed assessment to a tissue paper factory.

In Alliston—To give a fixed assessment and free water to a silverware factory.

In Campbellford—To "assist" a bridge works in that town.

In Windsor—Three by-laws to grant "the usual concessions" to three different concerns.

In Trenton—Three by-laws to grant fixed assessments to a baby carriage factory, a shirt and collar factory and a button factory.

In Chatham—To loan $40,000.

In Perth—To loan $25,000.

In Sarnia—To grant a bonus of $30,000 to a factory. This industry is one Peterborough had correspondence with.

Fort William—To aid two concerns in regard to one of which $102,000 is to be raised by the city.

Milton—To guarantee the bonds of a shoe company to the extent of $12,000, the company to expend $15,000.

Brampton—A loan of $43,000 to a foundry.

Stratford—A loan of $10,000 to a factory for piano accessories.

Thorold—Fixed assessment to a paper and pulp company.

Woodstock—To aid an automobile factory.

Bracebridge—A fixed assessment for a woollen mill.

Deseronto—To aid a canning factory.

Durham—Exemption for a cement factory.

Napanee—To aid a rock drill factory.

Smith's Falls—Concession in assessment to assist agricultural implement factory.

Tilbury—A loan to a brick and tile yard.

Kingston—A fixed assessment to a locomotive works and privileges to a box factory.

Ridgetown—Concessions to a canning factory.

Listowel—Exemption and free water to a furniture factory.

This list is not a complete one; it has been made from paragraphs noticed in casual reading of the papers and these paragraphs full particulars are not given. It, however, serves the purpose of indicating what other places do in the way of carrying by-laws to assist industries and our people must support in the same way those engaged more directly in the work of advancing the city industrially in order to secure new industries.

Yours truly,
Civis Sum.

Excellent Connections for the Sunny South.

To meet the demand of southern travel which generally takes place this season of the year, the C. P. R. is pleased to inform the public of the excellent connection made at Detroit with the Pere Marquette for Jacksonville and other Southern points.

Passengers can leave Toronto on the C.P.R. fast train at 4.30 p. m., arrive Detroit 10.25 p. m., and connect with the Pere Marquette train leaving same depot at 10.45 p. m., and arrive at Jacksonville second morning after leaving Detroit.

The parlor and dining car service between Toronto and Detroit is par excellence, and from Detroit south through sleeping and dining car service is also operated.

This route takes you through the beautiful Cities of Detroit, Mich.; Toledo, O.; Dayton, O.; Cincinnati, O.; and Atlanta, Georgia.

If intending passengers will call at the ticket office, 10 East King Street full information will be furnished and literature covering the route supplied.

Excellent connections can also be made to Florida, via Buffalo.

Acme of Service.

Taking into consideration the magnificent equipment supplied by the Canadian Pacific, even at full tariff rates, every day is a bargain day for the traveling public.

The new compartment cars recently put into service between Toronto and Ottawa, and Toronto and Montreal, on trains leaving North Toronto at 10 p.m. daily, in addition to the electric lighted sleeping cars, also operated on this train, make it second to none on the continent.

The compartment cars have a style all their own, being the latest in construction and appointment. They are electric lighted throughout; absolute privacy is assured; individual toilet requisites, etc.

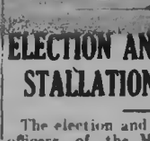
"A Premier Train," is the general verdict; some say, a credit to Canada.

WILL NOT BE SIDETRACKED

The Report That the New C. P. R. Line Will Pass us By Not Correct

STILL BE ON MAIN LINE

The Proposed Road Will be Free From Grades and Modern Standard Affording Means of Making Record Time Between Toronto and Montreal.



OF some time the public press has been discussing the proposed changes in the main line of the C.P.R., and what their effect will be on Peterborough.

News has been received that, although the C.P.R. intend to run a Lake Shore line from Montreal to Toronto, Peterborough will not be sidetracked as was at first reported.

The only difference that may exist under the alteration will be that the big, fast Pullman express trains will operate on the new lake shore line, and as this new line in respect of grades, curves and rails will be of the highest modern standard, it will permit the passenger trains to make record speed, which will make an appreciable difference in the time between Toronto and Montreal.

It is probable that the line from Smith's Falls to Toronto will be completely reconstructed so that it will be on a par with the best divisions of the road, and as a result, the facilities for getting to and from Peterborough will be even better than at present.

Concurrently with the construction of the lake shore line the C.P.R. will build short lines from Bethany Junction to Cobourg, and from Burketon to Oshawa, for which surveys are now being made. These two lines will greatly help local traffic in both freight and passengers. All this new work will be pushed on energetically so that in the summer of 1913 these lines will be open for regular traffic. This change in the present system will effect Lindsay more than any other town, as it will become a railway hub for central Ontario.

ANOTHER PROTEST AGAINST THE NE TEMERE DECREE

Will be Presented by Evangelical Alliance to Sir James Whitney---Text of the Protest

In addition to presenting the petition against the Ne Temere decree to Premier Borden, as already announced, the Evangelical Alliance is considering presenting it to Sir James Whitney as well. The wording of the petition is as follows:

"To the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario in Council.

"The undersigned residents of the Province of Ontario, in view of the present uncertainty regarding the law relating to marriage, would hereby request that al, the necessary steps be taken to obtain at the earliest possible date a considered opinion from the courts as to the extent of titioners will ever pray," etc.

jurisdiction of the Legislature of the Province of Ontario and of the Parliament of Canada respectively upon the subject of marriage.

"We regard it of the greatest consequence that in authentic pronouncement upon this important question be procured without delay, and request that all the constitutional questions involved be immediately referred for decision to the Court of Appeal of Ontario, pursuant to the powers vested in you in that behalf, or that whatever other course may be deemed necessary for that purpose may be promptly taken, and your petitioners will ever pray," etc.

RICHESON WON'T ESCAPE FROM THE ELECTRIC CHAIR

HOPE OF EXECUTIVE CLEMENCY HAS ALMOST BEEN ABANDONED.

Prisoner is Kept in Ignorance of the Fact, Because It Would Cause a Collapse.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 18.—Death in the electric chair will be the expiation of Rev. Clarence V. T. Richesons brutal murder of his girlish sweetheart, Avis Linnell. Hope of executive clemency that buoyed up the ministerial murderer so that he was able to stand calmly and listen to Judge Sanderson's sentence of death was abandoned to-day by his counsel and his few remaining friends. They read the handwriting on the wall in the action of Governor Foss, who, although absolutely opposing the infliction of the death penalty, failed to urge the executive council to extend clemency to Silas N. Phelps, who will be executed next week for the murder of Mrs. Phelps.

Foss failed to act only after he had privately canvassed the nine men of the council and found that several believed in enforcing the law as long as it remains on the statute books.

The appeal to the Governor to act will be made by Attorneys Morse and Lee, Richeson's counsel, but they admit to-day they have no hope. The sentiment against the minister is too strong. Thousands of letters have been received by the Governor and the council demanding that the punishment the law has fitted to the crime be meted out.

Richeson will not be told there is no hope until after he is removed to gloomy, old Charlestown jail, ten days before May 19th, the date set for the execution. To do so would mean another breakdown. It was probably fear of the death chair that forced the confession.

We wish to call your attention to the fact that most infectious diseases such as whooping cough, diptheria and scarlet fever are contracted when the child has a cold. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will quickly cure a cold and greatly lessen the danger of contracting these diseases. The remedy is famous for its cures of colds. It contains no opium or other narcotic and may be given to a child with implicit confidence. Sold by all dealers.

HOCKEY

Last night the Peterborough Juniors journeyed to Port Hope and again came home victors.

The score at full time was 4—4, showing how closely contested the game was played. During the 15 minutes overtime, the Pets scored 4 goals, winning the game by a score of 8—4.

WEDDING BELLS

Fitzpatrick—O'Leary.

A very pretty church wedding was solemnized in St. Paul's R.C. church when Miss Francis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Fitzpatrick, of Asphodel, and one of the most popular young ladies of that district, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Maurice O'Leary of Indian River. The bride, who was given away by her father, was charmingly gowned in a beautiful tailored costume of King's Blue broadcloth, and black picture hat with willow plumes. She also wore a set of black Persian lamb, the gift of the groom. The bridesmaid in attendance was her cousin, Miss Theresa Hurley, of Peterborough, who was also tastefully and becomingly attired in a navy tailored suit and a black hat of hatter's plush, trimmed with a large willow plume and carried a shower bouquet, the gift of the groom. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Joseph O'Leary, of St. Michael's College, Toronto.

High mass was sung by Rev. Michael O'Leary of Bracebridge, brother of the groom and present in the sanctuary were: Rev. P. J. O'Leary, and Rev. P. Kelly, pastor of St. Paul's.

At the conclusion of the wedding ceremony the bridal party drove to the residence of the bride's father, where a sumptuous wedding dejeuner was given to the large number of assembled guests. The toast to the bride was proposed by P. J. O'Leary and the groom made a very appropriate reply. Other toasts were proposed and replied to by Rev. M. O'Leary, Rev. P. Kelly, the bride's father, Dr. Holdship, and several other gentlemen.

The large number of many costly gifts showed the high esteem in which the bride was held by her many friends and acquaintances.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Rev. P. J. O'Leary and Rev. M. O'Leary, of Bracebridge, brothers of the groom, Miss Mary O'Leary, sister of Montreal, Dr. and Mrs. Holdship, of Montreal, Misses Cassie And Theresa Hurley, Mrs. Mona O'Shea, Mr. D. Lynch, Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. John O'Shea, of Campbellford.

The happy couple will reside at Indian River, where the groom has been one of the most popular bachelors. After the ceremony and bridal festivities, Mr. W. J. Lendrum of Peterborough took an excellent photograph of the wedding party.

TRADE ALLIANCE BETWEEN ENGLISH-SPEAKING PEOPLES

AIMED AT JAPAN AND GERMANY —PROPOSES THAT RECIPROCITY PACT BE ENLARGED.

Newfoundland Lumber King Is In New York, Backed by Public Men of Britain and America, Advocating the Plan.

New York, Jan. 18.—Harry J. Crowe, Newfoundland's "Lumber King," is in New York to stimulate interest in what he calls a "larger reciprocity pact," which shall include not only the United States and Canada, but the entire British Empire.

Mr. Crowe bears letters from public men both in England and America favoring the plan. In a statement of his purpose, he says:

"The verdict of the Canadians in connection with President Taft's proposed reciprocity pact implied a strong desire to give the Mother Country a preference over all other nations, however, tempting or alluring their offers may be.

"It would therefore seem wise for the United States, while the door is open, to enter into a larger reciprocity pact, embracing all the English-speaking peoples—Great Britain and all her colonies—instead of Canada alone, and the United States.

"The alliance would be principally against such countries as Germany and Japan."

REFORESTRY TO NOW PROCEED

Dean Fernow Will Proceed With an Important Work

It will be gratifying to the people of this county and district to learn that Dean Fernow, the eminent forestry expert, now in attendance at the Conservation Commission in Ottawa, has decided by permission of and under the instruction of the commission to begin his great reclamation and reforestry scheme with Peterborough in Galway and Harvey, the beginning will be made this spring. It is very gratifying that the tour arranged last autumn by Mr. Burnham, M.P., who accompanied the professor, has had already good results.

BROKE HER CHAINS.
She Wore Them for 30 Years But is Now a Free Woman.

A venerable lady over in Iowa says that she was a regular coffee drinker for 30 years, and although convinced that the habit was the cause of her increasing nervousness, she was loath to give it up. Tea contains the same drug—caffeine—found in coffee.)

"I became so nervous," she says, "that when I had callers it would excite my nerves so that I would sit and cry for an hour or more after they had gone. I could not even go up town to do a little shopping with any comfort, and I would often get all ready and then take off my hat and stay at home and have a crying spell.

"I began drinking Postum about a year ago, giving up coffee entirely. From the beginning my health showed improvement and soon I became hearty and strong, free from bodily discomfort, with a tranquil spirit, and so remain to this day. THE ELECTION DEPOSIT.

There is a good deal to be said in favor of the bill introduced into the House of Commons by J. H. Burnham, M. P. for West Peterborough, which proposes to abolish the deposit of $200 now required by a candidate for the House of Commons, says the Ottawa Free Press. The deposit has disappeared from provincial election contests, and no great evil appears to have been done to the body politic It may be true that the duties of a member of the House of Commons are more responsible than those belonging to a member of any of the Legislative Assemblies, but the difference is not so striking as to be worth $200.

On the other hand, there are so many anomalies in the present Dominion Elections act that it may be much better to undertake the revision of the act in a deliberate manner rather than by piecemeal instalments.

One reform which cannot be long delayed is that involved in the disparity of representation. Why, for instance, should the county of Soulanges, with a voting strength of 1,831 be biven one member, whilst dozens of other constituencies, wish five and six times that voting strength, are also given only one member? We are rapidly coming to the point where we will have to give some serious consideration to the question of proportional representation (which means real representation, according to voting value), and it is hoped that Hon. F. D. Monk, who was so earnest an advocate of the reform when in Opposition, will, now that he is in power, endeavor to impress the need for the reform upon his colleagues as earnestly as he did upon the Laurier Government.

Meanwhile, as there is little chance of any drastic amendment of the Dominion Elections act this session, Mr. Burnham's bill will probably go by the board; but it can be used as a source of education of the people, so that when the time is ripe for the reform, public opinion will be ripe for the change.

French Soothsayer Predicts Awful Time in 1912.

London, Jan. 15.—Mme. de Thebes, most celebrated of Parisian soothsayers, is pessimistic as to 1912, and predicts:

War, which will wreck Europe and other continents as well.
Conspiracies.
Assassinations.
Total ruin of Paris.
Downfall of the German Emperor.
Riots.
Epidemics.
Evil destiny for England.
Fusilades and bloodsheds in Spain.
Tears and misery elsewhere.

Zadkiel's almanac and book of prophecy foreshadows worries for the Kaiser, Czar, and King of Spain. As far as Great Britain is concerned, the sixpenny prophet states that the spring will be marked by political tumult and a serious risk of foreign warfare, consequent upon the breaking of a treaty, binding upon Great Britain, by a foreign power. However, it will all end happily, because King George's horoscope is stronger and more fortunate than that of any other living monarch.

GIRL ARRIVED HOME AT TWELVE O'CLOCK, AND HER LOVER STAYED FOR NIGHT.

Pair Went Down Stairs—Bailey Said He Found Her With Cup in Hand—Denied She Had Taken Anything.

Uxbridge, Jan. 17.—The inquest into the death of Evelyn Baker, the 23 year old school teacher, who is supposed to have committed suicide by taking strychnine, was held at the home of her father, Elias Baker, one mile east of Sandfield. Coroner Mellow, of Port Perry presided.

Crown Attorney Farewell represented the Crown, and H. P. Cook was present in the interests of Ed. Bailey V.S., of Uxbridge, a friend of the dead girl.

Only two witnesses were examined Miss Baker's parents—and their stories were substantially the same. The daughter had left home at 12.45 on Friday to take the mixed train to Uxbridge, ostensibly to do some shopping. She did not return until Saturday night, and was accompanied by Mr. Bailey, who drover her from Uxbridge. The mother called to the daughter on her arrival and reproved her for being out so late, to which the girl replied: "I won't be here long," or "I won't bother you long."

The mother thought she referred to her intention to leave shortly for Hamilton, to take a course at a business college. Evelyn seemed to be in her usual cheerful spirits, and prepared a lunch for her father, brother, and Mr. Bailey.

BOTH WENT DOWN STAIRS.

Bailey went later to a room of Stanley Baker, Evelyn's brother, to remain for the night, and Evelyn went to her room. A few minutes later she descended to the kitchen, and Mr. Bailey followed her down. He discovered the girl with a cup in her hand and at once asked her: "Haveyou been taking anything Evelyn?" to which she replied: "No, Ed. I have not." They returned to their rooms, and a few minutes later Miss Baker was heard to groan several times and then cry out with pain twice calling, "Mother I am dying." The household was aroused and rushed to her room, to find her in convulsions. In reply to the mother's "What's the matter with her?" Bailey replied that it was poison. Dr. Mellow of Sandfield was sent for but she died in a few minutes after his arrival, without making any statement.

Mr. Bailey, the parents said, had been keeping company with their daughter for a year, and stayed at their home two or three times a month over night. After the girl's death, the mother asked Bailey if there had been a quarrel, to which he replied "No, Mrs. Baker, If I was dying, there was no quarrel."

The father said his daughter had told him three months ago that Bailey thought more of her than any other girl, and that she thought enough of him to marry him.

In answer to a juror, Mrs. Baker said n opoison of any kind was kept in the house, and they had been unable to find any trace of Evelyn having purchased any anywhere.

BAKER WAS TOO ILL.

It was intended to call Stanley Baker, to whom his sister was much attached, but he was too ill from grief to be present.

Mr. Bailey arrived after the proceedings were over, but he, as well as Stanley Baker, will be called when the inquest is resumed on February 5th in the hotel at Saintfield.

In the meantime the stomach of the deceased will be sent to Prof. Ellis, analyst at Toronto.

GUERIN, OTONABEE.

Mr. John Lonergan has finished the cement blocks for his house and intends having it completed in 1914. The Architect J. P. Collins.

Concrite Maurice Mead attended the Poultry Show at Peterborough last week, and carried off a number of prizes.

The many friends of Dr. John Hotchin Smith will be sorry to learn of his departure to the north country, where he intends exploring for gold root, which he intends using for medical purposes.

J. Guerin is wearing a smile that won't come off. It's a boy.

A very enjoyable evening was held at the home of R. Cornelius on Jan. 6th. The music was furnished by Messrs. A. Whible, E. Howley and D. O'Leary. The floor managers were D. Sullivan, and Wm. Doherty, our village blacksmith. Stephen Murphy carried off the prize for being the best buck and wing dancer, the tune being "Pop Goes the Weasel", which was fluted and fingered by D. O'Brien

The bachelors held their annual meeting last week at the club rooms at Judes Pines. Mr. Pugnacious Sullivan was made president, although he being ruled out of lodge No. 31 for bad behaviour and going west too much and neglecting his business. Mr. Sullivan is greatly indebted to Concrete Maurice for getting him enrolled. It was moved and seconded by Texas J. Clancy and Hotchin Smith that Injector O'Brien be elected vice-president. It was moved by Mammoth Casey that Concave F. O'Brien be made treasurer and seconded by Silent Joe Leahy. Wandering Willie Ryan's application was rejected on account of his boisterous laughter. Riverside Bill Heffernan was accepted on condition that he report weekly to the president. Huge John Callaghan was fined $11.65 for coming into the hall galloping, but John's money was refunded on condition that he would sing a song, and John cut loose with the following:

For every man under the sun,
There is a lady or there is none,
If there be one, seek her and find her
John says he will never mind her.

The president was highly pleased with John's decision and thinks he will be a life-long member. The meeting was then brought to a final, with a few words from the president. Any person wishing to become a member may apply at the rooms, or communicate with the president.

Mr. W. Hayes passed through this village going south, which indicates cold weather.

Messrs. F. Lonergan and John O'Toole payed the Graham Bros. horse stables a visit last week. Mr. O'Toole says they all lack a shade.

NICHOLLS' HOSPITAL MEETING.

Mr. Richard Hall Again Elected as Chairman of the Trust.

At the annual meeting of the Nicholls' Hospital Trust, Mr. Richard Hall was again elected chairman and Mr. W. H. Hill Hon. Secretary.

Committees were appointed as follows:

Supervisors—Messrs. Madill, Peck, McBain.

Finance—Messrs. Fair, McClelland, and Greer.

Property—Messrs. Aldridge, McCulloch and Kerr.

Visiting committees were appointed as was also a special building committee to consider certain additions and improvements to the hospital.

The statement of receipts and expenditure for the year ending Dec. 31, 1911, was read and adopted. The expenditures were $6,215.64.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

By C. Fredereck Hamilton

Copyright by Publishers Fee Press, Montreal

Since Canada is honoured in having a Prince of the blood Royal at the head of her constitution, and that the popular Duke who has already endeared himself to the democratic mind of this Dominion it is well that we should know something of the man who has by hard work and ability and a great deal of the tact that was pre-eminent in his brother the late King risen from rank to rank in his chosen profession until to day he holds the baton of a field marshall.

First, let us get an exact idea of the position in the Royal Family of the subject of this sketch. Prince Arthur William Patrick Albert, Duke of Connaught and Strathearn, is the brother of King George V, the brother-uncle of King Edward VII, and a son of Queen Victoria. In the family of the Great Queen he ranks as the seventh child and third son. Alike in the choice of the three of his baptismal names and in the selection of his title there was shown a desire to compliment Ireland. The story has it that on the occasion of Queen Victoria's visit to Ireland in 1849, a woman in the crowd called out "Name your next boy Patrick, Your Majesty, and all Ireland will die for you." The Duke is exactly 62 years of age, having been born on May 1st, 1850.

The story of his life, as that of a working soldier, his career has been spent not at Court but in the steady practice of his profession. As a junior officer he was given experience in the cavalry, artillery and engineers, but his principal service was in the Rifle Brigade — the "Sweeps" as they are nicknamed from their dark uniforms. He served with his battalion in Canada in the Fenian Raid of 1870. In 1880, after 12 years of regimental service he became a general officer. He commanded brigades for three years; in 1882 he led the Guards Brigade to Egypt; was present at the battles of Mahsita and Tel-el-Kebir; and was mentioned in despatches. Then for three years he commanded a division in India. From 1886 to 1901 he held a series of high commands: Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Presidency, 1890 to 1893; Southern District, 1890 to 1893; Aldershot, 1893 to 1898; Ireland, 1900 to 1904. In 1904 he became Inspector General and President of the Board of Selection; he held this the highest post now in the Army, till 1907 and then vacated it, being succeeded by Sir John French. The post of Commander-in-Chief in the Mediterranean was then created, and the Duke was appointed to it; he held it until some months ago and then resigned, on the ground that it did not give sufficient employment; in plain language, that he did not mean to enjoy a sinecure.

It will be noticed that the Duke's whole service has been, in military parlance, "with troops"; he has done his soldiering in actual touch with men, not at a desk. It also will be noticed that he spent seven years in India. He has been in the Far East; in 1905-6 he visited South Africa. He spent some time in Canada in 1870 and in 1890 he crossed the Dominion on his way home from India.

These are the bones of his career. West of the flesh and blood — the personality of the Royal Prince who has steadily worked at his profession for 42 years, has lived with his soldiers wherever his command has been, and has renounced the pritilege by no means inconsiderable, of being a German Reigning Prince to remain a Briton? For it will be remembered that in 1899 when he fell heir to the Duchy of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, he preferred to remain an Englishman.

A quiet attention to duty is the principal note. He has, indeed, muzzled his own business so steadfastly that there is little gossip current about him. Some few facts emerge from the record of his service. For example, we may take his work during the most important period of his life, his tenure of the post of Inspector General. One of the most important duties which he had to perform in this connection was to preside over the Board which selected officers to the higher commands. It will be difficult to imagine a more delicate or difficult task; and it is known that in discharging it, the Duke displayed great impartiality and fairness. His presence on the Board in the opinion of the foremost English critic of military affairs, offered a security that the interests of all concerned would be fully considered even if they could not all be satisfied in the fillings of the higher appointments.

Again there is the fact that the Duke and Duchess during their four years stay in Ireland won great popularity. Their work there embraced much of that multifarious gracious activity which is expected

ROBERT J. C. STEAD

Canadian Poet

To reverse the usual order of giving pen descriptions of Canadians who have made good, we have induced Robert Stead, who has done so much to bring the Prairies to the East in song and verse, to tell his own story, not that it was a easy task for Robert is modesty personified as the opening remark "My career has been quite commonplace" illustrates. But on pressure being brought to bear he opened out.

"Very well, then, but I will simply mention a few of the mile posts. I was born on my father's farm in Lanark county, Ont., Sept. 4, 1880. My parents were both Canadian born, my father of English, my mother of Scotch descent.

"In 1882, when I was but a year and a half 'young' the family moved to Manitoba, and my father homesteaded a few miles from where the town of Cartwright now stands.

"When he located there no sign of human habitation was visible in any direction, and the nearest railway connection was Emerson, 120 miles away. I was the youngest child and only son of the family, and during my early years was left pretty much to myself to find what association I would with the 'bald-headed prairie.'

"I received a country school education at Chesterville school house, which closed for four months in the winter, but when I was twelve the family moved into Cartwright and I had two years steady schooling.

"This was supplemented later by a business course in Winnipeg, but I have not had the advantage of a university education. My father died when I was seventeen and left me with other things to think about.

"In business my experiences have been somewhat varied, as I turned a hand to whatever was in sight. I have been moderately successful in a material way, and my experience has given me an insight into general western conditions which I think I can capitalize in literature.

"At 15 I was working on a farm for $15 a month; at 16, clerking in a general store and post office at $16 a month; at 17, managing a small retail lumber yard and in the winter 'engineer' in a grain elevator.

"At nineteen I established 'The Review' at Cartwright, which I published for eleven years. During that period I was publisher of the 'Crystal City Courier,' also, for about a year.

"I then deserted journalism and went into the automobile business at High River, Alta about two years ago. I don't know what the next move will be, but it is pretty near due now.

"You will be interested to know that my first published poem appeared in the Weekly Tribune when I was thirteen years old, and a friendly letter from Mr. Richardson encouraged me to further efforts along that line."

By the time he was 21 Mr. Stead had a number of short stories accepted by different magazines. Three years ago he published "The Empire Builders," a volume of poems mostly of a patriotic nature.

This was well received and is now in its fourth edition. Among others who commended the work and did much to insure its success was the late governor-general, Earl Grey, who took quite an interest in it and wrote Mr Stead a number of very kind letters.

Last summer he published "Prairie Born," and lately a little volume under the title, "Songs of the Prairie," in miniature form. It has been well received, in fact, some of the western cities report it as their biggest seller last month.

A special reception was held at the residence of Mrs. H. P. Morgan, of Park street on Tuesday afternoon, in honor of Mrs. E. W. Cox, of Edmonton, who with her husband is here on a visit with friends. A large number of friends took the opportunity of meeting Mrs. Cox once again, ere she returns to Edmonton.

ENGLISHMEN AND OLYMPIC GAMES.

To win the Olympic games seems to be the ruling passion of a large number of Englishmen, just now. The wave of patriotism is sweeping in England. The cry for Olympic material has reached national proportions.

Englishmen have always been wonderful distance runners. They have been weak at the sprints and in some of the field events.

The effort now being made is to find men capable of holding the old country on the field and in the sprints in the hope that the distance runners

HARRY GREEN

will bring home the bacon.

Two of the best amateurs in England are Harry Green, a marathon runner of ability and W. Scott, England's 10-mile champion.

LACROSSE ON SKATES

A new game is being introduced in Regina this winter, lacrosse on skates. It has been tried and accepted by the sportsmen in Eastern Ontario, and will be given a trial. It is played by seven-man teams, who line up as they would on a lacrosse green. A soft ball is used and players are not allowed to raise their sticks above the shoulders. An offender against this is sent to the penalty box. This rule makes underhand passing and shooting imperative.

The Rough Riders are instituting the game in Regina, and are ready to meet any team in town that would like to take a whirl at it. They organized at a meeting held in the Palmer House, when the following officers were elected:

Honorary president, A. W. McIvor; president, Geo. Harper; vice-president, C. N. Galvin; secretary, Chas. Wood; treasurer, A. A. Fisher; manager, Wm. Dogan.

The following players will be in the line-up: L. Arnold, A. Urquhart, F. Harper, H. Hall, W. Degan, J. Staples Barlow, D. Hopp and Jimmie McLaughlin.

VARIETY OF HOLES IN GOLF

The up-to-date golf architects generally agree nowadays that in the arrangement of courses that mean something there should be a complete variety of holes not only as to length, but in their character, the way in which they are bunkered, the kind of tee shot that is required at them, and last, but not least, the kind of approach. In every case the putting greens should be thoroughly well guarded.

It has also been claimed that the shorter the hole the smaller should be the green and the more closely it should be guarded, so that on this principle when in good play a long shot can reach the green which should be fairly large and open in order to give the player encouragement to which he is entitled.

In this subject, however, there must ever be difference of opinion. There are those who argue that it is wrong to say that a fairly long course is a sufficient test to select the best golfer out of a field of any fifty of one hundred competitors. In other words, no course can be a thorough test of the skill and nerve of the player which has not so closely guarded greens that on occasions there is but one, and that a most skillful shot, by which the long approach can get home.

FOOTBALL

How sports, once only followed in the British Empire, have become popular all over the world, is again illustrated by Association football. Its growth has been rapid and its popularity is by on means confined to the white race. Some of the native teams in the ramparts of Empire are capable of showing really good football, all of which is satisfactory. How other nations have taken to "soccer," rather curious home to one through Fulham having tried Hussein Hegazi as centre forward on Saturday, against Stockholm. He is an Egyptian, who showed capital form against English teams at Cairo before coming to England a few months ago. His play in England was closely watched, and he played very well for a first appearance in an important game.

WHO'S WHO IN CANADA

SIR ROBT. PERKS, BART.

Financier and Engineer

Capital combined with foresight and industrial confidence, coupled with untiring energy and zeal, are among the requirements and in having these Canada can thank her great men. They have developed and are still developing her resources and making the brand "Made in Canada" favorably known in the marts of the world. The position which the Dominion has assumed, not only as the foremost of the outlying sections of the British Empire but in the estimation of all civilized nations, is a tribute to her great men and a striking evidence that our opportunities have not been neglected.

And though Sir Robt. Perks is not a Canadian his interests lately have been largely in this country particularly with his Georgian Bay scheme. A man who has sufficient confidence in Canada as to offer to invest millions of dollars of his own and friends must see a large future for the country.

HON. ADAM BECK

Toronto.

Canada's water powers are greater than those of any other country in the world. How known or estimated flow development is about twenty-six million horse power, but it is certain that this is but a fraction of her water power asset.

So far the computation has been dependent upon somewhat unreliable statistics, but the energy displayed by the Conservation Commission has had beneficial results. This important body has stirred to action some indifferent provincial authorities, and there is now the prospect that by next Spring a complete table of waterpowers in the Dominion will be ready to place before the public, along with much valuable information relating thereto. It may be said in passing that the provincial governments for the most part have been negligent in the matter, and it is only where the federal government has control and responsibility that accurate information has up till the present time been available.

It is not the intention of the writer to convey the idea that all of the provinces have stupidly sat by and left the power question alone. There is the very notable exception of Ontario, where the Hydro-Electric Commission has done a wonderful work in developing cheap power for the people of that province. But none the less the province of Ontario has not gone to the trouble of accurately estimating the water powers of New Ontario or the great hinterland beyond.

The Hydro-Electric Commission, with which the name of the Hon. Adam Beck will always be associated, has an immense scheme under way to give the people of the whole province the cheapest possible light, heat and power that electricity can give. In general the proposal is that the power at Niagara will supply western and southwestern Ontario, from the rapids on the St. Lawrence will be derived the power for eastern Ontario from the vicinity of Ottawa will come the power for northeastern and central Ontario, while there are enough water powers in New Ontario to supply the whole of the north and the north central. Thus Ontario will have, unless it is interfered with, a complete network of transmission lines to supply every village.

Mr Beck who was born in Waterloo Ont. in 1857 is a successful business man as well as thorough sportsman and public man. He is member of many societies and orders.

Mr. Wm. Connell had one valuable horse killed and another severely injured by a G.T.R. train near Omemee.

MY LADY'S COLUMN.

A CARLIER MODEL

A fur scarf that is wrapped around the body and then hangs gracefully over the arms is one of the latest freaks of French feminineism. This confection is as charming as it is unusual. The model from the French modiste Carlier was of sealskin trimmed with white fox. The color and fabric scheme were carried out in the hat and muff.

The scarf was about three-quarters of a yard wide and long enough to enfold the body twice. In this way it forms a complete wrap. It has a band of white fox on one side and is lined with salmon pink satin. The muff is perfectly flat and has the fox on either end, in this way differing from the scarf.

The tall crown of the hat of this turn-of-the-century fur set, is of sealskin. The narrow brim where it turns up is touched with the white fox and on top of the high crown smartly was a bunch of Prince of Wales feathers. This is of salmon pink. This set could easily be copied in black velvet and swansdown. This combination would be pretty and inexpensive.

GOOD MANNERS

One does not require nowadays the ultra-politeness of our forefathers; it would appear almost stilted and unnatural. At the same time the modern maid and youth are apt to err in the opposite extreme. Lack of courtesy is rather a growing evil, though it is often only the result of ignorance, owing to the transgressor having led such a free and easy life and the importance of manners has been left unconsidered.

Casual Manners

The older generation frequently complains of the treatment of the younger, and the following examples are not uncommon:

Accepting an invitation and throwing it up at the last moment.

Agreeing to meet at a certain time and keeping the other person waiting.

Accepting hospitality, and not troubling to repay by any appreciative and entertaining manner.

Failing to write a line of thanks after a week-end visit—old-fashioned perhaps, but a courtesy no hostess despises.

MAY VISIT CANADA.

The King-Emperor and Queen-Empress have left India for England, having completed their important mission to the Indian Empire, how important and how successful, time alone will tell.

It is now announced that the King will visit Canada on the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway in 1913. If His Majesty does, this will be but another proof that King George has determined to be King of Greater Britain in very truth. Their Majesties will see many great material changes in Canada, compared with what the country was when they toured the Dominion several years ago. And with material progress there has been a deepening of national and imperial sentiment, and Canadians will welcome even more royally and enthusiastically the Kings Emperor and Queen-Empress.

THE NE TEMERE DECREE.

Toronto Star: Last Sunday the Ne Temere Decree was promulgated and defended in the Roman Catholic churches. We printed a brief report of the sermon delivered in the Cathedral, which, according to the reporter, was made to say that 'Protestants, although separated from 'the church were theoretically under 'its law: consequently their marri'ages would have to come under a 'law promulgated by the whole 'Church.' We quote this with diffidence as, later, the preacher is represented as apparently implying that Protestants had nothing to do with the Ne Temere matter. Still, we can see common standing ground for both assertions if we assume that the first represents the Roman Catholic point of view and the latter the Protestant The Roman Church is bound to regard Protestant marriages as invalid but the Protestant is bound to disregard that theory, and, from his own point of view, has nothing to say. Still, it would certainly concern Protestants very much to live among a people required to think so vilely of them, but that they do not really hold so hideous a position, even in the mind of a defender of the decree, is shown by his appeal to them to join in seeking to secure the sanctity of the marriage tie. But it is a very serious—we are inclined to say an intolerable—thing for a country if one couple going through a certain ceremony are married, and another couple, innocently, as to one or both, doing the same thing are, after years of married life, to be declared unmarried, and if scoundrels can thus commit the greatest possible of crimes against their own wives with the aid of the courts and of a church.

WOMAN WALKS 9000 MILES

A walk of 8,000 miles was recently be finished by Mrs. Stella Woolf, and her husband, Dwight H. Woolf, when they arrive at their home in Kansas City.

The trip started at San Antonio, Texas, more than thirteen months ago. The pair went first to Atlanta and then to New York, where they turned their steps toward home. Previously they made two other walking tours and have covered a total of 10,300 miles on foot.

"When you get into a rut walk out," said Woolf today, as he explained that he took up walking in order to get the outdoor life which his physician two years ago said he must have. At that time Woolf was a music dealer. His health was poor and the doctor told him he would have to get out in the open or die.

"Let's walk," suggested his wife, "for I'm going along."

With them went the family pets, a faithful pony, which has drawn a cart carrying their baggage on the long marches, and a dog.

The Woolfs have eaten and slept in the open. Since leaving San Antonio they have spent only twenty-one nights out of 411 with a roof over their heads.

BADGE FOR COMPETITORS AND OFFICIALS AT STOCKHOLM OLYMPIC GAMES.

BOB FITZ THE MOST REMARKABLE FIGHTER

Who was the most remarkable heavy-weight fighter who ever put up his gloves under the Marquis of Queensbury rules? Answer: Bob Fitzimmons. The freckled faced Cornishman, maker of horse shoes and bolts, like a few of his kind, was the most extraordinary fighter.

Fitz was thirty-five years old when he won the championship of the world from Jim Corbett at Carson City. He was thirty-seven when he lost the title to Jeffries and thirty nine when beaten by the Californian the second time.

Age is a big factor in this story. It serves to show that the ruddy product of the antipodes was more extraordinary than Jeffries, who up to the recent disaster at Reno was generally conceded the distinction. Likewise it proves that care of a body can combat the advance of years to a certain extent.

Jeffries was twenty-four years old when he beat Fitzimmons at Coney Island. He was thirty-five years, two months and nineteen days old when Johnson whipped him in the "battle of the century," July 4. At thirty five he is an old man. At this same age Fitz was in the zenith of his great power.

After the two knockouts which Jeffries imposed on him, the Cornishman went out and beat all candidates except Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, with whom he drew, until the total period of his existence totalled forty-three years. What other fighter in the history of pugilism can claim such a record? None.

Fitzimmons is to be considered all the more extraordinary because of the weight handicap which he suffered after he defeated all the middleweights. Never scaling more than 170 pounds he had all the punching force of men of fifty pounds more left.

At twenty-nine Jeff retired from the ring and rested on his reputation. He did much hunting and fishing, but idleness was his principal occupation for six years. And when he was induced to train and knock the packing out of Johnson, his paunch bulged out like a submarine boat. He reduced to his old weight after much effort. In training he looked as good as when he had made mince meat of Jack Munro, as his farewell fight. But Ed Dunkhorst could have put up a better battle at Reno than the "mighty" Jeff.

BASEBALL SALARIES WONT BE CUT.

The fact that the minor baseball leagues intend to reduce salaries of players in future has alarmed members of the profession who firmly believe that in the course of time the magnates of the majors, the National and the American, will decide to adopt a similar policy. Alarmists point to present conditions in organized baseball as favorable. From the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico there isn't an outlaw circuit. The players, big and little, are at the mercy of organized major and minor leagues wherever professional baseball thrives upon gate receipts. If the major league magnates wanted to apply the screws and chop salaries the players would be compelled to submit or retire from the diamond. They could get no baseball employment anywhere else unless with semi-professional teams paying nominal salaries for one or two games a week.

Cause of Rheumatism

Many physicians believe that rheumatism is the result of over-feeding, followed by putrefactive changes in the foodstuffs in the alimentary canal; that the action of certain bacteria produces specific toxic (poison) substances which, when introduced into the blood, cause a deviation from the normal oxidation process, thus causing the condition that is designated rheumatic. In the majority of instances it is probably due to eating too much of the vegetable class of foods; in other cases it is the result of eating too much meat

OFFERS THE SMALL INVESTOR THE BEST OPPORTUNITY AT THE PRESENT TIME OF A RAPID ADVANCE IN PRICES

Greater activity is being displayed at this point in railroad construction, than at any other point in the whole of the North West. When construction is completed, railroads will be operating in nine directions from the town, which will become one of the greatest divisional points in the whole of Canada. Persons buying at present prices can look for a quick turnover at double what they paid. We are offering lots in our sub-division of "RIVER VIEW HEIGHTS" at the following low prices: $100 each for inside lots, and $125 for corners, and on the very easy terms of $10 cash and the balance in payments of $5 per month. No interest on balance if deferred payments are made regularly.

KINGS IN TRADE

Most of the Monarchs of Europe Have Made Fortunes by Shrewd Speculation in Business Undertakings

Monarchs are not above making money. And perhaps the Kaiser should be given first place among reigning Sovereigns for shrewd commercialism. He makes a strong point of cultivating the friendship of financial magnates, not only in his own, but in other countries as well.

The Kaiser has some very large holdings in the Hamburg-American Steamship Line. He is extensively interested in the diamond-mine enterprises of German West Africa. In connection with the vast forests comprised in the Crown domains and on his private estates, he carries on a large lumber business. His horse-breeding establishment in Western Prussia brings him in a handsome revenue. He is the principal stakeholder in the municipal lager-beer brewery at Hanover. And he carries on an extensive manufactory of pottery on his private estates at Cadinen.

GATHERING GOLDEN GRAIN

Gustavius, the present ruler of the Swedes, is a total abstainer. On coming to the throne, he disposed of his late father's extensive brewing interests. But he still retains many other profitable investments. He has money in mills and mines, and he seldom neglects to extol the virtues of the Grand Hotel at Stockholm, in which he is by far the largest shareholder.

He is a successful speculative builder. In this way: When property in the slum districts of the Swedish metropolis is going dirt cheap, along comes the King and buys it. And soon on the sites of the dilapidated buildings rise handsome houses and thoroughfares which increase the value of the property many times over.

Few monarchs have shown themselves cleverer managers of a wife's property than the King of Denmark. By shrewd investments he has already multiplied its value many times. In a large number of his enterprises he is associated with his Royal brother, King George of Greece, who possesses an immense fortune, which he owes in a great measure to undertaking certain operations in American grain about thirty-five years ago, which the closing of Odessa and other Southern Russian seaports to the export of grain, owing to the war with Turkey, rendered extremely profitable.

From the sale of beer, the Prince Regent of Bavaria draws immense sums. In Munich are grim, dirty taverns in which the Royal Court beer has been sold for the last three centuries. You never see a waiter or waitress. You must attend to your own wants, whether you be prince or peasant. Indeed, when the Kaiser visited Munich, he and the Bavarian Princes took their places in line, and awaited their turn for a stone mug, which they themselves rinsed out.

The Invitation.

If the world were any nearer
To the heaven we would win,
The angels might confuse us
By saying, "Please walk in."
—Atlanta Constitution.

So It Must Be.

"There goes Mayski, who invented the new airship, with his wife. Is it really dirigible, as he says, do you think?"

"Oh, yes. He can fly it wherever she likes."—Fliegende Blatter.

In Court.

While the innocent we bring,
As unto guilt the latter cun
The force hasn't done a thing,
But just the same it lets him up

Gratitude

A grateful manner, considered even from a sordid point of view, pays. Would you not be inclined to repeat an invitation to the grateful guest who laid stress upon heartful thanks for the pleasure received?

Certainly it is agreeable to be amply thanked, instead of feeling happy entertainment is accepted as a matter of course.

Ladies' Golf Attire

A golf kit is an essential in the wardrobe of most of the society women who are now out on holiday. The Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia who have been seen doing a round on the links at Ballater in pouring rain, are two Royal ladies who play a good game, and Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein is another Royal enthusiast for golf. The Duchess of Marlborough, Mrs. Asquith and the Premier's daughters are some of the ladies known on the links of Gullane and North Berwick. A short skirt of Harris tweed or serge with tailor-made shirt of soft silk or a fine wool, low-heeled shoes, and a jacket of knitted wool, with either a cap to match or the smallest and simplest of turbans in suede — such is the outfit of the woman golfer who is in earnest. There is greater variety than ever this year in the matter of golf coats.

Pineapple Cream

Pineapple cream is a delicious sweet for the hot weather. Required one tin of pineapple, half an ounce of isinglass, two ounces of lump sugar, and half a pint of thick cream. Put half a pint of the syrup or the pineapple into a saucepan (if there is not that quantity make it up with water.) Chop up two-thirds of the pineapple, being careful to remove any skin. Add the chopped-up pineapple and sugar for eight minutes; then add the isinglass that has been previously dissolved in a little hot water; allow all to boil gently for five minutes, and pour the mixture into a bowl. When it is cold and beginning to set whisk in the cream and beat all together until it is a thick creamy mass. Pour into a wet mould, and leave it aside until set and quite firm. Turn on to a glass dish and arrange the remainder of the pineapple around it cut into small chunks.

The Rain Complexion Cure

There are two beautiful women, well known in Irish society, says a lady writer, who frankly declare "the rain cure" to be the sole cause of their exquisite skins being always in perfect condition. Every woman can take the "rain cure" if she wills. Put on a pair of strong shoes, a waterproof, a simple tweed hat, but no veil, and let the fresh soft water reach the skin. Then, on coming in, rub briskly with a soft towel, sit down in a warm but not heated room, and rest all the facial muscles, and you will be astonished at the result. Of course, damp clothing will have been removed previous to this.

Some of the new parasols are edged with narrow ostrich feathers, and have a big bow of ribbon on the handle, also edged with feathers.

For a satin slipper nothing is so effective as a small round buckle of rhinestone through which is inserted a satin or velvet ribbon.

Curls and puffs are used in profusion and quantities of false hair are still absolutely necessary. Infantile styles prevail — quite babyish, in fact.

To Remove Paint Spots

To remove paint from clothing, mix equal parts of turpentine and ammonia in a saucer and apply the solution to the paint with a piece of cloth of the same color as the garment. Rub gently until the paint is removed, then sponge with warm water and a little white soap.

I Am Willing To Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10.00 Worth of Medicine

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this medicine, and anyone suffering from these diseases can get a box of it absolutely free. All that is necessary is to send me your address.

I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and pay me if cured. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the Uric Acid sufferers of the world, so I can show them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, but would I accept it now or later if you sent it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying calls to urinate. But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to listen to anyone thereafter. Happily, I am in a position now to demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to spend any money to find out; I don't ask them to believe me, nor even to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my own cost. That is surely fair.

To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars, which will be used to compound my medicine. Much of it is ready now to be sent out, all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there be thousands of them. And anyone who needs it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have a disease for which this medicine is intended, I ask you to send me some of your leading symptoms. If you have any of the symptoms in the list printed here you need my medicine and if you will write me I will gladly send you a box of it free with full directions for your use. Look the symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, then write me about as follows: "Dear Dr., I notice symptoms number"—here put down the numbers, give your age, full address, and send it to me. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 467 Franklin Building, Toronto, Can.

The ten thousand dollars I am spending for the compounding of my medicine is only a part of the money I am devoting to this cause, for the package of medicine I send you will be fully prepaid at my expense. From any standpoint you view it, YOU incur no expense or obligation. Just tell others who you know are suffering who sent you the medicine that cured you.

I am promising to give away ten thousand dollars' worth of medicine, and I will do that. I am promising to send any sufferer who writes me a box of this medicine and full directions free of charge, and I will do that.

DR. T. FRANK LYNOTT
who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

I can say further that this medicine has been vouched for according to law as complying in every detail with all requirements. It will stop rheumatism, it will stop pain and backache, it will stop too frequent desire to urinate; it will heal, soothe and strengthen. You will be better in every way for having taken it. There is not an ingredient that can injure; not one but will benefit. All that I ask is that you use it yourself so that you may be personally convinced.

Owing to the large number of requests, I have had ten thousand more copies of my medical book printed. This book is new and up to date and contains complete descriptions, symptoms, causes, effects and cures of kidney, bladder and rheumatic diseases. All who write for the free medicine will be sent a copy of this grand illustrated medical book—the largest ever written on these diseases for free and general distribution.

If you need medicine such as I have, if you are anxious to be cured and don't want to spend any money LOOKING for cures, write me. Read the symptoms over and let me hear from you today.

These Are the Symptoms:

1—Pain in the back.
2—Too frequent desire to urinate.
3—Burning or obstruction of urine.
4—Pain or soreness in the bladder.
5—Prostate troubles.
6—Gas or pain in the stomach.
7—General debility, weak nerves, dizziness
8—Pain or soreness under the left rib.
9—Swelling in any part of the body.
10—Constipation or liver trouble.
11—Palpitations or pain under the heart.
12—Pain in the hip joint.
13—Pain in the neck or head.
14—Pain or soreness in the kidneys.
15—Pain or swelling of the joints.
16—Pain or swelling of the muscles.
17—Pain and sores in the nerves.
18—Acute or chronic rheumatism.

NEW BATHING SUITS

New York.—Skirts on bathing suits are only in the way thinks Miss Dorothy Taylor, the young New York society woman whose abbreviated costume on European bathing beaches last summer shocked many American visitors. Trousers or trunks are less clumsy. Only prudish, silly people, with naughty minds see the harm in a skirtless bathing suit," she says, "when I go swimming, I go into the water, and I wear silk trousers, or trunks and a long silk jersey, which reaches almost to my knees."

BUILDERS' PROFITS with Bankers' Security

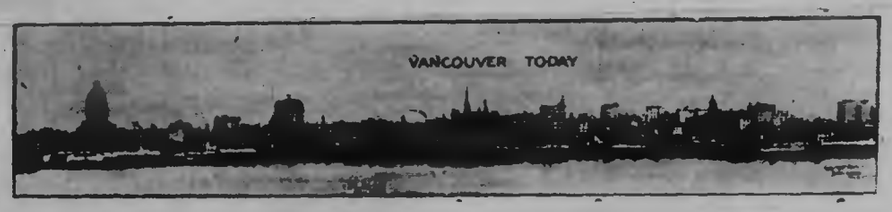
100,000 SHARES AT $1.00

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has been organized recently with an authorized capital of $500,000, to do a general building, real estate, and insurance business, and is actively engaged in Vancouver and Victoria—two most promising fields. The profits from building houses for cash and selling on instalments is well known, and will be one of the principal channels from which profits will be derived. BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS. LIMITED, has its own building department and architect, and does its own construction. In addition to building houses, BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS. LIMITED, has its real estate department, where it carries on a general real estate business, discounting agreements of Sale, subdividing and transacting a general insurance business.

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS LIMITED, is a new concern, having been in business less than two months in Vancouver, but is becoming well known as the Company without any promotion shares and with a strong board of directors, made up of well known Vancouver and Victoria business men.

Shareholders may conservatively look for a 10 per cent dividend the first year, increasing thereafter and a steady advance in the value of their shares caused by the substantial reserve it will always be the policy of the directors to build up.

Companies run on similar lines, notably the Los Angeles Investment Company' and "Home Builders," both of Los Angeles, have proved phenominally successful, the former, which has been in business some sixteen years, having accumulated assets of over $6,000,000, and paying 28 per cent. dividends; and the latter, which started business three years ago. with only $1.250 capital, has assets to-day of over $1,089,000, a surplus of over $308,000, is paying 17 per cent. dividends, and its $1.00 shares are selling at $2.30.



FIRST ISSUE OF SHARES

100,000 Thousand Shares are offered at $1.00 per share, 44,500 of which have been subscribed. These shares may be purchased for cash or on the instalment plan. $10.00 cash and $5.00 per month handles 100 shares. Mail your subscription To-day.

WHAT CANADIANS ARE DOING

LORD STRATHCONA
Canada

A few of the men whose life story is practically the history of Canada's rise to prominence are still living and many have gone to their reward. Of the former class Lord Strathcona stands out conspicuously. His is a remarkable story. From an obscure start in one of the most distant and uninviting posts on the North American continent Donald Smith hewed his way along until to day he occupies one of the most distinguished and honorable positions in the gift of his adopted country — Canada's High Commissioner at the seat of Empire. When the full story of his achievement comes to be written, which in the natural course of events cannot be many years removed now, it will constitute a volume of intense and thrilling interest, a striking demonstration of the adage that truth is stranger than fiction. How he rose from a position of penury and privation to be a peer of the realm, with the wealth of a Croesus, combined with the philanthropy of a judicious but extremely generous nature, affords material for a narrative of intense human interest. His early association with the Hudson Bay Company, his part in the stirring events of the troubles in the northwest of a quarter of a century ago, his connection with Canada's great railway enterprises and numerous industrial ventures, and his parliamentary associations will each furnish chapters refreshing and [illegible] in their attractiveness.

LORD STRATHCONA

Lord Strathcona, whose full titles are Baron Strathcona and Mount Royal, G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., F.R.S., LL.D., P.C., D.L., High Commissioner for Canada, was born in Scotland in 1820 and first came to Canada in his teens to enter the Hudson Bay Company's employ. His Lordship was married in 1886 and his only child (Hon. M. C. Howard) is heir to the title.

ways ready to take advantage of every wind that will help the different causes he espouses. The son of the Hon. Nemese Garneau and grandson of Dr. J. B. Garneau, Quebec's historian, Leon Garneau has the right blood in his veins and as he is possessed of a vitality that sometimes surprises his friends and a lucidity born of his experience as a lawyer Canada can look forward with confidence to her clever son.

"Silver Greyhounds."

EVIDENTLY A MISTAKE

'Twas at the skating rink, and the young man was but a beginner. Wherefore he lost his balance!

He made a wild effort to grab anything in the way of support. And, as it happened, the nearest thing was a fashionably-dressed lady, also on skates. She promptly turned on him.

"You contemptible cur!" she shrieked. "Do you think I am a lamp post, or a piece of furniture, or what? You ought not to be allowed in here, you clumsy lout! What right have you to tear other people's clothes to rags, and claw them in that mad way? You are not fit——"

The young man had now recovered his composure.

"Pardon me, madam," he remarked, "but haven't you made a mistake?"

"A mistake!" gasped the lady. "What do you mean?"

"Simply this, madam," came the calm retort, "I am not your husband!"

"Accused of begging!" exclaimed a magistrate. "Why, you are the very man who was begging at my door yesterday!"

"Yes," assented the vagrant, with a sneer, "and you didn't give me anything."

"Well, I'll give you something now. Fourteen days!"

CALGARY FOOTBALL.

The energy of Calgary is becoming almost phenomenal. The desire of their football team to play for the Dominion honors seems quite natural although a little late to be perfectly seasonable. But the activity in professional baseball circles is remarkable, considering that spring is so far away. It is reported that the manager of the Calgary Bronchos is signing up players right and left, one of the "finds" being a youth of nineteen named Brunstine, who, says a Calgary writer, "has all the earmarks of a veteran."

BASEBALL IN CHINA

They have a baseball season in China as well as a revolution, and the ball-players finished their job first. The teams were recruited in Shanghai and last season the league consisted of four clubs. Next year, it is to be doubled in size. According to reports from Shanghai, baseball is making great headway in China — and why should it not, where there are so many fans?

A NEW CLAIMANT

Danny McKetrick, clever manager of Joe Jeanette, claims the world's championship, basing his stand on the statement of Jack Johnson that he is through with the ring. Joe should share the honor with Langford and McVey, with Johnson out of the way, but the champion has not retired and the chances are he will be seen in action again before another six months passes. In the meantime it might be well for Jeannette to settle the question of supremacy with Langford and McVey.

Highest on Earth

The Loa Bridge in the Chima Andes is the highest bridge in the world. This wonderful construction is four hundred feet high, eight hundred feet long, and stands ten thousand feet above sea-level. It crosses a great ravine some three hundred miles from Antofagasta, on the railway running from that port into Bolivia. This line is also of interest from the fact that it is the highest railway in the world, climbing at one point up to over sixteen thousand six hundred feet above sea level.

REASONABLE REQUEST

It was a cold night. The traveller inquired at the only hotel in the little town if he could be lodged for the night, but was informed that it was full up.

"But you must give me some sort of accommodation," said the stranger. "Surely you don't want me to sleep under the starry but chilly skies?"

"Well," said the proprietor, "the best we can do is to make you up a bed in the passage and curtain it off for you." And so it was arranged.

In the dark watches of the night the traveller awoke. A freezing draught chilled him, and the sheet which had been hung up as a partition was blowing merrily in the breeze. The traveller rose and shouted for the landlord.

"What is it?" queried a voice from the stairhead.

"Please," said the stranger, timidly, "may I have a paper of pins to look my bedroom door with?"

THE SILENT JAP

The Japanese, alone of all races, utter no sound when engaged in combat. From this national trait springs the curious regulation which prevents Japanese regiments from possessing bands bugles, or drums. Orders are given verbally, or by means of signals with the hand or sword. No trumpets sound the charge, no drums beat the tattoo, and no bugles wake the troops with their ringing calls.

A FAIR OFFER

It was a political meeting in the East during the last recess, and the M. P., an exceptionally popular man, was addressing his constituents. The politician in question rejoices in a luxuriant crop of hair. The audience was sympathetic for the most part; but there was one man in the front row of the audience who made numerous interruptions. He was a coal-heaver, apparently, and had but recently been hewing coals.

"Get your hair cut!" he shouted during a most pathetic passage in the candidate's speech. The well-known catch phrase seemed particularly applicable, so a good many of the audience laughed.

But the M.P. was equal to the occasion.

"I will make a bargain with that gentleman," he said. "I will get my hair cut if he will get his face washed."

There were no more interruptions.

EXPENSIVE ALBUM

$20,000 For An Autograph Album With 853 Signatures of World Renowned Celebrities and Their Remarks.

Seven years ago Councillor Louis Barth, of Arad, in Hungary, commenced to collect autographs, and today can boast of possessing one of the finest collections in the world. Indeed, he recently refused an offer of more than $20,000 for his album, which contains the names of 853 (or [illegible]) celebrities, whose remarks have been written in forty-[illegible] languages. Already ninety-[illegible] of them are dead.

Recently he visited Marlborough House to obtain the signature of Queen Alexandra, and at Her Majesty's request left his priceless volume there for twenty-four hours, in order that she might examine at leisure the wonderful array of signatures of Kings, Queens, Emperors, Ministers, scientists, artists, and writers. Herr Barth has gone all over the world to add to his book, and has spent between $45,000 and $50,000 in travelling expenses. The Emperor Francis Joseph, who favours him with an autograph, told him he was the only person, not a Minister, who had ever received his signature.

"I was at Biarritz one year," says Herr Barth, "at the same time as King Edward. I showed him my volume, and, in giving me his signature, he said: 'Your book is an extraordinary treasure. It has only one defect — it is not mine.'"

Herr Barth is preparing a history of how his autographs have been obtained. This book will contain its facsimile every autograph he possesses. It is to be issued in an edition of 100,000 copies, and the proceeds of its sale will be devoted to international charities.

Willkin: "Matter enough. You know some time ago I assigned all my property to my wife to — to keep it out of the hands of — of people I owe money, you know?"

"Yes."

"Well, she's taken the money and gone off — says she won't live with me because I swindled my creditors."

ROYAL RECOLLECTIONS

The Famous Finger-Bowls Not Now Used at Royal Dinners and Some Smart Answers Given to Emperor William.

In "Some Recollections" Canon Tolgarmouth Shore, who has just died, tells a curious story of the reason why finger-bowls are not placed on the table during the dinners of the Royal household. The explanation was furnished by Sir John Cowell, Master of the Household.

"He explained to me," says the Canon, "that in the old days, when there was a certain Jacobite element even in the vicinity of the Court, it had been noticed that on the toast of 'The King' being given after dinner, some of those present used to pass their glass over the finger-bowl, and it was discovered that thus they drank 'To the King over the water.' And the temptation to do so was removed by the abolition of the finger-bowls!"

An account of an amusing conversation between King Edward, the German Emperor, and the Canon is also given in the book mentioned. King Edward and the Kaiser were on a brief visit to Prince and Princess Charles of Hesse, at Cronberg, and came over to the town one day to unveil a memorial to the Princess Elisabeth of Hesse.

"After the ceremony they expressed a wish to see the memorial in the English church to the late Empress Frederick. I accompanied their Majesties, and on entering the building the Emperor turned to me.

"'Now, Canon,' he said, 'how many does the church hold?'

"'In the season, your Majesty,' I replied, 'there are about three hundred or three hundred and fifty present.'

"'And how many of them are asleep during the sermon?' he asked, with a laugh.

"'I must beg your Majesty,' I said, 'not to think that I preach every Sunday!'

"The King, who seemed amused and pleased at the answer, remarked:—

"'You see, you must get up early to walk round my chaplain.'

"'Yes, and a good walk too!' said the Emperor, with a glance at my somewhat bulky figure.

"'Yes,' said the King. 'You know, Teignmouth Shore, you are putting on weight.'

"'Well, at all events,' said the Emperor, with a most gracious smile, 'he never needs to do that in the pulpit!'"

TWO AUDIENCES

Mr. Bonar Law Speaks to Lions and Hyenas.

Never, perhaps, has a leading politician delivered a speech under more extraordinary conditions than those which characterized a meeting three years ago at Mountain Ash, Glamorgan when Mr. Bonar Law, the new Leader of the Opposition was announced to speak. The pavilion at Mountain Ash, which will seat more than 10,000 people, had been let to the Tory Party for Mr. Bonar Law's meeting. Almost immediately afterwards Messrs. Bostock and Wombwell came along and offered forthwith to rent the big building for the winter. The hall was let to them, and the Conservatives were told that they could not have it for their demonstration.

Mr. Littlejohns, the organizer, informed the owners that his meeting would be held there at all costs. After some complimentary passages at arms had been exchanged it was decided that the lions and elephants and hyenas should form part of Mr. Bonar Law's audience, but that they should be walled in with canvas matting. They were well fed before the meeting, and the show band was engaged so that the animals should not be disturbed with strange music. Inside the wall their keepers marched to and fro with prods to prevent the lions and monkeys from interrupting the speakers.

Mr. Bonar Law arrived late, and was unconscious of the fact that he was addressing two audiences. As the human audience applauded, however, the prods were vigorously used to prevent the listeners in the cages from discording the chorus.

When Mr. Bonar Law reached his peroration one of the lions was so struck with the force of the argument that he bellowed forth his approval. It was an anxious moment. The prod, however, opposed his applause, and he subsided in disgust.

When Mr. Bonar Law had finished and had sat down he said to Mr Littlejohns: "I thought it was a very successful attempt by some Liberal opponent to imitate a lion's voice."

THE WONDERFUL BARN

In Ireland, in the county of Kildare, not far distant from Leixlip, is a very picturesque architectural effort, commonly called "The Wonderful Barn." It is built of brick and has six storeys. Each storey internally is dome-shaped, and in the centre of each floor is a round hole, so fashioned that by means of tackle sacks of corn can be lowered or raised from floor to floor. The ordinary means of entrance and access is by way of a corkscrew flight of steps, which is carried around and outside the building, being connected with doors on each floor. The whole structure is 75ft. high, and was built with the chief object of providing employment for the out-of-works of the district.

MUFFS FOR MEN

Although the muff is now exclusively an article of feminine apparel, it was when first introduced to England, toward the close of the sixteenth century, used by both men and women. In fact, in the seventeenth century it was generally regarded as an essential part of the dress of a man of fashion. The muffs then used were somewhat similar to the present fashion — large and bulky.

BOGUS DETECTIVES

Tricks and Daring Dodges of Wily Impostors to Extort Money from Unsuspecting Men and Women.

It was a well-known magistrate who, a short time ago, described the offence of two men who, by impersonating detective officers, had obtained £50 from a woman under the pretext of shielding her husband from the consequences of a robbery which they said he had committed, as one of the "worst forms of blackmailing"; and from inquiries which the writer has made there does not seem to be much doubt in official circles that quite a large number of men are going about posing as detectives and obtaining money by such pretences.

They go to work in much the same way as the ordinary blackmailer. That is to say, they get to know something detrimental to the character of a man or woman, and then endeavour to come to terms with their victims by promising to withhold their warrant for arrest and "squaring" the matter. In the majority of cases it is generally ignorant people, who do not stop to ask the "detective" to produce the warrant, or who forget that a detective, by so acting, renders himself liable to the severest punishment, who are the usual victims, although at times these bogus detectives fly to higher game.

Posing as Police Officers.

Last year, for instance, the case came to light of a wealthy manufacturer, whose son had led a wild life while in London and forged a cheque for $250, paying a man whom he believed to be from Scotland Yard, and who made out that he held a warrant for the son's arrest, $2000 to report that the boy had fled the country. The "detective" called on the father, said that he understood the son was hiding in the neighbourhood, and that he would like the father's help to execute the warrant. Not doubting the man's word, the father, to hush up the matter, suggested that he should pay the detective a price to go back to London and state that he had failed to find the culprit. Two thousand dollars was the price agreed upon and it was not until the father had an official visit from Scotland Yard in regard to the matter that he learned how he had been victimized.

Quite recently a couple of men were heavily fined for representing themselves as police officers and threatening another man with arrest on account of a cheque which they said had been dishonoured because of the false signature; while a particularly mean trick was played upon a widow some months ago when a man called and said that he held a warrant for the arrest of her son, who was a sailor, for taking part in an alleged robbery of goods from the dockyard. The mother was frightened, and, knowing that her son was to sail in a few hours, parted with $75 to induce the "detective" to hold up the warrant until he had sailed. The "detective" knew that the son would not return home again before he sailed, and relied on this fact to extort money from the widow, who found out the trick when she read of the man being sentenced to imprisonment for trying a similar dodge in another part of the town.

The Worst Feature.

Perhaps the worst feature of this bogus detective business has recently been exposed in the English law courts. Cases are known of men who set up as private inquiry agents who have no qualifications for such work, and who simply announce themselves as such in order to acquire knowledge from those who seek their services, afterwards using this knowledge to extort money from their victims.

A couple of months ago, for instance, a lady who wished to relieve herself of the attentions of a blackmailer who had learned a secret of her past life and was continually worrying her for money, rashly confided her troubles to one of these bogus detectives, whose advertisement she had seen in a certain paper. He had no sooner learned all the circumstances of the case than he, too, after finding that she would pay no more money until he had achieved some result, turned round and demanded a large sum for keeping his mouth shut regarding the secret she had confided to him. Luckily, she had the courage to go to the police about the matter, with the result that the scoundrel quickly fled the country.

Sounds of the Saw

"Oi can see rod rowses bloomin'!" sang the street vocalist, and he was about to broach the second spasm when a carpenter's apprentice beckoned him to his side.

"I'll give you tuppence," he declared, "if you'll stay in this shed and sing till I come back. I'm dying for a drink of milk." And the songster assented.

Soon the apprentice reappeared, and paid over the twopence.

"I s'pose," said the vocalist, "that my voice is about the same as yours, an' you thought your boss wouldn't know the difference—eh?"

The other looked at him indignantly, and then replied:—

"Your voice the same as mine! If you want to know, it's the same as my saw's, and I wanted the guv'nor to think I was working hard on these planks."

The Wrong Bit.

An Irish Jarvie was driving an English tourist round Dublin, and on stopping for refreshment the tourist remarked to Pat how lean his horse was. Going up to the horse's head, the tourist examined its mouth, and, turning round with the air of a man who knew something, he said:—

"I am afraid that the want of flesh in your horse is due to the large bit you have in its mouth."

Pat looked at him sorrowfully as he replied:—

"Shure, yer honour, I won't argue wid ye, but I'm after thinking it's the small bit that he has in his stomach that's a-troublin' the poor baste!"

WHAT CANADIANS ARE DOING

THOMAS GRIGG
Qu'Appelle

For nineteen years Thomas Grigg has farmed near Qu'Appelle, meeting set backs, but prospering. Although a Canadian, he and his wife came to the Springbrook district from South Dakota. Generally speaking, wheat-growing has been the mainstay. Horse-raising, also, has received attention to an extent sufficient to lead Mr. Grigg to pass opinion that a man can make as much money on a bob section of rough land raising colts as he can on a real good quarter at wheat-growing. Pigs, also, are kept, and on different occasions have helped him "out of a tight place." He finds that, as a rule, there is enough feed around to fatten a bunch. The farm comprises 640 acres, of which about one-quarter is summerfallowed annually. Wheat is grown for two years, and then oats or barley. Recently, Mr. Grigg has rented his farm for a year in order that he and his good wife may spend the winter in California and take a well-earned rest.

HON. HUGH J. MACDONALD
Police Magistrate
Winnipeg

Mr. Hugh Macdonald who was lately appointed Police magistrate of the Gateway city was formerly premier of Manitoba. Probably the importance of his magistracy lies principally in the fact that the man he succeeded was the famous late T. Mayne Daly, and though Mr. Macdonald is not in his famous father's rank he is big hearted enough to make the attempt to fill a big man's shoes. Nothing attempted, nothing done is certainly not in his make up.

Squire Macdonald is a son of the late John A. Macdonald, and might have been premier of Canada today, if he had remained in Dominion politics, and followed closely in the footsteps of his dad. But he chose the nearer honors offered by a provincial premiership and got out of the running for the post of prime minister of Canada.

mean their giving up their professional duties, but in every community you will find at least one medical man taking an active interest in teh local affairs.

Such a one is Dr. A. Beverley Welford of Woodstock Ont. who is one of the pioneers of the Canadian Club movement in his district, though the doctor's energies are not confined to this laudable work. He is practically connected with every movement that has for its object—the raising of the standard of life.

NELLIE L. McCLUNG
Canadian writer

Mrs. McClung has lived in Manitoba for the last thirty years, having come from Owen Sound with her parents in the very early days of this province. However, she is always very careful to explain that she was only a "mere child" at that time, and yet her stories of some of the happenings of the long journey by ox-train from Winnipeg to the point on the Souris river where her parents located, are so vividly told that we are forced to believe that she must have been a very bright child for her years.

Mrs. McClung, who before her marriage was Nellie L. Mooney, received her education at a country school and afterwards at the Central Collegiate in Winnipeg. She taught school for five years and then married Mr. R. W. McClung, who was engaged in the drug business in Manitou. Man. They lived in Manitou until last summer, when they removed to Winnipeg, and have taken up their residence on Chestnut street. Mrs. McClung was elected president of the local branch of the Canadian Woman's Press club for this year.

Mrs. McClung has written two books, "Sowing Seeds in Danny," and "The Second Chance;" also many short stories. Last year she gave a series of recitals, from her own books, in Manitoba, and also in Ontario.

At the present time she is engaged in writing another book.

Mrs. McClung chooses for her characters the plain people of every day life, whom we all know. The keen study of her writing makes a strong appeal to the discriminating reader.

Charlotte Street Soloist.

Miss Brock, late of Toronto, has been secured as soloist for the Charlotte street Methodist church choir. Miss Brock possesses a beautiful, rich and well-cultivated contralto voice, and through her singing for the past two Sundays at Charlotte street church has been enthusiastically welcomed to the choir. Miss Brock resides here with her father, who is manager of the Brinton Carpet Company. While residing in Toronto she was soloist at times in many of the leading churches.

Canadian Club.

The Canadian Club will hold their next meeting on Thursday, Feb. 1st, when a prominent Toronto lawyer, E. F. B. Johnston, will give an address. Two weeks ago Mr. Johnston addressed the Canadian Club at St. Catharines, and his talk was so interesting that the club are assured of a very pleasant evening.

A Garbage By-law.

A garbage by-law has long been badly needed in Peterborough, and it is therefore pleasing to note that this long-felt want is soon to be supplied. When garbage is moved regularly each day or two, especially from the crowded business section, we can hope for a clean bill of health for the people. An effort is, we understand, being made in this direction, which will take the form of a petition to the Council at its next meeting.

The Purity of the Ice.

The matter of pure ice is just now engaging the attention of a number of our leading citizens. Yesterday a gentleman in connection with The Times expressed his opinion regarding the harvesting of ice from the Little Lake, in a forcible manner. He did not see any difference between using ice taken from the Little Lake or using drinking water from the same place. If the water of the lake is impure, it must follow of course that the ice also is impure. The Times would however remark that most of the ice taken from the lake is used for cooling purposes. Besides it would be a serious matter to compel the Allin Ice Company who have put up a good service in the past, and who are practically alone in the business, to move their storehouses for ice to another locality, which would have to be done in case oh the Little Lake ice being condemned.

KING EDWARD VACUM CLEANER

You cannot clean carpets, rugs and furniture by beating. If you think you have, just try a KING EDWARD VACUUM CLEANER and you will find the article full of dust, which breeds disease.

The KING EDWARD HAND MACHINE has no equal as compared with other hand machines. It is lighter to operate and its suction is much stronger. Its suction is stronger than many of the power machines, and the dusting is done away with. On account of the short stroke one person can operate it on carpets and rugs equally as well as two, and it is about half the weight of other hand machines to carry up and down stairs or from one room to another. It is sold for less money than any of the hand machines. All machines are guaranteed.

Needy People Ask Help.

Many calls for assistance are coming from people from all over the city, many of whom are comparative strangers and of whose presence and condition the City Relief Officer was unaware. Investigation reveals that one family in particular is in very low circumstances, the father being out of work and seemingly unable to secure employment, and the mother is ill. Much is being done by the churches towards assisting those in need, and many generous citizens are contributing freely in order to help, still the requests continue to come to the relief officer for aid.

PUSH PETERBOROUGH

Industrial Advancement and Growth of the City.

Editor Morning Times:

Sir,—In the letters I have written I have indicated some of the advantages that Peterborough possesses. Let us now look at some of the things that have been accomplished—at the advancement that has been made.

In the past ten years this city has grown faster than in any previous decade, although its growth has always been steady. The assessor's figures show an increase of population in that time of 70 per cent.; the census returns show 63 per cent. The increase in the population in the Dominion was 32 per cent., and in the Province of Ontario 13 per cent., so Peterborough with 63 per cent seems to have got its share.

Of the cities of Ontario, only four showed a more rapid growth than Peterborough during that period. One of these was Toronto, with 80 per cent.; two others were Fort William and Port Arthur in which the circumstances were exceptional, and the fourth is Niagara Falls, where amalgamation accounts for part of the addition. When Peterborough has grown more rapidly than Hamilton, London, Brantford, Windsor, Guelph, Galt and the other western cities, it has nothing to complain of. In Eastern Ontario urban growth was slower than in Western Ontario. Kingston's increase of population was only 5 per cent., and Belleville's 8 per cent.; showing that Peterborough outstripped the other cities by great strides.

The building permits record gives similar evidence of advancement. Building permits were not issued in Peterborough until 1907, and the record during the past few years has been:

In 1908	$238,963
In 1909	343,489
In 1910	517,958
In 1911 (11 months)	941,957

New factory buildings and additions to others are erected and some of them scarcely noticed by the people generally. Within a short period several such buildings have been constructed. Among these, last year, the Canadian General Electric Co. put up a large building, the Quaker Oats Co., two buildings, B. F. Ackerman, Son & Co., a large addition the Peterborough Canoe Co., a substantial building, the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Co., an addition and Adam Hall a new factory building.

Within the year the Canadian Canoe Co. has erected a large, new building, as has also the Canadian Chicle Co., and the Peterborough Creamery and Adam Hall have put up additions. The Bonner-Worth Co. erected a building for their new industry, and the Model Foundry and Pump Works and the Diamond Wire Mattress Co. occupied premises with new industries.

Other enlargements are contemplated and will probably be proceeded with in the spring. I do not profess that this covers all that has been done in the line of new concerns or factory enlargement, but it shows very creditable progress in manufacturing. When a citizen of another city tells of what has been done there, one is apt to consider it good progress, and may mentally compare it with what has been done in his own city to its disparagement, but does so because he does not know what the names of concerns in the other places represent and because he has not kept himself informed or has not borne in mind what has been done in his own city.

How many of us, if asked, could give a fair idea of the number of factories in operation in Peterborough? A count brings to mind over fifty and some of these are among the largest in the Dominion.

The number of factories, and the industrial advancement, the building record and the increase in population in Peterborough in recent years are very encouraging, and should be an incentive to the citizens to work together to have this rapid progress continue, for it demonstrates that Peterborough is admirably situated for manufacturing.

Yours truly,
Civis Sum.

Kingston, Jan. 17.—About three o'clock yesterday afternoon an unknown man, probably 30 years of age while sitting in the waiting-room of the K. & P. Ry. Station, pulled out a revolver and shot himself. The bullet entered the left side of his head, and he fell to the floor, dying a few minutes later. In his pockets were found a slip of paper with the name Charles F. Herrow, 161 Carpenter street, Chicago.

The fire dept. had a call Wednesday night to the corner of George and Brock streets. It appears that some hot ashes were thrown at the rear of R. H. Hunter's grocery store, and they set fire to the casing of the cellar window.

P. C. Kidd, who was on duty at the time, smelled smoke, and immediately sent word to the Fire Department to be ready for an alarm, and if it had not been for the sharpness of the Constable, a bad fire might have been the result, with heavy damages.

The Fire Brigade were soon on the scene and found that the fire had got through the building into a wooden case that enclosed the water pipes, and which was packed with sawdust. The blaze was a little difficult to get at, but the fire fighters soon extinguished it.

MADE A JOURNAL

A Merry "Ad." That Set All Australia Laughing at a Premier and Made a Mission Ridiculous.

Although the affair happened over thirty years ago, Australia still chuckles when the name of Henderson Africanus is mentioned. Nor at calls to mind the biggest joke ever perpetrated "down under" — a joke which made all Australia "numb," covered a Premier with ridicule, and firmly established the reputation of the Melbourne Punch.

The joke arose through Premier Berry, of Victoria, being defeated by the Upper House in his effort to change its constitution. He therupon conceived the idea of sending an embassy to England to persuade the Imperial Government towards h scheme of reforming. The 'Melbourn Punch,' however, announced that, a there was to be an embassy, b sides should be represented, an promptly proceeded to appoint "mock embassy" on its own accou

As Proud as a Peacock.

After due deliberation (says th 'Newspaper Owner'), the rival "am bassador" was chosen in Hender Africanus, a full-blooded West Ind a negro, who could talk politics by t league.

He was hired at $1.50 a day, an dressed in the worst-fitting and blac est suit that could be obtained Melbourne. On his head was a fan tastical top-hat half a yard high. I his pocket was a huge brass wat and across his aldermanic stomac swung a brass chain large enough t tether a steam-engine. Dressed in this absurd raiment, and as proud as a peacock, Henderson parade Melbourne, a delighted crowd follow ing him wherever he went. Th whole thing was a most extravag gravesty. Of course the nigger took himself seriously as the chief figur in the political pantomime.

A Splendid Circulation-Raiser.

"That Mr. Berry, sah, he have h private secretary, sah. Henderso Africanus want a private secretar sah," was his request to 'Punch's de lighted management, and a secretar he was given. The biggest, dirties ugliest nigger in Melbourne was hire and dutifully he followed at the "am bassador's" heels as he perambulat the streets. "To all and sundry Af canus introduced him gravely, "M secretary, sah."

Every week, in a position was tak [illegible] and the circulation of the Melbourne Punch went up by leaps and bounds. A the Premier's departure drew near the paper further elaborated the joke Public meetings were held to sup port the black "ambassador." A ban quet was given him, to which six prominent citizens came and Hender son was brought to the hotel worth of the magnificence and the im portance of his mission. Brass band blared "See the Conquering Her Comes," and the populace cheere madly as he drove up to the hote steps.

Kicked Out.

The joke assumed such proportion that the Premier became quite alarmed, and he and many of his supporters really believed that their opponents intended to keep up the joke in London, and thus cover the whole mission with ridicule. A quiet hint, therefore, was given to the shipping company that, if Henderson was given a passage on the vessel in which the Premier and his friends intended to embark, they would not travel.

Africanus was sent to the shipping office to demand passages for himself and his secretary. He was promptly kicked out. This provoked an outburst of simulated fury. Indignation meetings were held to protest against the outrage put upon a Victorian citizen at the instance of the provoked Ministry, and signatures were subscribed to a petition to the Colonial Secretary at home.

But just at this psychological moment the 'Melbourne Punch' stopped the joke, which had now provided enough good copy and many, many square yards of striking, biting illustrations. The Premier went on his futile mission, and Henderson Africanus took up the humble but honest job of newsvendor. He had done the 'Melbourne Punch' a good service and established it firmly as a public favourite, which on its merits it thoroughly well deserves.

A WITTY BISHOP

Perhaps one of the best definitions of the functions of the House of Lords was that given by Bishop Wilberforce when called upon at a dinner of a City Company, London, of which he was an honorary member, to respond to the toast of "The Lords and Commons." "Gentlemen," said he, "I can only compare our two great legislative Chambers to a clock, of which the House of Commons is the mainspring and the House of Lords the pendulum — a pendulum which wags, wags, wags, the while it keeps the mainspring in order, and prevents the clock from running down."

The story is also told of the manner in which the bishop silenced some young men who endeavoured to draw him into a controversy at a time when a series of tracts, entitled, "The Road to Heaven," was creating a considerable sensation. The bishop however, proved too much for them, merely saying: "The best and only road to Heaven I know is to turn to the right and go straight on."

Canada Scotland

A gentleman called at a house in the North of Scotland recently, where there was a family of six sons, in addition to the father and mother.

Noticing that there were only two chairs in the kitchen — presumably for the use of the parents — the visitor asked if the furniture was being saved till the family grew up.

"Na, na," replied the mother; "we're just keepin' the chairs oot o' sicht, case that the laddies winna wear done their breeks ower soon!"

PROFESSIONAL ETIQUETTE

Some Barristers' Curious Customs and Traditions Belonging to the Old Country.

From the day when he eats his first student's dinner to the day when he pockets his last professional fee, the man of wig and gown in England has to observe customs and to obey traditions such as the members of no other learned profession have any knowledge of and which are not even known in Canada amongst the lawyers.

The Temple, where for the most part the would-be Lord Chancellor has his legal nursery, is up extinct nest of old-world observances, thinking it with the far-away time when it was the home of Crusading Knights, who feasted, six and more centuries ago, on the very spot on which the young Templar of our day eats the dinners that go some way towards qualifying him for his wig.

Brothers All!

The very grace that heralds his meal and the grace that concludes it are the same, in the Inner Temple, that the Knights of the Cross listened to when the Plantagenet Kings were wearing their crowns. Like their martial predecessors, the Benchers file into the Middle Temple Hall preceded by the mace, the substitute for the old-time battle-axe. Their entry is heralded by a loud blow of the mace on the floor, as was that of the somber Knights Templar of old by a similar blow with the butt-end of a lance; and the grace is preceded by three blows with a wooden mallet, the ancient knightly form of invoking the Trinity.

Barristers and students mingle and feast together at the same tables, without any regard to seniority — a survival of the ancient Templar practice of the essential principle of brotherhood. If one of them is dissatisfied with his food, he may send a sample of it to the Treasurer for his verdict, just as the most junior Templar in King John's time would submit any food of which he disapproved to the Senior Knight; and the fragments of the modern Grand Day banquet are given to the servants of the Inn just as the surplus food was always given by the Knights of old to the poor.

The Knights Templar were summoned to the hall of feasting by the blowing of a horn; and to-day the Middle Templar is similarly called to the table by blasts of the very horn which summoned his predecessors to Elizabethan days. These, and the arrangement of messes, the ceremonials of bowing, the circulation of the loving-cup and many another custom, all serve to link the Templar of to-day with his martial "forefathers" of long-dead centuries.

Briefs and Fees.

And these are but a few of the many quaint customs and regulations which the man of wig and gown must observe, if he does not wish to get himself into trouble with the authorities. When he is qualified to accept briefs and to play the part of a counsel "learned in the law," he must walk very warily to avoid the countless pitfalls of etiquette that mark his path to the Woolsack.

However much he may yearn for clients, he cannot even see one unless through the introduction of a solicitor; and the solicitor must be present at the interview. Between him and the litigant whose cause he is to plead there is a gulf which only a solicitor can bridge. And when the solicitor appears at his chambers, bearing the coveted brief, it must be handed, not to Mr. "Wig," but to his clerk, and it is the clerk, and not the master, who arranges the delicate matter of fees.

No Touting Allowed.

Some professional men may tout for clients; but not all the barrister. It will be an evil day for him when he starts brief-hunting, though he may be starving for lack of golden guineas. If he calls at a friendly solicitor's office for a gossip, or accepts an invitation to a dinner or a dance at his house, he is going perilously near the danger-line. If he is a wise man he will avoid the company of solicitors and pass them by, like the Levite, "on the other side."

On circuit the watchful eyes of Etiquette are always on him. Even for the sake of company, if he be a sociable man, he must not travel there by any class but the first; nor may he reach an Assize town earlier than the day before the last opens.

However much his services are wanted on another circuit than his own he must turn a deaf ear, unless his brief comes to him marked with a special fee of at least fifty guineas, in addition to the fee he would receive on his own circuit. If he is unable to appear in any case for which he is retained, he must provide a substitute; for whose services, however, he may pay what he pleases. The fee he puts into his own pocket.

When his professional dress is regulated for him to the extent that he must not appear in court in any coat but one of sober black, nor must he show his face in court if he is carrying the blue bag which may be his familiar companion in the street and train. Unless he is content to carry a red bag (and this he may not buy—it must be given to him by some friendly senior), he must be content to make his appearance with his briefs and papers under his arm.

The "Father of Southwark."

Thousands of poor people in the South of London will regret that, owing to advancing age, Canon Horsley is obliged to leave his busy parish of St. Peter's, Walworth, for a quiet living in the South of England. For years he has worked zealously on behalf of the people of the slums, and there is scarcely a branch of parish or municipal work in London with which Canon Horsley has not been connected. To the people of Southwark he has been in every sense a "father of the flock," and it is stated that he once refused a colonial bishopric that he might stay at home and work in the slums.

The canon is a man with a fund of anecdote, and describing the odd deeds of English bishops some time ago, he told a story of the Bishop of Bath and Wells, who had been visiting Scarborough. On the way to the train he lost his reckoning, and stopped a boy. "I say, my lad, how far is it to the station?" "About a mile ahead," said the boy, who had never seen a bishop before. Then, staring at the bishop's knee-breeches and silk stockings, he added, "Hallos, guv'nor, somebody've pinched your [illegible]

A bus load of young people journeyed to Emily I.O.L. Hall, No. 294, from Peterborough and enjoyed very much the basket social and concert. The following Peterborough people assisted in the program: Mr. R. Thompson, Mrs. Bradshaw, Mr. Naish, Miss Elsie Northcote. Master Bertie Breadman. A vote of thanks was tendered to the visiting friends and the talent from Peterborough.

Search for the Body With Bags.

A large number of men and two divers have been at work endeavoring to locate the body of the late Mr. Fairweather. Loaded bags have been dropped in the river where the accident occurred and these were traced as they were carried down the stream but as yet no trace of the body has been found. The divers are preparing to search the river to-day below the dam to the east of the power house, as the eddies may have carried the body to that point.

To Be Deported.

The woman whose arrest was made at Lakefield by County Constable Cochrane, appeared before Magistrate Edmison yesterday, and his worship will recommend to the Immigration Department that she be deported. She has a grandfather in Nottingham England. The woman is only 25 years of age and wants to take her two children with her should she be deported. Her request will be complied with.

Tobogganing on Sunday.

The question is now before the Council whether we shall enjoy the sport of tobogganing on Sundays or not, and City Solicitor Johnston is looking up the law on the matter. He finds that in 1891 a by-law was passed prohibiting the holding of certain meetings in Queen's Park, and as it still stands good, why could not a similar by-law be passed by the City Council to prevent people congregating at the park slides on Sunday.

Pumping Station Satisfactory.

The City Engineer, City Clerk Armstrong, Mayor Bradburn and several of the City Fathers paid a visit of inspection to the Romaine street sewer and south end pumping station and everything was given a fair test while the inspection was going on. The city officials are highly pleased with the work and Mr. Armstrong will make a report in the course of a week or so, it is expected. Then we will be able to publish further details of the facts.

Remove Overhead Wires.

We see that an agitation is on concerning the overhead wires, especially in the business section of the city, and we feel that everyone should support this commendable idea, brought up by Fire Chief Howard, to remove this source of danger. The Times has always been in favor of anything that tends to lessen danger to life and property, and we feel that not only would the removal of overhead wires be a step towards the ideal in eliminating dangers, but it would also tend to render our city more attractive, doing away as it would with the unsightly poles which everywhere disfigure our streets.

The Apostolic Faith Mission.

A religious work has just been started in our city under the above name. Meetings on Sundays will be held in the Princess Theatre, at 3 o'clock p.m., and half past seven in the evening, and during the week as soon as a suitable place can be obtained, every evening commencing at half past seven. The object is the preaching of the whole Gospel of Christ, which embraces not only salvation from sin, but also the baptism in the Holy Ghost for believers and Divine healing for sickness and disease, and this is for all, who will accept the finished work of Christ upon the Cross. Read Matthew 8—17, and kindred passages. All will be made welcome—Come.

Romance of Seventeen Years.

A despatch from Saskatoon, Sask., says that the fact that truth is indeed stranger than fiction, has been clearly demonstrated in Saskatoon. It seems that on New Years day Mr. Wm. Francis Rothwell, nav. of Prince Albert, met Miss Hannah Bonabe, of Walkerton, Ont., whom he had not seen for seventeen years, as he had [illegible] met in Saskatoon and exchanged New Years' greetings, just as old friends would, and after that they decided to wed. The romantic nature of the marriage has been closely guarded by the young couple, however, as is usual at least one loophole was left unguarded and these few facts have found their way out.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

Now for a freeze up.

This is a real old-fashioned January thaw the weather man is handing us.

The roof over the Boys' Department of the Y.M.C.A. is leaking very badly making a veritable free shower bath.

Some buildings are so loaded with gigantic icicles that one really risks his life in walking along under them.

Owing to the unreasonable rainfall our streets are very slippery, rendering walking extremely hazardous.

We are informed that the roads in the country are very bad owing to the thaw and depth of snow, causing slumping.

The examination set for the First Aid to the Injured Class was no walk away, but a real test in every sense of the word.

Debate at St. James church tonight, at 8 o'clock. Subject—"Resolved that sports have a demoralising tendency."

The Scottish curlers who will arrive here next Sunday morning, will attend service at Knox Presbyterian church, accompanied by the local curling club.

A Junior School Boys' Hockey League to be known as the Big Four, has been organized at the Y.M.C.A., all practices and all games to be played at the Y. rink.

People should take particular care in shovelling off their roofs, as the falling snow, loaded with ice as it is, is liable to test the resistance of some unfortunate's cranium.

Among the many citizens engaged in removing the ice from the sidewalks, we noticed Mr. Pugh, District Manager of the International Correspondence School armed with a scraper and shovel, giving a practical demonstration of what mental activities combined with muscular ability can do.

5 Years' Throat Trouble And Influenza Cured

EMINENT DOCTORS FAILED TO CURE—HAD GIVEN UP HOPE.

This Case Does Prove That When Catarrhozone is Breathed Every Trace of Catarrh Disappears.

Milford Haven, Da., Jan. 19—Every one in this neighborhood knows of the long suffering from influenza and catarrh endured by Mrs. D. Gurney. Today she is well. Her recovery is due entirely to Catarrhozone. This is her own statement: "I was a great sufferer from catarrh in the head, throat and nose, and endured the manifold tortures of influenza for five years. My life was despaired of. Catarrh was undermining my strength very fast. I used treatments from eminent doctors, but all failed to cure me. I had given up hope of ever being well. Then I read of a wonderful cure made by Catarrhozone. Immediately I sent for Catarrhozone, and before I had used one bottle I was greatly relieved. To-day I am cured. We would not be without Catarrhozone in our home—it's so sure in colds, coughs, bronchial and throat trouble. I feel it is my duty to publicly recommend Catarrhozone."

Get the large dollar size of Catarrhozone: it contains a beautiful hard rubber inhaler, and medicine that lasts two months. Smaller sizes, 25c and 50c, each. Beware of imitations—accept only Catarrhozone, sold by all reliable dealers or by mail from The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont., and Buffalo, N. Y.

Results of the Recent Inspection of Fire Department.

The Fire Underwriters printed report of the inspection conducted in this city on December 14th, 15th and 16th, is in the hands of the city officials and insurance companies. It deals extensively with the nature of the tests made, the results and figurative matter pertaining to them, such as pressure, valves, time consumed in making tests, etc.

Mr. R. N. Wilson, C.E., conducted the inspection. At the end of his report he recommends the purchase of a combination chemical hose wagon by the city and also the building of three auxiliary stations, one in East City, and one in the north and one in the south wards; also an addition to the force at the Central Fire Station.

While Mr. Wilson does not commit himself to an expression of opinion as to the efficiency of the present Fire Department in his report, the general tone of it, indicates that the standard maintained meets with the approval of the Underwriters.

Had Bad Sore Four Years

ZAM-BUK HAS HEALED IT!

Mrs. Wilson, 110 Wickson Avenue, Toronto, says: "About four years ago a sore spot appeared on the right side of my face. This spot increased in size until it became about half an inch in diameter and very painful. I went to a doctor, but the ointment he gave me did not dave any good effect. The sore continued to discharge freely, and was most painful. I had it cauterized, tried poultices and all kinds of salves, but it was no good, and I continued to suffer from it for four years!

"A sample of Zam-Buk was one day given to me, and I used it. Although the quantity was so small, it seemed to do me some good, so I purchased a further supply.

"Each box did me more and more good, and, to my delight, before I had been using Zam-Buk three weeks, I saw that it was going to heal the sore. In less than a month it was healed!

"I know a lady in the east of the city, whose husband suffered for years with an open sore on his leg. On my recommendation, Zam-Buk was tried in that case. The other day when I saw her, she told me that it had healed the sore completely.

"My daughter, who lives in Lethbridge, Alta., has also used Zam-Buk with the same satisfactory result. I think it is, beyond all doubt, the finest healing balm known."

Such is the opinion of all persons who have really tried Zam-Buk. It is a sure cure for eczema, piles, abscesses, ulcers, scalp sores, ringworm, cuts, burns, scalds, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c. box, all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. In case of skin disease use also Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet.

INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION BOARD ELECTS OFFICERS

Progress was the watchword at the meeting of the Industrial Exhibition Board yesterday afternoon. Great interest was manifested, and a strong executive was chosen.

In his opening address, President J. H. Garbutt, of Smith, referred to the loss sustained in the death of Mr. Laird. The progress of the Association during the year was unique. The close of the year showed a balance of cash of about $600 on the right side of the ledger, which was a matter for congratulation. He had every confidence that the men chosen to the electorate would do their level best to improve the fair.

The financial statement was then formally read by secretary J. G. A. Hall, and the balance to be $969.

The new executive was authorized to deal with the matter of the continuance or abandonment of the spring stallion show.

The question of holding the annual "Field Crop" competition was talked over, and the meeting put itself on record as favoring its continuance.

Then the Directors talked over the matter of employing judges and while some favored asking the Department to continue furnishing the judges, it was decided to leave the matter to be dealt with by the incoming executive.

The fair board will continue its affiliation with the Central Ontario Association.

A lively little tilt occurred between Messrs. Turner and Conroy, over the suggestion that a more suitable entrance be provided for the grounds, one of the gates, the former declared had been rushed, and Mr. Conroy asked why he hadn't stopped it? Mr Turner retorted that when a man saw himself outnumbered, then discretion became the bettef part of valor.

There was a slight decrease in attendance last year, the amount of $328 being behind the showing of 1910, this being accounted for by the bad weather.

J. H. Garbutt was made the unanimous choice of the meeting for president. He thought that it might be wise to elect a Peterborough man rather than a farmer, as he would be less inconvenienced attending meetings.

There were five nominations for the office of 1st vice-president, Mr. Gillespie winning out. The second vice-president named was Mr. Denne.

The Directorate chosen is composed of: Messrs. Turner, Conway, Glover, Collins, Neill, Story, Cruikshank, Moor, Brown, Milburn, Munro Baptie, Lang, Lane and Redmond.

Delegates to the Ontario Fair Board—Messrs. Collins, Moore and the president.

Delegates to the Toronto meeting—Messrs. Collins and Moore.

It was decided to have two persons to fill the positions of secretary and treasurer, Messrs. Hall and Turner being chosen respectively.

The honourary presidency and vice-presidency were given to E. A. Peck, M.P.P., and J. H. Burnham, M.P.

Honourary Directors—Mayor Bradburn and the County Warden, James Thompson, M.P., J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., Hon. J. R. Stratton, J. H. Hooper, W. B. Stewart, A. W. Crossman, Frank Wise, John Carp and W. G. Morrow.

PROSPECTORS EMERGE FROM FOREST TO READ THEIR DEATH NOTICE AND FIND COFFINS WAITING FOR THEM

William A. Muir and Joseph Legault Have Amazing Experience in Mining Country

INDIANS SAW BODIES OF DOGS ON THE LAKE

Muir's Wife and Family Overjoyed When They Found That His Life Had Been Spared.

Ottawa, Jan. 19.—To have the story of his tragic death by freezing spread about and currently believed and to come out of the bush and find coffins waiting for the bodies of himself and his companion, was the somewhat unique experience of Wm A. Muir, formerly of this city, who was reported last week as having lost his life with a companion named Jos. Legault, on Night Hawk Lake, in the Porcupine Country.

Muir has joined his wife and children at their home in Haileybury and his relatives in Ottawa to-day received a letter from him in which he describes his experience and tells how the story originated.

HOW THE STORY ORIGINATED

Muir says, that he and Legault were on their way into Thomas Township with a tobogran loaded with provisions. The thermometer stood at 51 degrees below zero. They met another prospector, Dick McGregor, who was coming out with his face badly frozen. McGregor advised the two against the danger of making the trip, being experienced prospectors, they decided to go on to their camp. Next day an Indian crossing the lake came upon the bodies of two sleigh dogs which had died of the cold.

AN INDIAN'S BLUNDER.

They were partly covered with snow and the Indian, assuming that they were human bodies, made no further investigation. He met McGregor, and related his story of the finding of the frozen bodies of the men. McGregor naturally concluded that the bodies were those of Muir and Legault, and the report rapidly spread through the mining country. Search parties were organized, but they found nothing until in the camp in Thomas Township they found the two men alive and well.

COFFINS AT STATION.

As Muir's family was prostrated by the story of his death the party immediately started out for Haileybury. "When I arrived at Porcupine" says Muir, "I found my coffin and that of Legault waiting for us on the station platform. I have been doing nothing but shaking hands, reading flattering obituaries in the newspapers and answering letters and telegrams ever since."

Legault's father resides in Montreal.

SAFE CRACKERS IN BROCKVILLE

Burglars Overlooked a Jewelry Case Containing a number of Stones Worth $500.

Brockville, Jan. 19.—Burglars blew open the safe of the office of the Thousands Islands Mineral Water Co. during the night with nitro-glycerine and stole about ten dollars and several cheques for small amounts. An iron box containing jewelry belonging to the wife of the proprietor and valued at $500, was overlooked. The safe was wrecked by the explosion. A fuse found on the floor leads to the conjecture that a covering for the hands was used to block identification from finger prints. The police have no clue.

THE DOG NUISANCE.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir, In The Times of Tuesday, I note a Citizen states that in a short distance he counted fourteen dogs. On that day between the hours of 3 o'clock and 4 p.m., from Aylmer St., on Charlotte St. to the Methodist Church, and two blocks south, I counted eighteen dogs of all sizes and breeds, and heard one howl that was not visible. As an old citizen I think it is about time our up-to-date Aldermen should take hold of this dog nuisance and handle it without gloves. The percentage of the people who keep canines is very limited, and why should an up-to-date city like ours have to tolerate this nuisance any longer.

In the good old days swine and cattle roamed our streets. When they were banished from the public highways a big noise was made about the rights of the poor man. There is not one person in this community who would wish to return to the old conditions. Then why should the citizens have to tolerate a greater danger by allowing all sorts of dogs to roam at large, especially after all the lessons we have had from other places? What guarantee have we, more than other places, that the dogs in this city have not already contracted this dread disease, rabies? The only sure way to prevent it is by muzzling the dogs from our streets. The Aldermen by so doing will be [illegible]

PUSH PETERBOROUGH.

Some Suggestions As to How It May Be Done—Co-Operation Essential.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—One of the plans developed in other places for encouraging small industries was one promoted in Moose Jaw. It was to have the City erect a large factory building and sub-divide it into separate premises and to rent it furnished with light, power and water at lowest prices. I did not notice whether this plan was carried out, although it was reported in a despatch in the papers.

In an Ontario city a gentleman purchased a block of vacant land, and he gives free sites to factories. To one at least he gave in addition to a site for the factory, several building lots as a bonus. He is paid a small salary by the City to promote the location of industries. Of course this gentleman expects to make money out of his land by inducing factories to locate there, but it looks like good business for the city as well as for himself. In this place, when he needs a special fund to promote the location of a factory it is readily furnished by citizens, and a number of manufacturers and business men stand ready to back him up.

In Hamilton some years ago a By-law to aid an industry did not receive the necessary number of votes in its favor. Then another plan was put into operation. A large section of a township was annexed to the city and by the terms of annexation the assessment and rate of taxation in the annexed territory were fixed for a term of years. Since then a factory locating there is given nominal taxation without a By-law, a vote or any further action, and this has assisted Hamilton greatly. Ham-

JOSEPH FELS DIDN'T COME TO ADVOCATE TAX THEORY

Jos. Fels, millionaire soap manufacturer and disciple of Henry George did not put in an appearance at St. Paul's church last night, and a good sized audience was disappointed in not hearing him proclaim his doctrines. It came about in this way:

Mr. H. B. Cowan was in Toronto and as he had heard of some press notices which did not creat a favorable impression of Mr. Fels, he attended a banquet at which Mr. Fels was present, and come to the conclusion that it would not be advisable to bring him to Peterborough. Never-the-less he did not act upon his own authority, but telephoned Rev. Mr. Macdonald, of the Globe, who said that although he was in sympathy with Mr. Fels and his work still he would not advise his coming to Peterborough, and so the engagement was cancelled.

Mr. Cowan gave a talk on Mr. Fels' subject, and said that according to the theories advanced in college, population increases greater than the products of the earth, and that capital and labor become unequally balanced. After explaining his topic, he gave a short history of Henry George. Mr. George after much travel and study, discovered that where the greatest natural riches were, there the people were the poorest.

George came to the conclusion that God had created all, and although inequality existed in pecuniary matters still God was just and created all perfectly, but owing to men's injustice, bad conditions exist, and in the present land-laws, the laws of God, are being disobeyed. A reference to Deuteronomy shows: "The land shall not be sold forever," etc.

The great resources of wealth are: Land, Natural resources and Great Transportation systems.

The speaker asked his audience to consider an early stage of society, where all, say, one hundred, are fishing, after a time five are picked to procure fishing poles for the rest, and still get their share; then they find that five more could procure metal for the hooks, at the ninety-fish for the rest, after this works out they see that ten more men could build boats fit for deep water fishing, and so on. Then these men who are furnishing the food for the rest baulk in their duties, and demand a price for their goods. This shows how the condition of society has only evolved from the primitive condition. For instance: the farmer demands value for his goods, the laborer demands value for his service and so it goes on and on, until the present state of affairs evolve.

Mr. George assumes that when all the land in America is taken up, the same conditions will exist here as exist in Ireland to-day. Following down from that, he claims that the great problem confronting man is the distribution of land; also that some scale should be reached by which each man should get only that which he earns and nothing more. Statistics show that more wealth is being produced to-day than ever before, but as poverty also exists to-day more than ever before, the wealth produced is not being rightly distributed. The George theory is, there there is no strife between capital and labor, but that capital assists labor, and that the capital increase is fair and the wage for labor is fair, but that really the unfair distribution of land has led up to the struggle between capital and labor; also that the great value of land to-day is not caused by the owners or by any individual but by the community at large; therefore, it is land laws that are radically at fault.

Great progress has been made in the movement in Great Britain, and Mr. Fels uses the expression, "As Great Britain fiddles to-day, so the world dances to-morrow."

POWERS ARE NOW ASKED TO RECOGNIZE REPUBLIC

FINAL ULTIMATUM SENT TO PREMIER AT PEKING—TO DEPOSE "STRONG MAN."

Chinese Make Appeal to Powers, Stating That Manchus Are Negotiating for Abdication—Would Avert a Disastrous Interregnum.

Nanking, Jan. 19.—The Republican Government to-day sent an appeal to the powers for recognition. This took the form of a circular which was sent to London, Washington, Tokio, Paris Berlin, and St. Petersburg, and was signed by Wang Chung Wei, the Foreign Minister of the Republican Cabinet.

The terms of the circular are as follows:

"The Manchu Government having entered into negotiations with the Republic of China for the purpose of abdicating its entire sovereign rights, powers and privileges, we reverently pray for recognition in order to avoid a disastrous interregnum.

(Signed) "Wang Chung Wei, Foreign Minister."

ULTIMATUM TO PEKIN.

A most important step was taken by the Republican Government to-day when it telegraphed an ultimatum to Premier Yuan Shi Kai at Pekin. The terms of the document are very drastic and are substantially as follows:

"In the first place the abdication of the throne and the surrender of the sovereign powers are demanded.

"In the second place, no Manchu may participate in the provisional government of China.

"In the third place the capital of Shi-Kai cannot participate in the provisional Government of China until the republic has been recognized by the foreign powers and the country has been restored to peace and harmony."

YUAN NOT TO DICTATE.

To-day's decided action by the Republican Government is due to Premier Yuan Shi Kai's demand that Dr. Sun Sen resign the presidency, permitting Yuan Shi Kai to exercise sovereign powers until the National Convention, which is to be called to decide on the form of Government of China, shall have reached a consummation. In the meantime Premier Yuan Shi Kai desires the court to retire temporarily, transferring its powers to him.

The court, however, objected to leaving Peking until the National Convention had reached a decision.

A Des Moines man had an attack of muscular rheumatism in his shoulder. A friend advised him to go to Hot Springs. That meant an expense of $150.00 or more. He sought for a quicker and cheaper way to cure it and found it in Chamberlain's Liniment. Three days after the first application of this liniment he was well. For sale by all dealers.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

FIVE WERE INJURED BY ODORLESS GAS IN WATER PIPES

FAMILY DID NOT USE GAS, BUT ALL ARE IN THE HOSPITAL.

It Exploded When Some One Lighted a Match, Wrecking the House.

Chatham, Ont., Jan. 19.—Five members of the Cappel family, who live on the sixth concession Dover, are now in the hospital, and one may die as result of a gas explosion in the house last night. When one of the members of the family tried to light lamps, the explosion took place. The whole side of the house was blown out and every window in the house was smashed. Every member of the family was seriously burned.

The family did not use gas in the house, but they have gas in a water well in the barn yard, and a wind mill is used to force the water from this well to the house. It is thought that the gas worked its way into the house through the water pipe and as it is odorless, its presence was not detected until the match was lit.

The injured are:—William Chappel, his three children, and his brother, Fred.

Chappel's daughter, Mabel, was blown through the end of the house. Of the six inmates, Mrs. Chappel was the only one who escaped injury. The house caught fire, but the neighbors extinguished the flames.

OVER A THOUSAND KILLED OR WOUNDED

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Jan. 19.—Over a thousand men were killed and wounded in the battle yesterday at Yaguache, to the north east of this city.

An army supporting the Quito Government, under the command of Gen. Julio Andrade, formerly Ecuadorean Minister to Colombia, attacked and defeated an army of Guayaquil troops supporting the provisional Government, proclaimed by Gen. Flavio Alfaro.

A DESPERATE BATTLE WITH TURKS AND ARABS

Tripoli, Jan. 19.—A terrific attack was made by a large body of Turks and Arabs yesterday on an Italian column which was on the march about ten miles from the town of Tripoli.

ITALIANS SURPRISED.

The Italian troops, which consisted of detachments of all arms, left Tripoli early in the morning on the way to Ghirgarish, a small oasis situated about 10 or 11 miles along the coast to the west of the town and surrounded by a number of mud forts, which had hitherto given shelter to Arab irregulars.

Suddenly as the soldiers were marching along the road which runs parallel to the coast they were attacked in a series of onslaughts by a large force of Turks and Arabs.

The Italians immediately took up position and threw up field entrenchments.

The enemy continued its attack throughout the day but finally retired.

Details of the losses have not yet been reported.

AIMED AT JAPAN AND GERMANY—PROPOSES THAT RECIPROCITY PACT BE ENLARGED.

Newfoundland Lumber King Is In New York, Backed by Public Men of Britain and America, Advocating the Plan.

New York, Jan. 18.—Harry J. Crowe, Newfoundland's "Lumber King," is in New York to stimulate interest in what he calls a "larger reciprocity pact," which shall include not only the United States and Canada, but the entire British Empire.

Mr. Crowe bears letters from public men both in England and America favoring the plan. In a statement of his purpose, he says:

"The verdict of the Canadians in connection with President Taft's proposed reciprocity pact implied a strong desire to give the Mother Country a preference over all other nations, however, tempting or alluring their offers may be.

"It would therefore seem wise for the United States, while the door is open, to enter into a larger reciprocity pact, embracing all the English-speaking peoples—Great Britain and all her colonies—instead of Canada alone, and the United States.

"The alliance would be principally against such countries as Germany and Japan."

Highest on Earth

The Loa Bridge in the Chilian Andes is the highest bridge in the world. This wonderful construction is four hundred feet high, eight hundred feet long, and stands ten thousand feet above sea-level. It crosses a great ravine some three hundred miles from Antofagasta, on the railway running from that port into Bolivia. This line is also of interest from the fact that it is the highest railway in the world, climbing at one point up to over sixteen thousand six hundred feet above sea level.

Perth, Western Australia, Jan. 18.—A great international exposition which is to be opened by King George and Queen Mary is to be held in three years on the occasion of the completion of the trans-Australian Railroad. The line, which is now under construction, crosses Australia from North to South, and is to be connected with West Australia on the west and Queensland and Victoria on the East. The total cost is estimated at $50,000,000.

PUBLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions of its correspondents.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Peterborough has the essentials and accessories for a manufacturing centre in a superior degree. We have seen that this is true. It has grown rapidly, more rapidly than nearly every city in Ontario in the past ten years. The returns have demonstrated this. What further can be done, in addition to what is now being done, to Push Peterborough forward?

At present this work is in the hands of a committee of the Council on which the Board of trade has three representatives. A keen lookout is kept for new factories or foreign manufacturing concerns that contemplate entering Canada, and correspondence is continually going on with these, as well as personal interviews. To explain all that is done would probably be indudicious, as it would give valuable hints to other cities, but I am assured, and have been shown evidence to sustain that assurance, that the committee is alert and active.

An alert and active committee, no matter how competent and aggressive, must be supported by the citizens generally. When by-laws are submitted the electors must vote for them in sufficient numbers to satisfy an absurdly drastic law or the committee's efforts may come to naught.

Here are some examples of what has been done recently in some other places in the way of carrying by-laws to aid industries.

In Owen Sound—to loan $15,000 to a knitting factory, to loan $25,000 to a furniture factory and to loan $20,000 to a baby carriage factory. Altogether Owen Sound passed by-laws involving $110,000 for industrial assistance.

In Guelph—to loan $20,000 to the Independent Tire Co., and to give fixed assessment to four factories.

In Belleville—To guarantee bonds to the amount of $25,000 for and give a fixed assessment to one industry and to aid another concern.

In Dunnville—To authorize a loan of $30,000 to one Company and to purchase a site and put up a building for another at a cost of $10,000.

In Wingham—To grant $10,000 and fixed assessment to a foundry.

In Mount Forest—To loan a carriage company an additional sum of $14,000.

In Drayton—To grant a loan of $4,000, a free site and exemption from taxes to a flax mill.

In Newmarket—To grant a loan of $35,000 to a motor car company.

In Port Arthur—To guarantee bonds to the amount of $30,000 to a factory to make interior furnishings, and for granting assistance to a match factory. In all Port Arthur voted to raise $150,000 in five industrial by-laws.

In Aurora—To loan a company $10,000 and grant exemption from taxes.

In St. Catharines—To give a lock factory nine acres of land, free water exemption for ten years and a fixed assessment for another ten years.

In Merriton—To give a fixed assessment to a tissue paper factory.

In Alliston—To give a fixed assessment and free water to a silverware factory.

In Campbellford—To "assist" a bridge works in that town.

In Windsor—Three by-laws to grant "the usual concessions" to three different concerns.

In Trenton—Three by-laws to grant fixed assessments to a baby carriage factory, a shirt and collar factory and a button factory.

In Chatham—To loan $40,000.

In Perth—To loan $25,000.

In Sarnia—To grant a bonus of 30,000 to a factory. This industry is one Peterborough had correspondence with.

Fort William—To aid two concerns in regard to one of which $102,000 is to be raised by the city.

Milton—To guarantee the bonds of a shoe company to the extent of $12,000, the company to expend $16,000.

Brampton—A loan of $43,000 to a foundry.

Stratford—A loan of $10,000 to a factory for piano accessories.

Thorold—Fixed assessment to a paper and pulp company.

Woodstock—To aid an automobile factory.

Bracebridge—A fixed assessment for a woollen mill.

Deseronto—To aid a canning factory.

Durham—Exemption for a cement factory.

Napanee—To aid a rock drill factory.

Smith's Falls—Concession in assessment to assist agricultural implement factory.

Tilbury—A loan to a brick and tile yard.

Kingston—A fixed assessment to a locomotive works and privileges to a box factory.

Ridgetown—Concessions to a canning factory.

Listowel—Exemption and free water to a furniture factory.

This list is not a complete one; it has been made from paragraphs noticed in casual reading of the papers and these paragraphs full particulars are not given. It, however, serves the purpose of indicating what other places do in the way of carrying by-laws to assist industries and our people must support in the same way those engaged more directly in the work of advancing the city industrially in order to secure new industries.

Yours truly,
Civis Sum.

Excellent Connections for the Sunny South.

To meet the demand of southern travel which generally takes place this season of the year, the C. P. R. is pleased to inform the public of the excellent connection made at Detroit with the Pere Marquette for Jacksonville and other Southern points.

Passengers can leave Toronto on the C.P.R. fast train at 4.30 p.m., arrive Detroit 10.25 p. m., and connect with the Pere Marquette train leaving same depot at 10.45 p.m., and arrive at Jacksonville second morning after leaving Detroit.

The parlor and dining car service between Toronto and Detroit is par excellence, and from Detroit south through sleeping and dining car service is also operated.

This route takes you through the beautiful Cities of Detroit, Mich.; Toledo, O.; Dayton, O.; Cincinnati, O.; and Atlanta, Georgia.

If intending passengers will call at the ticket office, 16 East King Street full information will be furnished and literature covering the route supplied.

Excellent connections can also be made to Florida, via Buffalo.

Acme of Service.

Taking into consideration the magnificent equipment supplied by the Canadian Pacific, even at full tariff rates, every day is a bargain day for the traveling public.

The new compartment cars recently put into service between Toronto and Ottawa, and Toronto and Montreal, on trains leaving North Toronto at 10 p.m. daily, in addition to the electric lighted sleeping cars, also operated on this train, make it second to none on the continent.

The compartment cars have a style all their own, being the latest in construction and appointment. They are electric lighted throughout; absolute privacy is assured; individual toilet requisites, etc.

"A Premier Train," is the general verdict; some say, a credit to Canada.

WEDDING BELLS

Fitzpatrick—O'Leary.

A very pretty church wedding was solemnized in St. Paul's R.C. church when Miss Francis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Fitzpatrick, of Asphodel, and one of the most popular young ladies of that district, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Maurice O'Leary of Indian River. The bride, who was given away by her father, was charmingly gowned in a beautiful tailored costume of King's Blue broadcloth, and black picture hat with willow plumes. She also wore a set of black Persian lamb, the gift of the groom. The bridesmaid in attendance was her cousin, Miss Theresa Hurley, of Peterborough, who was also tastefully and becomingly attired in a navy tailored suit and a black hat of hatter's plush, trimmed with a large willow plume. She also wore an elegant gold bracelet the gift of the groom. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Joseph O'Leary, of St. Michael's College, Toronto.

High mass was sung by Rev. Michael O'Leary of Bracebridge, brother of the groom and present in the sanctuary were: Rev. P. J. O'Leary, and Rev. P. Kelly, pastor of St. Paul's.

At the conclusion of the wedding ceremony the bridal party drove to the residence of the bride's father, where a sumptuous wedding dejeuner was given to the large number of assembled guests. The toast to the bride was proposed by P. J. O'Leary and the groom made a very appropriate reply. Other toasts were proposed and replied to by Rev. M. O'Leary, Rev. F. Kelly, the bride's father, Dr. Holdship, and several other gentlemen.

The large number of many costly gifts showed the high esteem in which the bride was held by her many friends and acquaintances.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Rev. P. J. O'Leary and Rev. M. O'Leary, of Bracebridge, brothers of the groom, Miss Mary O'Leary, sister of Montreal, Dr. and Mrs. Holdship, of Montreal, Misses Cassie and Theresa Hurley, Mrs. Mona O'Shea, Mr. D. Lynch, Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. John O'Shea, of Campbellford.

The happy couple will reside at Indian River, where the groom has been one of the most popular bachelors. After the ceremony and bridal festivities, Mr. W. J. Lendrum of Peterborough took an excellent photograph of the wedding party.

Search for the Body With Bars.

A large number of men and two divers have been at work endeavoring to locate the body of the late Mr. Fairweather. Loaded bags have been dropped in the river where the accident occurred and these were traced as they were carried down the stream but as yet no trace of the body has been found. The divers are preparing to search the river to-day below the dam to the east of the power house, as the eddies may have carried the body to that point.

TO HELP THE EXPORT TRADE

well Known Business Man of Montreal Urges Canadian Manufacturers To Wake Up and Get After Foreign Trade

Mr. George E. Johnston, the well-known financier is urging the manufacturers and traders of Canada to consolidate and form an association through which authentic information of the wants of other countries—particularly South America—could be secured for the benefit of Canada Mr Johnston's appeal, in part, is:—

Has not the time arrived when we should put forth some concerted action whereby we would render valuable aid to our Canadian exporters. This might be accomplished by following the example of our neighbors to the south of us by the formation of a Canadian Export Association. Our export trade is growing at a remarkably rapid rate and the work of such an association would be to encourage our expanding manufacturers and traders who may be anxious to participate in profitable over-seas business. It would be the purpose of the suggested association to establish an intelligence department and through the agency of accredited correspondents who would supply ruling prices, point out new markets and fresh sources for the purchase of our raw material.

It may be news to many Canadians to know that there is scarcely a country in the world where Canadian merchandise does not find a ready market, both in the countries of the Old and New World. We have now a direct steamship service to Australia, New Zealand and the Far East and we have lately turned our attention to the development of trade in Latin South America and with most promising results.

From January 1st. to September 30th of last year, the exports and imports between Canada and Argentine aggregated $5,051,467, which is $2,000,000 more than the previous year during the nine months above mentioned. Canada sent to Argentine $2,890,913 worth of goods and bought from that republic $2,161,554.

In looking over all the countries' trade with each of the Republics of South America, I personally believe that our trade of 1910 with the Argentine might be duplicated in each one of the other Republics, if we put the proper trade machinery into operation. Canada in the last few years, has been developing her export trade at a very rapid rate.

I would like to see our government assist in establishing a direct line of steamships with South America. This would facilitate the work of an energetic and patriotic Canadian Export Association. In many ways South America presents a very attractive field for Canadian business men and I believe, as one personally acquainted with South America and its business, that there is no doubt a large trade could be worked up, if proper attention were paid to cultivating the republics of South America. As everyone knows, South Americans for the most part, are not competitors of Canada. They buy what we have to sell and sell us commodities which we require. The only exception to this statement is the Argentine Republic and even with this republic our export trade last year was over $5,000,000. Canada should have, next to Great Britain, the first claim upon South American trade, because of the fact that the chief commercial houses of South America are English and would naturally give a preference to Canada. There is invested in South American enterprises at the present time, over two billions dollars of British money and as a result of this large amount of British capital invested, Canada, as a part of the British Empire, would receive a cordial welcome should she energetically seek closer trade relations with South American countries.

As a Canadian much interested in Canadian enterprises, I would like to see a system of organized effort to extend and enlarge our export trade and for that purpose, I would suggest the formation of a powerful league, known as the Canadian Export Association, which league ought to secure diplomatic influence for the successful exploitation of Canadian commerce. In order to secure a remunerative business for a direct steamship line, the government might grant a subsidy, which subsidy would not be required after a more extensive trade had been developed, as it would soon be apparent that Canadian steamships would soon have a paying cargo each way.

It might be pointed out that the greater part of manufactured goods used in South America are imported and that there is hardly an article manufactured in Canada which would not find a ready and profitable sale in the south. Implements are used there in enormous quantities. Cement is used in millions of tons. Leather goods, including saddles, boots and belting are everywhere in great demand owing to the agricultural nature of the country. The bulk of this trade is now going to Americans, Germans and the Belgians. We in turn need their asphalt, nuts, mutton, hides, mahogany, rice, rubber, wool, etc. Our Canadian government has neglected putting a live, energetic Canadian representative in each one of the Republics of South America and I think the time has arrived for either the government or such an association as I have indicated to take immediate steps towards the development of our Canadian trade in the south.

Mr. Johnston invites correspondence from manufacturers and traders of the Dominion on the subject and if there is sufficient interest manifested, necessary steps will be taken to organize an export association and to develop and extend our export trade.

The Scottish curlers who will arrive here next Sunday morning, will attend service at Knox Presbyterian church, accompanied by the local curling club.

THE PRIMROSE LEAGUE

The Story of the Founding of the Famous British League — The Primrose Was Beaconsfield's Favourite Flower.

It was really a chance remark which led to the founding of the Primrose League — that remarkable political organization which to-day has over 1,500,000 members.

When, on April 19th, 1883 — the second anniversary of Lord Beaconsfield's death — his statue was unveiled in Parliament Square, Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, arriving at the Commons late in the afternoon, was given a primrose by Mr. Cove, superintendent of the members' cloakroom. When Sir Henry entered the Chamber he found the whole Conservative party similarly decorated with Lord Beaconsfield's favourite flower. The fact impressed him so much that as he walked home with Lord Randolph Churchill he remarked: "What a show of primrose! This should be turned to account. Why not start a Primrose League?"

Lord Randolph was instantly interested. "Draw up a plan," he said, "to carry out your idea, and we will see what can be done."

Ultimately Lord Randolph and Sir Henry were joined by Sir John Gorst and Sir Alfred Shade and in due course these four gentlemen founded the League, and constituted themselves the ruling council.

It was originally intended to admit men only, banded in companies of about a hundred, to act as missionaries of the League. Ultimately, however, it was decided to admit ladies, with the result that the membership rose from 957 in 1884 to 237,263 in 1886. Not long ago it was reported that the total membership had touched 1,700,000.

It has, of course, been said that the primrose was not Lord Beaconsfield's favourite flower, and that when Queen Victoria sent a wreath of primroses to Lord Beaconsfield's funeral and wrote on it, "His favourite flower," the allusion was to the Prince Consort — not to the dead statesman. Mr. Reginald Lucas, however, in "Lord Glenesk and the 'Morning Post,'" says that one who knew Lord Beaconsfield well declares that he habitualy wore a single primrose in his button hole when he was at Hughenden in the early spring; while another more intimate friend can speak of having seen an abundance of primrose in Beaconsfield's house in Curzon Street that had been gathered on the slopes of Windsor Castle.

THE MEAN MAN

"Talking about meanness," said an old son of the soil, who nursed a pint pot in a chair by the fire, "you should ha' known old Ruby what used to keep a farm out Goswell way.

"Twenty years ago, it is that his son went out with a tin bucket to milk a cow. Somehow or other, both the lad and the bucket disappeared mysteriously.

"No more was heard of him till he wandered back home ten years after, as rich as a millionaire, and loaded the old man up with gold and diamond pins and new clothes, and gave him five thousand dollars as a birthday present.

"And d'ye think old Ruby was grateful? No'er a bit!

"'George,' says he 'wot 'ave yer done with the bucket?'

"And George left home again, wondering whether his dad was the meanest man in the world or whether that distinction was still held by the fellow who used a wart on the back of his neck for a collar-stud."

PURE ENGLISH

"My dear, I wish you would speak more carefully," said a stickler for pure English to his wife. "You say that 'Henry Jones came to this town from Sunderland.' Don't you see that it would be better to say that he 'came from Sunderland to this town'?"

"I don't see any difference in the two expressions," rejoined the lady.

"But there is a difference in the two expressions — a rhetorical difference. You don't hear me make use of such awkward expressions. By the way, I have a letter from your father in my pocket."

"Oh, dear, is my father in your pocket?" inquired the wife. "You mean that you have in your pocket a letter from my father."

"There you go with your little quibbles! You take a delight in harassing me; you are always taking up a thread and representing it as a rope."

"Representing it to be a rope, you mean, dear?"

And then he grinned a sickly grin and wished he had never started the discussion.

RUN DOWN

The council employé had formally applied, in writing, for a holiday — with salary, of course — on the grounds that he was "run down."

"I'm a bit suspicious of this rundowsitis," remarked the chairman. "It's been very prevalent among the council's employés of late. I propose the applicant be sent for."

"I beg to second that."

The proposition being carried, a messenger went in search of the applicant. Presently there was a scuffling at the door of the council chamber.

"Order there!" commanded the chairman. "Officer, why do you allow that person to try and force his way into the room? Remove him instantly!"

"Beg pardon, sir," said the officer, with a smile, the breadth of which not even his own capacious palm could conceal, "it's the man you sent for — the road foreman wot's run down."

"Oh, well, let him enter, then."

"Beg pardon, sir, he can't. 'E's too fat for the door!"

The examination set for the First Aid to the Injured Class was no walk away, but a real test in every sense of the word.

Young Boy of Sixteen Possesses a Preacher's License and Supplies His Father's Pulpit. Eloquently.

(Publishers Press News Service)

Mass. — "Frank W. Rollins of Bakersville, Mass., is the youngest boy preacher in the country if not in the world. Though only 16 years old he possesses a preacher's license. This he makes good use of by supplying his father's pulpit and preaching in different towns throughout the state. The boy is not out of school, having taken a post graduate classical course in the Torrington high school. He is preparing for a Wesleyan university and will follow with a course at the Theological seminary.

He is known in his vicinity as the "boy preacher of Litchfield county" and is perfectly at home in conducting prayer meetings. When he supplies his father's pulpit his sermons are of the sort to make the congregation sit up and take notice.

Francis is just like other boys. His nature is sunny and bright and his fondness for sports is very keen. But in spite of boyishness there is underneath a strain of earnestness forecasting his career. The people of his father's congregation accept his ministrations and sermons with as much seriousness as they do those of the parent. Throughout the state the "boy preacher of Litchfield county" is known and people flock to hear him whenever he comes.

QUEER AD TO LAND BRAINS

Coffee King Arbuckle Put Queer Ad in American Papers to Get Men With Brains to do Big Things.

New York. — The following ad is appearing here: — $1,000,000 and over when he retired; came on salary $700 a year; $3000 salary when he came; retired with several million; $3 per week when he came; has large amount now to his credit.

I can make others rich if I can find the right kind of men. I want several men who have already shown ability, to relieve me in a very large measure so that I can give more attention to my Deep Sea hotel and my Colony for Cripples and Old People, and to start another Colony out west.

Ten thousand dollars salary for my first assistant per year; $5000 salary for my second assistant per year; $2500 salary for my third assistant per year.

Men from wholesale grocery house or mail order houses preferred. Answer only by letter marked "personal," which will be kept strictly confidential. JOHN ARBUCKLE, Arbuckle Bros., New York.

That "want ad" appeared in New York and Chicago papers. John Arbuckle is the millionaire coffee and sugar magnate. He has just come back from Europe, and explained his queer "ad." "It is like this," he said, "I want to get men with brains and ability to do big things. The best way, I have learned, to get such men is to let them know that you want them and tell them what there is in it for them, and the only way to do that is to advertise for them."

ATROCITIES IN TRIPOLI

Report Again Published — War Costs Italy Much.

Rome. — After the capture of Tajura, the Italians found the bodies of former comrades with the limbs severed and others who had been crucified. The corpses of members of the Bersaglieri and other regiments were found in a well, where they had been buried alive and the top walled in.

An additional appropriation of $25,000,000 was made to carry on the war until the end of 1911. Thus the war in three months has cost Italy $90,000,000.

MADE A JOURNAL

A Merry "Ad." That Set All Australia Laughing at a Premier and Made a Mission Ridiculous.

Although the affair happened over thirty years ago, Australia still chuckles when the name of Henderson Africanus is mentioned; for it calls to mind the biggest joke ever perpetrated 'down under' — a joke which made all Australia laugh covered a Premier with ridicule, and firmly established the reputation of the 'Melbourne Punch.'

The joke arose through Premier Berry, of Victoria, being defeated by the Upper House in his effort to change its constitution. He thereupon conceived the idea of sending an embassy to England to persuade the Imperial Government towards his scheme of reforms. The Melbourne Punch,' however, announced that, as there was to be an embassy, both sides should be represented, and promptly proceeded to appoint a "mock embassy" on its own account.

As Proud as a Peacock.

After due deliberation says the 'Newspaper Owner,' the rival "ambassador" was chosen in Henderson Africanus, a full-blooded West Indian negro, who could talk politics by the league.

He was hired at $15 a day, and dressed in the worst-fitting and blackest suit that could be obtained in Melbourne. On his head was a fantastical top-hat just a yard high. In his pocket was a make believe watch, and across his abdominal stomach swung a brass chain large enough to tether a steam-engine. Dressed in this absurd raiment, and as proud as a peacock, Henderson paraded Melbourne, a delighted crowd following him wherever he went. The whole thing was a most extravagant travesty. Of course the nigger took himself seriously as the chief figure in the political pantomime.

A Splendid Circulation-Raiser.

"That Mr. Berry, sah, he have his private secretary, sah. Henderson Africanus want a private secretary, sah,' was his request to 'Punch's' delighted management, and a secretary he was given. The biggest, dirtiest ugliest nigger in Melbourne was hired and dutifully he followed at the "ambassador's" heels as he perambulated the streets. To all and sundry Africanus introduced him gravely, 'My secretary, sah.'"

Everybody in the country was talking about Africanus, while the circulation of the 'Melbourne Punch' went up by leaps and bounds. As the Premier's departure drew near, the paper further elaborated the joke. Public meetings were held to support the black "ambassador." A banquet was given him, to which sixty prominent citizens came and Henderson was brought to the hotel worthy of the magnificence and the importance of his mission. Brass bands blared "See the Conquering Hero Comes," and the populace cheered madly as he drove up to the hotel steps.

Kicked Out.

The joke assumed such proportions that the Premier became quite alarmed, and he and many of his supporters really believed that their opponents intended to keep up the joke in London, and thus cover the whole mission with ridicule. A quiet hint, therefore, was given to the shipping company that, if Henderson was given a passage on the vessel in which the Premier and his friends intended to embark, they would not travel.

Africanus was sent to the shipping office to demand passages for himself and his secretary. He was promptly kicked out. This provoked an outburst of simulated fury. Indignation meetings were held to protest against the outrage put upon a Victorian citizen at the instance of the provoked Ministry, and signatures were subscribed to a petition to the Colonial Secretary at home.

But just at this psychological moment the 'Melbourne Punch' stopped the joke, which had now provided enough good copy and many, many square yards of striking, biting illustrations. The Premier went on his futile mission, and Henderson Africanus took up the humble but honest job of newsvendor. He had done the 'Melbourne Punch' a good service and established it firmly as a public favourite, which on its merits it thoroughly well deserves.

A WITTY BISHOP

Perhaps one of the best definitions of the functions of the House of Lords was that given by Bishop Wilberforce when called upon at a dinner of a City Company, London, of which he was an honorary member, to respond to the toast of "The Lords and Commons." "Gentlemen," said he, "I can only compare our two great legislative Chambers to a clock, of which the House of Commons is the mainspring and the House of Lords the pendulum — a pendulum which wags-wags, wags, the while it keeps the mainspring in order, and prevents the clock from running down."

The story is also told of the manner in which the bishop silenced some young men who endeavoured to drag him into a controversy at a time when a series of tracts, entitled, "The Road to Heaven," was creating a considerable sensation. The bishop however, proved too much for them, merely saying: "The best and only road to Heaven I know is to turn to the right, and go straight on."

Cannie Scotland

A gentleman called at a house in the North of Scotland recently, where there was a family of six sons, in addition to the father and mother.

Noticing that there were only two chairs in the kitchen — presumably for the use of the parents — the visitor asked if the furniture was being saved till the family grew up.

"Na, na," replied the mother; "we're jist keepin' the chairs oot o' sicht, see that the laddies winna wear dune their breeks ower sune!"

Remove Overhead Wires.

We see that an agitation is on concerning the overhead wires, especially in the business section of the city, and we feel that everyone should support this commendable idea, brought up by Fire Chief Howard, to remove this source of danger. The Times has always been in favor of anything that tends to lessen danger to life and property, and we feel that not only would the removal of overhead wires be a step towards the ideal in eliminating dangers, but it would also tend to render our city more attractive, doing away as it would with the unsightly poles which everywhere disfigure our streets.

Romance of Seventeen Years.

A despatch from Saskatoon, Sask., says that the fact that truth is indeed stranger than fiction, has been clearly demonstrated in Saskatoon. It seems that on New Years day Mr. Wm. Francis Rothwell, now of Prince Albert, met Miss Hannah Bonabe, of Walkerton, Ont., whom he had not seen for seventeen years, as he has been following his vocation of engineer and surveyor in India, Egypt and South Africa. They accidentally met in Saskatoon and exchanged New Years' greetings, just as old friends would, and after that they decided to wed. The romantic nature of the marriage has been closely guarded by the young couple, however, as is usual at least one loophole was left unguaraded and these few facts have found their way out.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

At [illegible] daughter went into a shop in town to buy a bonnet. When she had purchased the bonnet the milliner, turning to the woman, said:—"What about a sailor for your daughter?" meaning, of course, a hat. The woman turning to the girl, indignantly retorted—"What about a soger for yourself?"

DRUNKARDS PATRON

When Christians Decided to Merge Bacchus into St. Martin the Reputation of Former Was Handed On To Him.

What has come to be known as St. Martin Summer consists of a few lovely days about the second week of November. We hear a great deal about St. Luke's Summer, but St. Martin's Summer and his name-day, November 11th, suffer neglect,— possibly because the saint was French and not English.

Perhaps, too, the knowledge that he is the patron saint of drunkards has not added to his reputation. That office came to him by accident. The reason how this doubtful honour was thrust upon him after his death was rather curious. The Vinalia, or Feast of Bacchus, was always celebrated on November 11th. Later, when the Christians decided to merge Bacchus into St. Martin, the reputation of the former was unfortunately handed on to the saint, although quite unmerited by him.

Before his conversion he was a military tribune, stationed at Amiens. When one day, so the story goes, in midwinter, as the city gate of Amiens a miserable beggar appealed to him for help, the soldier drew his sword and, dividing his cloak, gave half of it to the wretched beggar. At night, so it is said, Christ in person appeared to the astonished soldier, clad in the very cloak he had divided with the beggar a few hours before.

Another legend is that the saint, having been annoyed by the behaviour of one of the geese in his poultry-yard, ordered it to be slain and served up for dinner. He died immediately after partaking of it, and the anniversary has ever since been observed in France by the eating of goose on that day, November 11th. And even now, when the sunny days of St. Martin's Summer come round, there are but few French people who do not give a passing thought to that kindly saint who divided his cloak so that a poor beggar might be protected from the cold.

LAUGHS WITH JOY! NO MORE INDIGESTION

MONTREAL MAN SO ILL HE THOUGHT HE WOULD DIE OF STOMACH DISORDERS.

Just read what Mr. Larose says of the curative powers of Dr. Hamiltons Pills:

"I suffered from dyspepsia and indigestion for five years. I suffered so much that I could hardly attend to my work. I was weak and lost all courage. I enjoyed no rest until I decided to follow your treatment. To my great surprise I immediately began to feel better. I am now using the second box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I feel so well that I want to tell you that I owe this great change to your famous pills. I recommend Dr. Hamilton's Pills to every person who is suffering from dyspepsia. Your grateful servant D. R. Larose, 338 Joliette St., Montreal, P.Q.

All who have weak stomachs, and those who suffer with indigestion, headaches, biliousness, can be perfectly cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Successfully used for many years, mild and safe. 25c. per box, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

A Good Adv. for the City.

The Canadian Mail, published in London, Eng., devotes two columns of space to this good city in the form of an interview with W. G. Morrow, Mayor of Peterborough. The article, which is laudatory of the growth of the city, its commercial expansion and industrial activity, will be of decided advantage in the way of bringing Peterborough prominently before British capitalists.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS EMERGE TRIUMPHANT FROM EVERY TEST.

Ernest St. Pierre Tells How They Rescued Him From the Tortures of Backache and Bright's Disease.

Le Petit Bois Franc, Temiscouta Co., Que., Jan. 19—(Special)—Ernest St. Pierre, a well-known farmer of this place is telling his neighbors of his almost miraculous cure from Bright's Disease, and he always winds up with:

"I advise all persons suffering from Backache or Bright's Disease to use Dodd's Kidney Pills." For like thousands of other sufferers in Canada Mr. St. Pierre found his cure in the good old Canadian Kidney remedy.

And he indeed was a particularly bad case. His eyes were puffed and swollen, his appetite was fitful and he was always tired and nervous, while the pains in his back made any form of work something to be avoided. Today he is strong and well. Six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills worked the transformation.

More and more in this neighborhood is it becoming a motto, "If the disease is of the kidneys or from the kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it." They have been tried in many cases of backache, rheumatism, lumbago and Bright's disease, and in no case where they have been given a fair trial have they failed to cure.

New Skin Absorber In Great Demand

(National Drug Review)

Since the discovery that mercolized wax possesses remarkable absorbent powers when applied to the skin, the demand for it as a complexion renewer has been tremendous. Druggists in every section report sales as far exceeding those of anything similar they have ever had on their shelves.

The mercolide in the wax, according to Prof. Hoffman, gently absorbs the devitalized cuticle, in minute particles, so that the user gradually loses her old, worn-out complexion, the more youthful under-skin taking its place. Cutaneous eruptions, blotches, moth patches, tan and freckles are of course removed at the same time. As mercolized wax is entirely harmless and easy to use, women all over the country are purchasing it to quickly rejuvenate their complexions. The way is applied to face, neck or hands the same as cold cream, allowed to remain over night, then washed off with warm water.

COSTLY SPITE.

The most expensive act of damage ever committed by a railway worker was that of an Italian navvy employed in the construction of a tunnel through one of the mountains in the Black Forest. Having a grudge against his foreman, he scratched one night an alteration in the position of the sights which marked the course of the work. The excavations were working upon the tunnel in two sections, one from the north and one from the south. Owing to the slanting of the tubes the sections, instead of being joined to the same point, were found to be twenty-six feet apart when they reached the middle of the mountain. The northern half of the tunnel had, therefore, to be entirely reconstructed, at a cost of $375,000.

KING A FARMER

King George is a monarch who does not scorn to make money by methods. From his model farms at Windsor, Balmoral, and Sandringham he derives a handsome revenue, and maintains a herd of several hundred superb cattle, which take prizes at agricultural shows all over the country. His Majesty is also keeping up the late King Edward's interest in the establishment of Sandringham, here in addition to rearing prize-winning hackneys, cobs-hunters, carriage-horses, and hunters.

MONEY FROM INVENTIONS

Many of the scions of European reigning houses are in receipt of big sums from inventions for which they have been responsible.

The reigning Grand Duke of Oldenburg, for example, has invented a form of propeller which most of the German warships and liners use. A collar-stud, which is selling in hundreds of thousands, has been invented by the German Crown Prince. And one of the most up-to-date aeroplanes is the invention of the Grand Duke of Hesse.

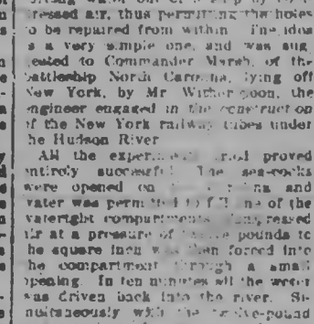
UNSINKABLE SHIPS

New Invention For Forcing Water Out of Ship by Compressed Air, Permitting the Holes to be Repaired from Within.

If all that is claimed for the idea proves correct there will be a revolution in the work of ship-saving in the near future. Indeed, it promises to revolutionize naval warfare, for it is claimed for this new invention that ships can be kept afloat even after being rammed. In fact ships can be made practically unsinkable. The invention is the outcome of a series for forcing water out of a ship by compressed air, thus permitting the holes to be repaired from within. The idea is a very simple one, and was suggested to Commander Marsh, of the battleship North Carolina, lying off New York, by Mr Wilcoxson, the engineer engaged in the construction of the New York railway tubes under the Hudson River.

All the experiments proved entirely successful. The sea-cocks were opened on the [illegible] and water was permitted to fill one of the watertight compartments. Then, raised air at a pressure of twelve pounds to the square inch was then forced into the compartment through a small opening. In ten minutes all the water was driven back into the river. Simultaneously with the twelve-pound pressure into the water-aged compartment compressed air at seven pounds pressure was driven into all the surrounding compartments and a three-pound pressure into the next [illegible] of compartments. This [illegible] necessary to prevent the pressure on the [illegible] and [illegible].

Commander Marsh is most enthusiastic regarding the [illegible]. He points out that the invention now enables them to [illegible] to the [illegible] below water-line from the inside, either after [illegible] or during a naval battle. Ships, he says, are now for the first time practically unsinkable, for the water-tight compartments alone will not keep a ship afloat indefinitely. There is always a leak somewhere. All that is necessary," he continues, "is to install a system of pipes and ranges and attach them to the compressed air plant. Every warship already has such a plant for the purpose of blowing off poisonous and explosive gases, which can be utilized for driving out the water. The whole cost for a battleship is about $400. How is that for a low insurance premium against the sinking of a battleship worth $10,000,000?"



Peruna Secrets You Should Know

Golden Seal Root.

Golden Seal, the root of the above plant, is a very useful medicine. Many people gather it in our rich woodlands during the summer. Few people know how valuable it is in dyspepsia, catarrh, and as a general tonic.

Many thousand pounds of this root are used each year in the famous catarrh remedy, Peruna. This fact explains why everybody uses Peruna for catarrh.

Ask your druggist for a free Peruna Almanac for 1912.

I Am Willing To Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10.00 Worth of Medicine

DR. T. FRANK LYNOTT
who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this medicine, and anyone suffering from these diseases can get a box of it absolutely free. All that is necessary is to send me your address.

I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and pay me if cured. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the Uric Acid sufferers of the world, so I can show them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, nor would I accept it now or later if you sent it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying calls to urinate. But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to listen to anyone thereafter. Happily, I am in a position now to demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to spend any money to find out; I don't ask them to believe me, nor even to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my own cost. That is surely fair.

To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars, which will be used to compound my medicine. Much of it is ready now to be sent out, all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there be thousands of them. And anyone who needs it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have a disease for which this medicine is intended, I ask you to send me some of your leading symptoms. If you have any of the symptoms in the list printed here you need my medicine and if you will write me I will gladly send you a box of it free with full directions for your use. Look the symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, then write me about as follows: "Dear Dr., I notice symptoms number"—here put down the numbers, give your age, full address, and send it to me. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 807 Franklin Building, Toronto, Can.

The ten thousand dollars I am spending for the compounding of my medicine is only a part of the money I am devoting to this cause, for the package of medicine I send you will be fully prepaid at my expense. From my standpoint you view it, YOU incur no expense or obligation. Just tell others who you know are suffering who sent you the medicine that cured you.

I am promising to give away ten thousand dollars' worth of medicine, and I will do that. I am promising to send any sufferer who writes me a box of this medicine and full directions free of charge, and I will do that.

These Are the Symptoms:

1—Pain in the back.
2—Too frequent desire to urinate.
3—Burning or obstruction of urine.
4—Pain or soreness in the bladder.
5—Prostatic troubles.
6—Gas or pain in the stomach.
7—General debility, weak nerves, dizziness.
8—Pain or soreness under right rib.
9—Swelling in any part of the body.
10—Constipation or liver trouble.
11—Palpitation or pain under the heart.
12—Pain in the hip joint.
13—Pain in the nerve centres.
14—Pain or soreness in the kidneys.
15—Pain or swelling of the joints.
16—Pain or swelling of the muscles.
17—Pain and soreness in the nerves.
18—Acute or chronic rheumatism.

SULLIVAN COMING BACK

Mike (Twin) Sullivan, former champion welterweight, who outgrew the class, and who has been having a touch of the quiet life on a farm near Cambridge, Mass., will forsake the cows and chickens and try his luck in the arena again. Mike is to meet Paddy Lavin at Buffalo, and if he wins he will go after the harder nuts in the 150-pound division and the middleweight class. If Mike is right he is hard to beat.

AFTER THE BANTAMWEIGHT

Al Delmont, who has fought Jimmy Walsh about as often as Jim Barry has mixed with Sam Langford, wants to get the bantamweight belt and has challenged Johnny Coulon at 116 pounds. Albert is a great little fighter, but he will not be able to make 116 pounds ringside and Johnny Coulon absolutely refuses to make a lower weight for any star.

McGOORTY IN ENGLAND

Eddie McGoorty, Wisconsin middleweight, is in England again this winter, as his manager, Patsy Callahan, has received an invitation to box Jim Sullivan at the National Sporting club.

BUILDERS' PROFITS with Bankers' Security

100,000 SHARES AT $1.00

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has been organized recently with an authorized capital of $500,000, to do a general building, real estate, and insurance business, and is actively engaged in Vancouver and Victoria—two most promising fields. The profits from building houses for cash and selling on instalments is well known, and will be one of the principal channels from which profits will be derived. BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS. LIMITED, has its own building department and architect, and does its own construction. In addition to building houses, BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS. LIMITED, has its real estate department, where it carries on a general real estate business, discounting agreements of Sale, subdividing and transacting a general insurance business.

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS LIMITED, is a new concern, having been in business less than two months in Vancouver, but is becoming well known as the Company without any promotion shares and with a strong board of directors, made up of well known Vancouver and Victoria business men.

Shareholders may conservatively look for a 10 per cent dividend the first year, increasing thereafter and a steady advance in the value of their shares caused by the substantial reserve it will always be the policy of the directors to build up.

Companies run on similar lines, notably the Los Angeles Investment Company and "Home Builders," both of Los Angeles, have proved phenominally successful, the former, which has been in business some sixteen years, having accumulated assets of over $6.000.000, and paying 28 per cent. dividends; and the latter, which started business three years ago, with only $1.250 capital, has assets to-day of over $1,089,000, a surplus of over $308,000, is paying 17 per cent. dividends, and its $1.00 shares are selling at $2.30.

FIRST ISSUE OF SHARES.

100,000 Thousand Shares are offered at $1.00 per share. 44,500 of which have been subscribed. These shares may be purchased for cash or on the instalment plan. $10.00 cash and $5.00 per month handles 100 shares Mail your subscription To-day.

KINGS IN TRADE

Most of the Monarchs of Europe Have Made Fortunes by Shrewd Speculation in Business Undertakings.

Monarchs are not above making money. And perhaps the Kaiser should be given first place among reigning Sovereigns for shrewd commercialism. He makes a strong point of cultivating the friendship of financial magnates, not only in his own, but in other countries as well.

The Kaiser has some very large holdings in the Hamburg-American Steamship Line. He is extensively interested in the diamond-mine enterprises of German West Africa. In connection with the vast forests comprised in the Crown domains and on his private estates, he carries on a large lumber business. His horse-breeding establishment in Western Prussia brings him in a handsome revenue. He is the principal stakeholder in the municipal lager-beer brewery at Hanover. And he carries on an extensive manufactory of pottery on his private estates at Cadinen.

GATHERING GOLDEN GRAIN

Gustavius, the present ruler of the Swedes, is a total abstainer. On coming to the throne, he disposed of his late father's extensive brewing interests. But he still retains many other profitable investments. He has money in mills and mines, and he seldom neglects to extol the virtues of the Grand Hotel at Stockholm, in which he is by far the largest shareholder.

He is a successful speculative builder. In this way: When property in the slum districts of the Swedish metropolis is going dirt cheap, along comes the King and buys it. And soon on the sites of the dilapidated buildings rise handsome houses and thoroughfares which increase the value of the property many times over.

Few monarchs have shown themselves cleverer managers of a wife's property than the King of Denmark. By shrewd investments he has already multiplied its value many times. In a large number of his enterprises he is associated with his Royal brother, King George of Greece, who possesses an immense fortune, which he owes in a great measure to undertaking certain operations in American grain about thirty-five years ago, which the closing of Odessa and other Southern Russian seaports to the export of grain, owing to the war with Turkey, rendered extremely profitable.

From the sale of beer, the Prince Regent of Bavaria draws immense sums. In Munich are grim, dirty taverns in which the Royal Court beer has been sold for the last three centuries. You never see a waiter or waitress. You must attend to your own wants, whether you be prince or peasant. Indeed when the Kaiser visited Munich, he and the Bavarian Princes took their places in line, and awaited their turn for a stein, which they [illegible]

"Just got it."

"Had any experience with cars?"

"No."

"Going to run it yourself?"

"I am."

"Can you mend a punctured tyre?"

"No."

"Wouldn't know the first thing to do?"

"Not the first thing."

"Have you studied, read, or been given any advice?"

"No; I tell you I don't know anything about them."

"How far do you want to go?"

"Just as far as the thing will go."

"All right. I'll come with you."

"What! Why, I didn't dream you'd accept my invitation."

"Why not?"

"I didn't think you'd care to go out in a motor-car with a man who doesn't know anything about it."

"Nonsense! You're just the man."

"How's that?"

"Simply because, my friend, if we break down, we'll drop the machine and get home by train. But if you thought you knew anything about it, you'd spend the rest of the day trying to put it right, while I'd have to stay and suffer with you as a matter of common courtesy."

Miss Younger: "No doubt you could—and never miss them."

Roast Steak Boiled

If properly cooked boiled round steak will be rare, tender and juicy. Plunge the meat into sufficient boiling water to cover, boil rapidly for fifteen minutes, then push the kettle over a slow fire where it will simmer at one hundred and eighty degrees Fahrenheit for fifteen minutes to each pound of beef. Serve the beef with cream horseradish sauce, boiled turnips or cabbage and potatoes.

"Silver Greyhounds."

A Home Recipe For Wrinkled, Shaggy Skin
(From Beauty and Health)
The famous saxolite lotion which is recommended by beauty specialists for the removal of wrinkles and for reducing distended pores, can be made at home. Ask your druggist for saxolite in powdered form, 1 oz., and ½ pint witch hazel. Dissolve the powder in the witch hazel and bathe the face, neck and hands in the solution. Results are remarkable, and instantaneous. The skin tightens, and this naturally reduces the wrinkles, as well as creases or folds about the neck, cheeks or hands. The tissue and muscle beneath the skin also become firmer and more solid.
One feels much refreshed and exhilarated after using this truly wonderful preparation. Its continued use for only a short time will make one look five or ten years younger.

When you have a bilious attack give Chamberlain's Tablets a trial. They are excellent. For sale by all dealers.

THE CANADIAN NAVY

By C. Fredereck Hamilton

Copyright by Publishers Fee Press, Montreal

The late government embarked upon a very big, a very expensive and a very protracted piece of work in attempting to organise a naval force of our own. It is important that we should have clear ideas as to what we want; that we should set about our work in accordance with a sound plan; and that we should do nothing now which will at a later stage work mischief.

First with regard to our object. We are building a navy to be useful in Imperial wars. An Imperial war is likely to spread itself over a very large proportion of the earth's surface, and so large a theatre of operations, will divide itself into primary and secondary fields of action; into regions where the big fighting is done, and into regions where less important fighting is done. In an Imperial war Canada might be the scene of the big fighting, but she is rather more likely to be a secondary sphere of operations, that is, those where the great fleets will contend on the other side of one or other of the oceans which touch her shores, and may run the danger of annoyance by casual raidings from detached cruisers of the enemy. Thus there are many important sorts of work a Canadian Naval Service may conceivably do in watching at defending the extensive coast-line secondary attacks leading off the Royal Navy to look after the big fighting; and it may ship engines, and desire further to bear a hand in the big fighting. Of course the statesman's the earliest duty to which we must address ourselves. The Canadian coast-line, Canadian [illegible] waters, Canadian ends of ocean trade routes, must be protected. When that is done we may help in the more operations.

I am wholly in favour of going further of taking part in the main operations of any Imperial war, and of organizing our service from the outset with this in view. For us to do nothing but attend to our local defence, leaving the care of the main war to Great Britain, or rather to the rest of the Empire would be like a man undertaking to keep the grass cut on his lawn, but leaving his father and brothers to pay the rent of the house. So long as the main fighting is on the other side of the ocean, very slight forces usually will suffice for strictly local defence. The cruisers which an enemy would spare for the purpose of harassing a secondary sphere of operations, such as the Canadian coast would be, if the main operations were in the North Sea, or off the coast of Australia, as a rule, would be few and weak and could be driven away by a few ships of no great strength. The real fighting on our behalf would be done by the big British fleet far away; and if that fleet were beaten, the enemy would soon place upon our coasts a force with which no local defence squadron could cope. Our plight would be like that of the man already mentioned if the family were to be pulled while he [illegible] his lawn tidy. He would be turned out of his house, no matter how close he had kept the grass trimmed. A few armoured cruisers would make short work of a force amply strong enough for secondary local defence. Thus, to take part in our own real defence we must help in the main battle.

Thus I maintain that we should organize our Canadian Naval Service from the start with the idea that it shall be ready to go anywhere and do any sort of British fighting-work that the ships can do. The Canadian officer, the Canadian sailor, must not go about his business with the idea that he is to be tied by the leg to the Canadian coast-line, never to leave it. he is to be tied by the leg to the do coastal work on our own shores; to patrol trade routes that may be distinct from Canada; to serve in fleets at the other side of this ocean or that ocean. Whatever he does he will be serving Canada if he is serving the Empire.

I leave to one side the question of the sort of ships we should buy or build. The important thing is the men we train, and the spirit in which we train them. Good officers, good men, well educated, well trained, well disciplined, skilful and brave, are far more necessary than good ships. If the Japanese and Russians had changed ships before Tsu-Shima the result would have been the same in most British naval victories the enemy had the better ships. I am infinitely more concerned in the men we train, than in the ships we provide for them.

Thus we seem to have arrived at two needs of the situation.

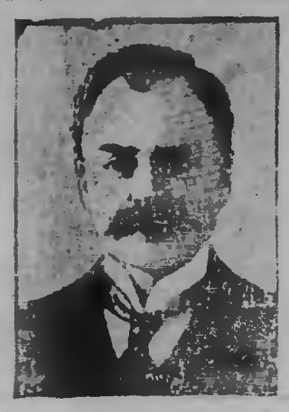
1. The Canadian public must recognize that its ships must act sometimes on the Canadian coast-line and sometimes away from it; that its ships will be doing it service even when across the ocean. It must be willing to see its ships sent hither and thither as the situation demands.

2. The Canadian seamen must be trained in the idea that they must serve anywhere in the world. They must not be taken by surprise at an order to cross the Atlantic and report to the Admiral in command of such and such a fleet.

When I lay down this latter condition, I demand a great deal. It will not do for our men merely to be willing. They must also be skilful. The business of handling ships is skilled work in the very highest sense. It is one thing for a captain to command a single ship and make her efficient for solitary service: it is another thing for him to command a ship which is one of a squadron.

3. Our Canadian forces must constantly practice in peace time with the big fleets of the Royal Navy. They cannot play by themselves in their own little corner and then expect when war comes to be able to play in the Big game.

I leave that aspect of the case and pass to another. Ours is bound to be a small force. Any small force is bound to suffer from slowness of promotion. If we have only a dozen or so ships, the commands, posts, billets, etc., will be very few. Our first batch of officers will rise very rapidly, will reach the top ranks at very early ages, and then will stay there till grey-headed; and meanwhile the men of the second and third batches will be kept down. Thus after a while we shall have small cruisers commanded by men of sixty, and have lieutenants of fifty and more. That is very bad in many ways, but chiefly in this, that men often are at their best for certain commands at early ages. Kipling's Sub probably was only twenty one. Torpedo craft are put into the hands of very young men. King George commanded Torpedo boat No. 79 when 24 years old, and did a very pretty piece of seamanship in her; commanded the Thrush, a sunbeat of some size, when 25. In the British Royal Navy great efforts are made to ensure youth in officers who are given commands.



HON. J. D. HAZEN,
Minister of Marine and Fisheries

[illegible] on the whole [illegible] that in most [illegible] there should hold [illegible] of high prizes towards [illegible] may aspire. The Royal Navy has [illegible] officers on the active list, and there are other prizes [illegible] such posts could a small Canadian Navy afford?

A Canadian boy entering it would be very fortunate to rise to be admiral, and really would have a chance of becoming anything higher than a captain. I need not enlarge on the subject: it presents many points of great importance.

This set of considerations is driven home by the fact that it is part of the whole problem of Standardization of interchangeability. It is all right to have one part of the great Imperial [illegible] part owned by Canada, a third part owned by Australia, and so on. But it is absolutely necessary to have all these parts trained to the same standard. The Canadian admirals must be animated by the same strategical principles as British Admirals. The staff and intelligence systems must be identical. The guns must use the same ammunition. The systems and standards of gunnery and signalling must be the same. If the British interests are to be entrusted to the protection of Canadian ships and Canadian interests to the protection of British ships, the officer of each must feel they can rely on the officers of the other, and so they must know each other intimately.

Actuated by these several considerations, I put forward this proposal: let the ships be owned by Canada. Let them be maintained by Canada and administered by Canada. Let Canada maintain her list of officers, sufficient in number to man these ships. But let us make an arrangement with the Admiralty whereby there will be a common list of officers for the British, Canadian, Australian and New Zealand Navies. Let each Nation have on that list a proportion of officers roughly adjusted to the sign of its field.

Once we arrange that, several plans could be followed. We might arrange that Canadian officers should serve in alternate commissions in Canadian and in other vessels; or we might let them take their chances in the whole big service, content that if an Englishman commanded a Canadian Cruiser off Esquimault, and an Australian a Canadian ship working out of Halifax a Canadian would be commanding a battleship in the North Sea and another Canadian a ship on the coast of South Africa. I should regard the latter as the preferable scheme. Observe this feature of the arrangement and I advocate—that numerous prizes would offer themselves to the Canadian lad entering the service, and that a Canadian who showed aptitude could hope to rise to be a British Admiral. Of course, the British officers posted to Canadian ships would be under the control of the Canadian authorities just as the British soldier officers lent to Canada are under the control of our Militia Department.

I urge this as a great need of the situation. Separatism will be a great danger to the actual efficiency of the force in which we expect to take so much pride. We cannot hope to be better than the Royal Navy. Let us resolve to be as good. The only way to achieve that is to standardise our forces—to keep our officers and our ships in the Big Navy.

In Local Option Centres.

Our local option friends will be interested in the deputation from Strathroy, Midland, Bowmanville and Tweddington which waited upon the Provincial Secretary to ask for an amendment to the Brewers' and Distillers' License Act, to make it illegal to store intoxicating liquor for sale or delivery in local option districts. The usual "consideration" was promised the deputation.

Bogus Bank Bills.

The officers of the Northern Crown Bank are issuing warnings to branches and to other banks to be on the lookout for bogus ten dollar Crown Bank bills. One of these bills has already been passed despite the fact that the paper is of a very poor quality, and the workmanship is very faulty, especially on the back of the bill.

MY LADY'S COLUMN.

RIBBON PAINTING

A vogue which will commend itself to the home artist is the use of hand-painted ribbon for trimming evening and other gowns. Both silk and satin ribbon are treated to water-colour designs of a "sketchy" artistic type usually in colours of "chintzy" suggestion, or imitative of Japanese colour schemes with the "Chinese" lines, pure greens and reds, and inevitable touch of black.

A broad satin ribbon hand-painted in a bold conventional design makes an excellent skirt "band" of the fashionable kind. It can, if desired, be veiled with chiffon, in order to produce the attractive "blurred" effect so well liked this season. Moreover ribbons serve to trim tunics and magyar blouses, the edges of the ribbon being turned under to make [illegible] simulate piece satin, or a beaded edge can be worked over the selvedge to beads coloured like the painted design. It is an original detail of this character which just now distinguishes the most expensive gown.

Some Sickroom Rules

The doctor's orders must be scrupulously obeyed. The patient should be in a room as remote as possible from the "bustle" of the house. The window should, as a rule, be kept open, but there must be no draughts. The fire must be mended quietly — not with tongs, but with gloved fingers. The nurse's dress should be simple, washable, and make no rustling sounds. The patient must not be regaled with minute accounts of the terrible illnesses of other people. The household worries must not be mentioned in the sick-room. The patient's meals — no matter how simple they are — must be served up daintily, with specially attractive tray-cloths and china. Flowers must be taken out of the room at night. Visitors must be admitted with the doctor's permission, and not otherwise.

A Mother's Creed

Mrs. Osora S. Davis gives the following beautiful "mother's creed":

I believe in the eternal importance of the home as the fundamental institution of society.

I believe in the immeasurable possibilities of every boy and girl.

I believe in the imagination, the trust, the hopes, and the ideals which dwell in the hearts of all children.

I believe in the beauty of nature, of art, of books, and of friendship.

I believe in the satisfaction of duty.

I believe in the little homely joys of everyday life.

I believe in the goodness of the great design which lies behind our complete world.

I believe in the safety and peace which surround us all, through the ever-brooding love of God.

To Cure Forehead Creases

A perfectly smooth brow is not the least of youth's enviable possessions, [illegible] which makes a "trilogy" style of hairdressing best becoming just when the forehead begin, to record the wear and tear of time.

For the heavy lines known as "frown marks" the beauty doctors advocate what they call "wrinkle plasters." The lines are pressed out with the fingers, and the plaster is applied while the "frown mark" is thus forcibly held in abeyance. The plaster should be applied, it seems, every time one proposes to go into a "brown study," as well as during sleep.

To eradicate the fine lines, flannel wrung out of hot water and laid on the forehead for ten minutes at a time, and followed by a similarly lengthy dabbing not rubbing, with olive oil is the treatment prescribed. Adopted twice a day for a fortnight, these means are said to ensure a smooth white brow. The oil must be freely applied, as it is the oil which feeds the wasted tissues that cause the lines.

Browned Crumbs.

Keep all scraps of crust until there is a good quantity; cut off any black bits, and put the rest on a baking-tin in the oven until they are a bright golden brown all over and quite crisp. Then pound them in a mortar, or, if there is not one available, put them between two pieces of paper and smash them with a rolling-pin. Next pass them through a sieve—this ensures them being all of one size. Put them in a tin with a tight-fitting lid.

These crumbs are useful for shaking over boiled ham or bacon, and can often be used for puddings instead of white crumbs, giving the mixture a richer appearance.

Seared Round Steak

Have the butcher cut the steak thick. Lay it on your meat-board, sprinkle lightly with flour and pound until the flour disappears. Continue this, turning the steak over occasionally, until about half a cupful of flour to one pound of steak has been used. Put a little butter or suet in the frying-pan and heat smoking hot. Sear the steak on both sides, being careful not to burn. Now add a little hot water, about a cupful, cover closely, and set back to simmer for about half an hour. Add more water if necessary. Season with butter, pepper and salt just before serving. You will have a rich, brown gravy, which may be thickened if liked.

What poverty is like that of moral penury? When the head is poor, what mockery is money wealth!

Few people regret the times when they were silent, but many regret and often suffer because of imprudent speech.

The Apostolic Faith Mission.

A religious work has just been started in our city under the above name. Meetings on Sundays will be held in the Princess Theatre, at 3 o'clock p.m., and half past seven in the evening, and during the week as soon as a suitable place can be obtained, every evening commencing at half past seven. The object is the preaching of the whole Gospel of Christ, which embraces not only salvation from sin, but also the baptism in the Holy Ghost for believers and Divine healing for sickness and disease, and this is for all, who will accept the finished work of Christ upon the Cross. Read Matthew 8—11, and kindred passages. All will be made welcome—Come.

This is a real old fashioned January thaw the weather man is handing us.

Rev. J. A. Potter, late pastor of St. Andrew's church, in a letter to a friend, says that his work is progressing in Montreal, with splendid promise.

The roof over the Boys' Department of the Y.M.C.A. is leaking very badly making a veritable free shower bath.

Some buildings are so loaded with gigantic icicles that one really risks his life in walking along under them.

Owing to the unreasonable rainfall our streets are very slippery, rendering walking extremely hazardous.

We are informed that the roads in the country are very bad owing to the thaw and depth of snow, causing slumping.

Mr. J. A. Harper, is in Montreal for a few days on business for the Matthews-Laing Company, Limited.

The friends of Mrs. J. A. Reid, formerly of this city will be pleased to learn that she is recovering from a critical operation for appendicitis, in the Brett Hospital, Banff, Alta.

You will find that druggists everywhere speak well of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. They know from long experience in the sale of it that in cases of coughs and colds it can always be depended upon, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all dealers.

KING EDWARD VACUM CLEANER

You cannot clean carpets, rugs and furniture by beating. If you think you have, just try a KING EDWARD VACUUM CLEANER and you will find the article full of dust, which breeds disease.

The KING EDWARD HAND MACHINE has no equal as compared with other hand machines. It is lighter to operate and its suction is much stronger. Its suction is stronger than many of the power machines, and the distance it draws away with. On account of the short stroke one person can operate it on carpets and rugs equally as well as two, and it is about half the weight of other hand machines to carry up and down stairs or from one room to another. It is sold for less money than any of the hand machines. All machines are guaranteed.

More clothes are rubbed out than worn out. GOLD DUST saves rubbing and saves your clothes

Do not use Soap, Naphtha, Borax, Soda, Ammonia or Kerosene with GOLD DUST.

GOLD DUST has all desirable cleansing qualities in a perfectly harmless and lasting form. The GOLD DUST TWINS need no outside help.

GOLD DUST lathers instantly in hot or cold, hard or soft water—converts itself instantly into thick, vigorous suds that remove grease, grime and settled stains and clear out germs and impurities. It leaves only cleanliness and wholesomeness in their wake.

GOLD DUST spares you and protects your clothes from washboard wear.

Save yourself long hours of weary, dreary toil, and double the life of your clothes by buying and trying a package of GOLD DUST next wash-day.

GOLD DUST is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package offers greater economy.

Pumping Station Satisfactory.

The City Engineer, City Clerk Armstrong, Mayor Bradburn and several of the City Fathers paid a visit of inspection to the Romaine street sewer and south end pumping station and everything was given a fair test while the inspection was going on. The city officials are highly pleased with the work and Mr. Armstrong will make a report in the course of a week or so, it is expected. Then we will be able to publish further details of the facts.

Tobogganing on Sunday.

The question is now before the council whether we shall enjoy the sport of tobogganing on Sundays or not, and City Solicitor Johnston is looking up the law on the matter. He finds that in 1891 a by-law was passed prohibiting the holding of certain meetings in Queen's Park, and as it still stands good, why could not a similar by-law be passed by the City Council to prevent people congregating at the park slides on Sunday.

THREE MILLION MATCHES
Fifteen Hundred Billion is the Number of Matches Used Annually by the Entire World for Smoking.

It has been estimated that, for each minute of time, the civilized nations of the world strike three million matches. This is said to be the average for every minute of the twenty-four hours of the day. Fifteen hundred billion is the number for the entire year.

The importance of the industry which turns out the little splinters of wood tipped with sulphur or some other material ignited by friction, is only recognized when the average smoker tries to contemplate his predicament if he had to go back to the time when he had to coax a spark from a tinder-box. Small and insignificant as it is, the match demands as much attention in the choice of the wood involved in its manufacture as any other forest product. Only the choicest portions of the best trees are suitable. Sapwood, knotty or cross-grained timber will not do. Instead of being a by-product, the little match is turned out at hundreds of mills over the country where the by-products are bulky objects like doors, sashes, shingles, sidings, posts, and cord-woods. The pines, linden, aspen, white cedar, poplar, birch and willow are the most suitable match timbers.

IT IS VERY STRANGE
How the Men Who Know All — Who Heard That Years Ago — Can Be Taken Down.

Most of us have met at some time or other that man who "knows it all," who has heard that years ago, and knows everything under the sun worth knowing.

When next you run up against him, ask him how many five cent bits, laid side by side, it would take to cover the surface of a half-dollar without overlapping the edge. He may suggest four, and may probably regard you with suspicion when you inform him that not even two of little coins can be so arranged.

When he has digested this marvel, ask him which city is the farther east — Edinburgh or Liverpool — and note the look of humility on his face when you produce a map and prove to him that Liverpool enjoys that distinction!

If he is still cocksure about things in general, get him to tell you how many pennies, piled one on the other, it takes to equal the height of a quarter. Mindful of his previous failure, he may hazard eight or nine, when you promptly pulverise him with the fact that fourteen are required.

If, however, he is still obdurate, ask him how far the human eye can see on a clear day. He may say thirty or forty miles, whereupon you complete his discomfiture by informing him that ninety-five million miles is nearer the mark — the distance of the earth from the sun.

Birth Stones.

For ages certain gems have been allotted to the months, each with its significance. The list given below is one generally accepted:—

January—Garnet. Constancy and fidelity.
February—Pearl or amethyst: Purity, peace of mind.
March—Jacinth or bloodstoned Courage in affection.
April—Diamond: Unchanging affection.
May—Emerald: Ensures happiness in love and domestic felicity.
June—Agate: Ensures long life, health, and prosperity.
July—Ruby: Exempts from love doubts and anxiety.
August—Moonstone: A charm for conjugal felicity.
September — Sapphire: Ensures cheerfulness.
October—Opal: Helpfulness and happy faith.
November — Topaz: Fidelity in friendship.
December — Turquoise: Success, happiness, and many friends.

The Prodigal's Return

Larry could not get on very well with his people at home, so he enlisted, and, after a time, went to India.

After some years he returned to his native village. How surprised the old folks would be! He walked along the village street in his smart-looking uniform, his heart beating fast as he neared the old home. Opening the gate, he stepped up the gravel path. Just then a ferocious dog rushed out and grabbed the soldier's leg. Shaking the dog off, he speedily regained the road, and was standing on the other side of the fence when his old father came out.

"Ah! my son," said the old man, "like the prodigal, you have returned."

"Yes," growled the soldier; "but it's your confounded dog that's employed the fatted calf."

A Junior School Boys' Hockey League to be known as the Big Four, has been organized at the Y.M.C.A., all practices and all games to be played at the Y. rink.

People should take particular care in shovelling off their roofs, as the falling snow, loaded with ice as it is, is liable to test the resistance of some unfortunate's cranium.

SPORTING COLUMN.

ENGLISHMEN AND OLYMPIC GAMES.

To win the Olympic games seems to be the ruling passion of a large number of Englishmen, just now. The wave of patriotism is sweeping in England. The cry for Olympic material has reached national proportions.

Englishmen have always been wonderful distance runners. They have been weak at the sprints and in some of the field events.

The effort now being made is to find men capable of holding the old country on the field and in the sprints in the hope that the distance runners

HARRY GREEN
will "bring home the bacon."

Two of the best amateurs in England are Harry Green, a marathon runner of ability and W. Scott, England's 10-mile champion.

LACROSSE ON SKATES

A new game is being introduced in Regina this winter, lacrosse on skates. It has been tried and accepted by the sportsmen in Eastern Ontario, and will be given a trial. It is played by seven-men teams, who line up as they would on a lacrosse green. A soft ball is used and players are not allowed to raise their sticks above the shoulders. An offender against this is sent to the penalty box. The rule makes underhand [illegible]

The Rough Riders are instituting the game in Regina, and are ready to meet any team in town that would like to take a whirl at it. They organized at a meeting held in the Palmer House, when the following officers were elected:

Honorary president, A. W. McIvor; president, Geo. Harper; vice-president, C. N. Galvin; secretary, Chas. Wood; treasurer, A. A. Fisher; manager, Wm. Dogan.

The following players will be in the line-up: L. Arnold, A. Urquhart, F. Harper; H. Hall, W. Dogan, J. Stapleton Barlow, D. Hopp and Jimmie McLaughlin.

VARIETY OF HOLES IN GOLF

The up-to-date golf architects generally agree nowadays that in the arrangement of courses that mean something there should be a complete variety of holes not only as to length, but in their character, the way in which they are bunkered, the kind of tee shot that is required at them, and last, but not least, the kind of approach. In every case the putting greens should be thoroughly well guarded.

It has also been claimed that the shorter the hole the, smaller should be the green and the more closely it should be guarded, so that on this principle when in good play a long shot can reach the green which should be fairly large and open in order to give the player encouragement to which he is entitled.

In this subject, however, there must ever be difference of opinion. There are those who argue that it is wrong to say that a fairly long course is a sufficient test to select the best golfer out of a field of any fifty or one hundred competitors. In other words, no course can be a thorough test of the skill and nerve of the player which has not so closely guarded greens that on occasions there is but one, and that a most skillful shot, by which the long approach can get home.

FOOTBALL

How sports, once only followed in the British Empire, have become popular all over the world, is again illustrated by Association football. Its growth has been rapid and its popularity is by on means confined to the white race. Some of the native teams in the ramparts of Empire are capable of showing really good football, all of which is satisfactory. How other nations have taken to "soccer," rather comes home to one through Fulham having tried Hussein Hegazi as centre forward on Saturday, against Stockport. He is an Egyptian, who showed capital form against English teams at Cairo before coming to England a few months ago. His play in England was closely watched, and he shaped very well for a first appearance in an important game.

The Little Chap — We're getting up a tug-o'-war between the married and single men. You're married, aren't you?

The American — No, I've just been seasick, that's why I look that way.

The Dewa-Treddra.

A certain battalion — the Terrors" — possessed but a very small band. The commanding officer's feet — he was a burly farmer — were — well, very large. One day the battalion was to march out, but the music was not forthcoming.

"Where on earth is the band?" queried the adjutant.

For some time there was no reply; but when the question was repeated, a gruff voice was heard from the rear rank:—

"I do believe, sir, the colonel trod on it by accident."

WHO'S WHO IN CANADA

SIR ROBT. PERKS, BART.
Financier and Engineer

Capital combined with foresight and industrial confidence, coupled with untiring energy and zeal, are among the requirements and in having these Canada can thank her great men. They have developed and are still developing her resources and making the brand "Made in Canada" favorably known in the marts of the world. The position which the Dominion has assumed, not only as the foremost of the outlying sections of the British Empire but in the estimation of all civilized nations, is a tribute to her great men and a striking evidence that our opportunities have not been neglected.

SIR ROBT. PERKS, BART.

And though Sir Robt. Perks is not a Canadian his interests lately have been largely in this country particularly with his Georgian Bay scheme. A man who has sufficient confidence in Canada as to offer to invest millions of dollars of his own and friends must see a large future for the country.

HON. ADAM BECK
Toronto.

Canada's water powers are greater than those of any other country in the world. Her known or estimated flow development is about twenty-six million horse power, but it is certain that this is but a fraction of her water power assets.

So far the computation has been dependent upon somewhat unreliable statistics, but the energy displayed by the Conservation Commission has had beneficial results. This important body has stirred to action some indifferent provincial authorities, and there is now the prospect that by next Spring a complete table of waterpowers in the Dominion will be ready to place before the public, along with much valuable information relating thereto. It may be said in passing that the provincial governments for the most part have been negligent in the matter, and it is only where the federal government has control and responsibility that accurate information has up till the present time been available.

It is not the intention of the writer to convey the idea that all of the provinces have stupidly sat by and left the power question alone. There is the very notable exception of Ontario, where the Hydro-Electric Commission has done a wonderful work in developing cheap power for the people of that province. But none the less the province of Ontario has not gone to the trouble of accurately estimating the water powers of New Ontario or the great hinterland beyond.

The Hydro-Electric Commission, with which the name of the Hon. Adam Beck will always be associated, has an immense scheme under way to give the people of the whole province the cheapest possible light, heat and power that electricity can give. In general the proposal is that the power at Niagara will supply western and southwestern Ontario, from the rapids on the St. Lawrence will be derived the power for eastern Ontario from the vicinity of Ottawa will come the power for northeastern and central Ontario, while there are enough water powers in New Ontario to supply the whole of the north and the north central. Thus Ontario will have, unless it is interfered with, a complete network of transmission lines to supply every village.

Mr. Beck who was born in Waterloo Ont. in 1857 is a successful business man as well as thorough sportsman and public man. He is member of many societies and orders

"Silver Greyhounds."

The King's messengers are termed "Silver Greyhounds," because their badge of office consists of a silver greyhound surmounted by an Imperial crown attached to a red ribbon. The badge is always carried by a King's messenger, and in the times of war becomes part of his passport from one country to another. The salary of a King's messenger ranges from $1250 to $2000 a year. King's messengers, it might be mentioned, are nearly always Army men, who leave their regiments to undertake the business of carrying the King's official messages to all parts of Europe.

The visit of the Scottish curlers will be quite an event in the history of curling in Peterborough. Arrangements have been made to tender the visitors a banquet, which will take place on Monday evening in the Masonic Hall, at 5.30 p.m.

A Good Move.

Here is an idea that might be put into practice in Peterborough. In some places, policemen are obliged to take an examination in first aid work, so that they will be able to act before the arrival of a physician in case of accident, etc. It is a good move, but in Peterborough the physician usually arrives ahead of the policeman.

Cold in the North Country.

A letter to The Times from Mr. Wm. Gallon, clerk of Burleigh, Apsley, states that the thermometer registered 50 below zero on Saturday last. At Purdy's Mills it was 52. With local option in force in Chandos this is pretty hard on the average citizen in that township who believes in taking a "wee drop" to keep out the cold.

Mr. LeClair's many acquaintances extend their sympathy in this his sad bereavement.

A SPLENDID ADDRESS.

Delivered at the Normal School Last Night by Principal Falconer.

Last night principal Falconer, of Toronto University, delivered a lecture at the Normal school, entitled, "An Idea of Progress."

As naturally expected, the address was a rich intellectual treat to those who were fortunate enough to be present, the large portion of whom were students of the school.

The usual vote of thanks was passed to the distinguished lecturer for the great treat afforded.

Big G For 30 Years the Standard Remedy for

Diseases of Mucous Membranes

Experienced pharmacists will tell you Big G is the accepted standard remedy for diseases of mucous membranes—discharges from the nose, throat and urinary organs. Avoid substitutes. To expert it is dangerous. Big G, used everywhere since 1889, has proved safe and reliable. Non-astringent, non-poisonous and feeds in its properties, cannot cause other disease, stop suddenly, gripe, sicken, or any unpleasantness, it may be used full strength with ease. NEW COAL COMPANY TO BEGIN BUSINESS.

The Times was informed by a well-known citizen that a new Coal Company had decided to start business in Peterborough. It is said that those engaged in that occupation here have been holding up prices beyond what they should be. This may or may not be true, but there is no doubt that the prices for coal are practically the same amongst the local dealers. The following were the prevailing prices in October last in the following places:—

Peterborough, hard, per ton	$7.50
Peterborough, soft, per ton	5.25
Omemee, hard, per ton	6.25
Omemee, soft, per ton	5.00
Fenelon Falls, per ton, hard	7.00

These are only two of the points lose by from which prices were quoted The Times. We will endeavour to furnish further quotations later on.

Temperance Field Day Sunday January 28

A laudable effort is being put forth by the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Temperance Alliance to educate the public in both the legal and the moral aspects of the temperance question. The holding of a County Field Day as part of this educational program. On that occasion representatives of the Alliance speak in every ... The addresses vary according to circumstances, but the general subject of temperance is not lost sight of, and almost every feature of the temperance question is discussed some time or other.

Last year nearly three thousand meetings were held and the educational value of such a propaganda can scarcely be over-estimated. The Field Day in Peterborough will be held on January 28th. Many pulpits in the County, and several in the city, will be occupied by representatives of the Alliance.

Two meetings will be held in the Opera House, Peterborough. One of them will be for men only at 4 o'clock, and the other, open to all, will be held at 8.15. Mr. Howard Russell, winner of one of Earl Grey's medals, will sing at each meeting, and addresses will be delivered by Rev. R. M. Hamilton, B. A., Field Secretary; Rev. Dr. R. H. Abraham, Rev. B. H. ...pence, General Secretary; and Rev. Professor Hallam of Wycliffe College, Toronto.

Norwood, Jan. 17.

Mr. Benjamin McMillen of Winnipeg Man., is visiting his parents in town.

We regret to report the sad accident which befell the little daughter of Mr. W. Gilders on Friday. The little tot knocked down a dish of burnt matches on one of the registers and it is supposed that among them was a broken match which ignited on the hot register, and in a few seconds the little girl was in flames. She was badly burnt about the face and breast before her mother was able to put out the flames, and for several days was not expected to live, but the latest report is that she is improving rapidly.

Mr. R. H. Elphick of Peterborough, spent the week-end in town.

Miss Jopling, of Peterborough, is visiting her cousin, Mrs. Alex. Kempt

Miss Pearl Haskill of Toronto, visited Norwood last week.

Mr. Wm. Finlay is spending a few weeks in Tweed.

Mr. W. Andrews of Havelock, visited friends in Norwood Sunday.

A very quiet, but pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, the 10th inst., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Whyte, when their eldest daughter, Beatrice Frances, became the wife of Mr. Frederick Vivian Haskill, formerly of Peterborough. The bride was attired in pink, stencilled chiffon over pink satin during the ceremony and travelled in a black velvet suit and white picture hat. Mr. and Mrs. Haskill left on the four o'clock train for Toronto. Their many Norwood friends wish them a long life of happiness and prosperity.

Mr. Marsland, manager of the Union Bank, has been transferred to Smithville. Mr. Woolcombe will take Mr. Marsland's place in Norwood.

Norwood's new skating rink is being well patronized.

Mr. Charles Anderson of Toronto, spent the week-end visiting his aunt, Mrs. Thomas McMillen.

Nasal Discharge Proves Catarrh is Active

THE PURE BALSAMIC ESSENCES OF CATARRHOZONE AFFORD SUREST AND QUICKEST CURE.

Catarrhozone is certain to cure because its healing vapor is carried with the breath direct to the seat of the chest, nose or throat trouble. Being composed of the purest balsams and pine essences, it immediately allays irritations, facilitates the ejection of mucous, soothes and stimulates the lungs and bronchial tubes. The marvel of the age in curing winter ills—that's what thousands say about Catarrhozone. There is nothing so sure to cure, and to those in fear of changeable weather—those who easily catch cold—those who work among lung-chilling surroundings, or where dust, impure air, fog, or damp can affect them—let them get Catarrhozone and use it several times daily—it will cure every time.

BAD CASE CURED IN TWO DAYS.

"I was unfortunate enough to catch a bad cold from sitting in a draught in my bare head," writes Miss Nora E. Jemieson, well known in Sangre Grande, Td. "An acute condition of catarrh developed in my nostrils, and for three days my eyes and nose ran most copiously. The usual remedies entirely failed to relieve. I read in The Mirror newspaper about Catarrhozone, and sent to Smith Bros.' drug store for a dollar outfit. In two days Catarrhozone cleared out my nostrils, cured the sneezing, coughing, and all traces of catarrh."

Large size Catarrhozone, sufficient for two months' use, guaranteed, price $1.00; smaller sizes 25c and 50c. Beware of imitations, and substitutors, and insist on getting "Catarrhozone" only. By mail from the Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

SOME CAN.

But Student Had to Quit.

Some people are apparently immune to tea and coffee poisoning—if you are not, Nature will tell you so in the ailments she sends as warnings. And when you get a warning, HEED IT OR YOU GET HURT, SURE. A young college student writes from New York:

"I had been told frequently that coffee was injurious to me," (tea is just as bad) "and if I had not been told, the almost constant headache with which I began to suffer after using it for several years, the state of nervous prostration which gradually came upon me to hinder me in my studies, the general lassitude and indisposition to any sort of effort which possessed me, ought to have been sufficient warning.

But I disregarded them till my physician told me a few months ago that I must give up coffee or quit college. I could hesitate no longer, and at once abandoned coffee.

"On the advice of a friend I began to drink Postum, and rejoice to tell you that with the drug in coffee" (the same drug—caffeine—is found in tea) "removed and the healthful properties of Postum in its place I was soon relieved of all my ailments.

The headaches and nervousness disappeared entirely, strength came back to me, and my complexion which had been very, very bad, cleared up beautifully.

Better than all, my mental faculties were toned up, and became more vigorous than ever, and I now feel that no course of study would be too difficult for me." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

RECEPTION TO RECTOR.

All Saints' Congregation Welcomes Rev. Mr. Grobb, M.A.

On Thursday evening a very pleasant event took place in the parish room of All Saints' church, when the congregation welcomed its new rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, M.A. The room was in gala attire for the occasion, colored lights and bunting combining to form a portly effect. The chairman of the evening was Mr. F. Dawson.

Rev. Canon Davidson made an address of welcome on behalf of the congregation, and Messrs. Hogan and Ward also spoke. The new rector made a most suitable reply.

A programme of exceptional excellence was presented consisting of piano solos by Mr. Cyril Devey; vocal solos by Miss R. Dawson and Mr. G. E. Chandler. The Aeolian quartette contributed several most pleasing numbers.

A dainty supper and an hour of social discourse helped to make the evening one to be remembered by both rector and people.

SOCIAL AND PERSONALS

Mr. F. Alton, has returned to Victoria Road after a short stay here.

PUBLIC OPINION

ilton has since advocated abolishing the power to pass By-laws to give any assistance to factories — which would prohibit other cities from giving assistance and leave Hamilton's automatic system in full working order. A proposal has been recently made in Hamilton to raise a fund of $50,000 by subscription to purchase sites for factories.

The City Council cannot work miracles in securing industries. To accomplish results it must have means to do so, and must be able to offset efforts of other places. It cannot do that without the sympathy, cordial approval and active support of the citizens. When the Council asks for support and endorsement of a By-law it should not be withheld without serious reason. Hesitation here will mean Peterborough's loss and some other city's gain. Illustrations of this could be given it will no doubt be recalled.

The Board of Trade should be thoroughly organized to assist the Council. Its Committees should be formed and should not merely wait for something to do, but should be active in their own spheres in looking for and taking advantage of opportunities to promote the business welfare of the City.

We have seen that Peterborough has made not only creditable, but rapid progress. The conditions are all present for continued or more rapid advancement. It is a City of great natural advantages and of excellent acquired facilities. It is healthy; it has all the essentials and accessories for manufacturing in a superior degree; it has excellent facilities for carrying on business of all kinds; it is a beautiful city in which to live, with all the advantages for health, education, comfort, and pleasure, including the convenient and attractive summer resorts.

In brief, Peterborough is progressive and prosperous; a city of natural advantages, acquired facilities, and rapid growth; a centre of business and beauty, of utility and pleasure.

Hearty co-operation on the part of the citizens with an energetic Council and active Board of Trade will send Peterborough forward and bring greater things in the future, and all should be ready to act together, to push Peterborough forward to greater progress and prosperity.

Yours truly,
Civis Sum.

MAN'S PRESENCE OF MIND SAVED FAMILY OF FOUR

Mrs. Alex. Chouinard and her three children have cause to be truly thankful to-day that they're in the land of the living. Had it not been for the fact that a neighbor was taken suddenly ill, they would not have been. On such small things does Fate hang its decrees.

About 5 o'clock Sunday morning, Mr. Bert Cripps, a neighbor of the Chouinard's, on Princess street, in the extreme south part of the city, arose to attend to his sick wife. Happening to go to the door, he discovered the house next door on fire. He promptly started to turn in an alarm and started for the fire box, some distance away. Then the thought of the telephone struck him and he managed to awaken afriend, and summon the brigade. All this took time and when Mr. Cripps returned to the scene, the fire had made serious headway. He saw no signs of life about the place, and so he burst open the door and groped his way to the bedroom. Here he found Mrs. Chouinard and her little ones almost overcome by the smoke, but after considerable exertion he managed to arouse them to a sense of their peril. There was no time to think of dressing, so seizing two of her little ones, the woman rushed out into the bitter cold, leaving her rescuer to follow with the remaining child. They had just got out when the firemen arrived on the gallop. The family were taken promptly to Mr. Cripp's home and cared for.

The firemen found a stiff job in front of them. The nearest hydrant was 1400 feet away, but hose was quickly laid and Chief Howard and his men started to quench the flames. It was no easy job, but the brigade was good for it, though it was 10 o'clock before the fire laddies were able to return to headquarters. It is to their credit that any of the house at all is left. As it is the rear portion and the roof is destroyed.

Mr. Chouinard, who is a lineman with the G.N.W., was out of the city attending to his duties at the time of the fire.

Mr. Cripps came in for deserved praise for his presence of mind in the matter, as there is no doubt that but for his efforts the fire would have resulted fatally to four people.

NE TEMERE MUST DIE

In a red hot address, Rev. C. O. Johnston, Toronto, in the West Queen Street Church, said:

"Last year there was a great gathering in Montreal, challenging Protestantism, defaming Protestantism, and exhalting that which Protestants cannot accept, and daily offensive demonstrations against Protestantism were held. At that time men and women with wide open eyes protested with their hearts if not with their voices.

"Father Vaughan spoke of Montreal as the Rome of Canada, and of a soulless Protestantism, the congress went out on the plains, and followed a consecrated wafer and declared it was Christ.

"If Canada was forced to worship a wafer God, Canada would be fighting for liberty as Italy and Spain have been fighting, and as Mexico is beginning to fight for its liberty. Romanism makes the priest a church and the wafer a God.

"One word regarding the ne temere decree. Years ago there came out from the Roman Catholic Church Rev. Father Chiniquy, one of the bravest men whoever breathed, and it was after 50 years of the knowledge of that church. They followed him with defamation. He was honorably married, he had children and he passed into eternity honored by all who knew him in Canada and in Europe.

"What has the ne temere done? Within the last month it has declared through one of its writers, that the daughter of Father Chiniquy [illegible]

"As God lives and the truth must come to light that decree must die in Canada." (Applause).

SUDDEN DEATH OF ROBT. M. ROY

Was Called Away About 10 O'clock on Saturday Night

PROMINENT BUSINESS MAN

Had Been a Resident for Nearly a Quarter of a Century—Was Noted Yachtsman, Mason, Oddfellow and Public Spirited Citizen.

The city awoke on Sunday morning to learn sad news that during the night Death had been here and had called to the Great Beyond one of her most respected sons, Robert Maitland Roy. As the word was passed about, expressions of deep regret were heard at the loss Peterborough had sustained, coupled with those of sympathy for the bereaved family.

The end came with exceeding suddenness. Mr. Roy had been indisposed for about a week, but had every anticipation of being up and around as usual in the course of a few days. But it was not to be. At five minutes after 10 on Saturday night the summons came, and he passed away.

For a number of years Mr. Roy was stores inspector on the Midland division of the G.T.R., living the early part of his life in Belleville, coming to this city about 25 years ago. He had always been an enthusiastic amateur photographer, and on leaving the service of the Grand Trunk, 15 years ago, took up the art professionally, establishing the Roy Studio on Hunter street, of which he was senior partner until the time of his demise.

Throughout his life of 70 years, Mr. Roy had been an advocate of all clean sport. His own leaning was towards yachting, and he became known throughout the Great Lakes as an enthusiastic and accomplished yachtsman. During the 80's he owned [illegible] which sailed the American circuit, [illegible] with Mr. Roy at the tiller. He was a member of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club of Toronto, as well as of other yachting organizations.

Since coming to Peterborough he turned his attention to steam yachting, and his little boat, the Rob Roy was familiar on the waters of the Trent Valley, and at the regattas every year.

Though in every way a public-spirited citizen, Mr. Roy never aspired to civic honors. He was a devoted member of St. John's church; of Peterborough Lodge, Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons; and of Otonabee Lodge, of Oddfellows.

He is survived by Mrs. Roy and a family of six children: R. M. Roy, of Hamilton; E. J. Roy, of Napanee; and F. L. Roy of this city; Mrs. A. M. Simmons, of Montreal; Mrs. Roland Denne, city; and Miss Gladys, at home. In addition two sisters mourn him: Mrs. E. P. Hannaford, of Montreal, and Mrs. M. A. May, of Peterborough.

With every citizen, The Times pays its tribute of respect to his memory and its deep sympathy with the family.

The funeral will be on Tuesday morning, probably about 7.30, interment being at Belleville.

SCOTTISH CURLERS HERE READY FOR THE FRAY

This afternoon and evening will see expositions of the roarin' game at the curling rink that this good city seldom sees. For the famous Scottish curlers are in the city, and both they and the local knights of the stane are eagerly to be called to the ice.

The Scottish curlers reached the city in a special car from Kingston early Sunday morning. The reception committee of the local club met them about 8 o'clock at the C.P.R. President J. H. Conmat and Vice President R. O'Neil taking the lead in doing the honors. The visitors were told how heartily welcome they were to Peterborough, and that every effort would be made to make it one to linger in happy remembrance.

The morning arrangements were to attend Divine service in Knox church and a large number of the city curlers were on hand to march with the visitors to the place of worship. It was a delightful morning for a march out, crisp and clear, and thoughts could settle contentedly on the sermon, for there was no fear that the ice would be keen on the morrow.

The curlers occupied the body of the church, and Rev. H. J. Keith made them feel that they were warmly welcome to Canada, to the City of Peterborough, to Knox church. It might be that they would not hear such a sermon as they would in the land of the grant of Presbyterianism yet that did not mean that they were not earnest behind the cause of Christ in Canada. Only five years ago Knox church was a mission with a membership of 84; to-day the membership is over 500.

The sermon that followed was a most excellent discourse, attentively followed. Solos were sung by Mrs. Bruce Hughes and Mr. McIlroy, and the choir contributed an anthem.

After service the day was spent quietly. Many of the visitors enjoyed a drive about town in company with citizens. This morning the reception committee have arranged for a visit to the industrial concerns of Peterborough, and this afternoon the matches will be on in earnest.

Then it will be a case of "friendship ceases" and "may the best man win." The Scotchmen will be opposed in a six-rink game by three Peterboro teams and teams representing the Otillia, the Keene and the Bobcaygeon clubs.

It is the intention to banquet the visitors at the Masonic Hall at 5.30, and in the evening all Peterborough teams will contest with the men of Bonnie Scotia.

Colonel T. Robertson-Aikman, of Hamilton, is captain, and Andrew Aberfoyle, secretary. Provost D. E. Gordon has been with the team on a previous trip to Canada.

TO CLEAR UP THE NE TEMERE QUESTION

DEFINE RIGHTS OF THE DOMINION TO CONTROL THE MARRIAGE LAWS.

Government Likely to Refer the Matter to the Supreme Court and Finally to the Privy Council.

Ottawa, Jan. 20.—It is said on good authority that the Government will refer the Ne Temere question to the Supreme Court and later to the Privy Council with a view to clearly defining the rights of the Dominion and the Provinces in regard to dealing with the marriage question.

Sir Allen Aylesworth was of the opinion that it was a matter for the Provinces to deal with. The British North America Act is very indefinite. The Government, it is said, fears that it is useless to pass any laws until there can be no doubt of its power. The bill of E. A. Lancaster on the subject will likely come up on Monday in the House, and this, it is said, is the way it will be dealt with.

TITLED MEN FOR CANADA

British Noblemen to Reside in Dominion

Duke of Sutherland Among the Number—Other Men of Title Also Residents of Canada.

London, Jan. 21. VERY individual possessing means coming to Canada is an acquisition to the country. The country is now waiting an "emigration de luxe," which is to take place this year. Several members of the British peerage are going to take up farming in Canada in the spring, and a large number of peers will make their annual tour of inspection of their Canadian estates. The explanation of the titled exodus to Canada is due, in part, to modern legislation and in part to the fact that Canada affords freedom and natural life unobtainable in England, it is said.

Inquiry resulted in a long list of what are known as "gilt edged settlers" and "emigrants de luxe" being discovered.

"There are enough titled persons living in Canada or interested in the country to open a House of Peers of their own," said a leading railway official, "and with the Duke of Connaught as Governor General we have all the material to go ahead and start a colonial kingdom.

"The Duke and Duchess of Sutherland will take up their residence for the coming autumn in their bungalow at Brooks, Alberta. It is a cosey little weather board house in the middle of the prairie holdings.

"Earl Grey keeps a hunting lodge in the Columbia Valley, B.C., and Lord Aberdeen owns one of the finest and most profitable fruit farms on the Pacific slope, the Coldstream estate.

"Lord Clanwilliam is a large land holder, and, with the Hon. Edward Cole, is interested in the Saskatchewan Investment and Trust Company, which owns the leading hotel at Saskatchewan. Both spend much time in Canada.

"Lord Hindlip is the landlord of a vast area of prairie and British Columbia land, and Lord Desborough is interested in the timber and lumber trade.

"Lord Sholto Douglas is, or was until recently, fruit farming in British Columbia, and the Earl of Stanhope frequently visits the Dominion. Among other members of the British peerage who are interested in Canada, either for the hunting or its commercial opportunities, are Lord Strathcona, Lord Lovat, Lord Bruce, Lord Mostyn, Lord Vivian, Marquis of Graham, Lord Wenlock, Earl of Macclesfield, Lord Clinton, Earl of Dunmore, Earl of Harrowby and Viscount Gort.

"Among the new settlers is Lord Somers, who recently left the Life Guards to go farming near Toronto, and he is coming home to take out Lord and Lady Hyde, sister and brother-in-law, who are to join him there. Lord Leconfield's brother, Mr. Reginald Wyndham, is another settler."

A Des Moines man had an attack of muscular rheumatism in his shoulder. A friend advised him to go to Hot Springs. That meant an expense of $150.00 or more. He sought for a quicker and cheaper way to cure it and found it in Chamberlain's Liniment. Three days after the first application of this liniment he was well. For sale by all dealers.

THAT NE TEMERE DECREE.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I feel strongly on this awful Ne Temere iniquity. I feel that I should not be doing my duty did I not raise my voice in protest. Why should this Father Vaughan be allowed in a Canadian city by saying smug, pretty things to create a false impression? If this decree, and others of its ilk, are allowed to prevail, it will demoralize Canada and will throw thousands of legitimately-born children on the streets, as it has done in Italy, in Austria, in Spain, in Portugal and in South America. Any man who has any regard for his country, for his freedom, should demand that these accursed decrees shall not prevail. As soon as she has power enough, the Roman Catholic Church will pronounce illegitimacy and adultry upon the whole of the Protestant part of the country.

Justice to All.

SCHOOL BOOKS AND DISEASE.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I see by the Toronto papers that it is proposed to destroy all old school books. As they are considered to be carriers of disease, the Board of Education decided at its last meeting that hereafter each pupil on entering a school or on promotion will be provided with brand new books, which shall be kept until unfit for further reference. This step will dispose of the present method of passing much-used books from one pupil to another, exposing them to infection.

It is impossible to disinfect books, and the only thing that can be done to stop the spread of disease in this respect is to destroy them or give new books to each child. By adopting this motion it will only mean additional expense of about $2,000 a year, and the stopping of much sickness. The amount, it was decided, will be placed in the year's estimates.

And if this applies to Toronto, does it not apply with equal force to Peterborough. I think so, and I should be glad to hear that our educationists are alive to the importance of the proposition.

Yours truly,

Amicus.

CANADIAN NORTHERN RY. WRECKED; ONE KILLED

TWO TRAINMEN OF PASSENGER NO. 1, PROBABLY FATALLY INJURED.

Auxiliary From Parry Sound, With Orders to Stop at Blackstone, Tried to Make Foote's Bay, Lake Joseph.

KILLED.

HUDSON, Parry Sound, a passenger.

BADLY INJURED.

J. JOHNSTON, Parry Sound, engineer of freight train; will probably die.

AWDE, Parry Sound, fireman of freight train.

JACK NAPIER, engineer.

One man was killed outright and three others were probably fatally injured in a head-on collision of the Canadian Northern passenger No. 1, leaving Toronto at 8.50 o'clock Saturday morning and an auxiliary train coming south from Parry Sound.

The collision occurred on a curve in a rock cut near Foote's Bay, Lake Joseph, Muskoka. The auxiliary was coming south to clear the track of a freight wreck, and had orders to pass the northbound train at Blackstone. No. 1 was an hour late, and the engineer thought he could make Foote's Bay switch. The passenger however, had made up time, and the collision in the curve half a mile from Foote's Bay resulted.

Both engines were badly wrecked, and the baggage car and several passenger coaches were piled up on the track.

Hudson, the passenger, who was killed outright, lived in Parry Sound as did also the trainmen who were injured. Engineer Johnston is said to be dying when the despatch with meagre details of the collision was sent from Parry Sound, and Awde, the fireman, is also said to be fatally injured.

NEWS NUBS OF SPORT

Billy Lush will likely be appointed manager of the Montreal ball team.

The 16 groups in the Ontario Tankard have completed their primary competitions.

The ice is in splendid condition for to-day's bonspiel at the Charlotte street curling rink.

There was a rattling good game of hockey on the Y.M.C.A. ice on Saturday afternoon between the Wanderers and the Rough Riders, in the Junior Y League. The Wanderers won 4 to 3.

This is the line-up for to-night's match at Cobourg: Goal, Dwyer; point, Milloy; cover, Denison; rover, Weir; centre, Hall; right wing, Kennealy; left wing, Clancy. Spares Cook and Coughlin.

The following is the standing of this group of Intermediate O.H.A.:

	Won	Lost	T.P.
Peterborough	3	0	3
Lindsay	2	1	3
Trenton	1	3	2
Belleville	1	3	2

The Bear Cats go to Cobourg to-night by special train, and hope to return leaders of the district. The boys are really in good shape, and if Freeman and his men win on home ice, it will be because they're in pinkier condition than the local youngsters. A special train leaves here at 7 o'clock, returning immediately after the match.

The fans are taking a deep interest in Tuesday night's hockey schedule. Trenton will be here in full force to take the scalps of the intermediates into camp, and there are plenty of folks here who don't think they can. Trainer Dillon says the boys are right on edge and it should be a great game.

MANCHESTER COTTON STRIKE IS SETTLED

Manchester, Eng., Jan. 20.—The big cotton trade strike, over the employment of non-union labor, which culminated in a lockout of 300,000 men, has been settled, and the mills will be reopened Monday.

The operatives by a two to one vote agreed to accept a truce for one year. This is regarded as a victory for the employers. The rank and file of the operatives are satisfied with the settlement, but the union leaders are displeased with it, as their difficulties in persuading non-unionists to join the unions have increased.

LOSS A QUARTER MILLION IN A SIMCOE STREET FIRE

THREE FIREMEN INJURED WHEN HIGH PRESSURE HOSE [illegible]

D. Fairbairn Company, Mica Manufacturing Company, and the Swiss Laundry All Suffered—The Blaze Was a Spectacular One and Overhead Wires Once More Hampered the Fire Fighters.

Toronto, Jan. 20.—One of the most exacting fires that the Toronto firefighters have known for a long time broke out shortly before eight o'clock last night in the Allen building at 103-7 Simcoe street and could not be brought under control until it had destroyed the two upper stories, taking a toll of three injured firemen, thrown five hundred men out of employment, and run up a financial loss of close upon a quarter of a million. That more of the firemen were not seriously injured is remarkable, as the three who suffered at their post of duty met injury while struggling with one of the huge high-pressure hose-lines, which broke away from the men who were directing it, and went swirling through the crowd of firemen like a big snake, knocking them over and endangering life and limb as it went.

FIREMEN KNOCKED ABOUT.

When this dangerous weapon broke loose and went hurling through the air several of the firemen were thrown against various hose-wagons, the trucks and other obstructions. All the injured came from the Portland Street station. William E. Hawkes was pitched against the aerial truck and had his back badly bruised and wrenched. John Roach was struck upon the head and had his face and arms bruised, and at the same time, Edward Courtney, who had charge of a low pressure stream, was struck by the flying nozzle and had his left leg broken at the ankle, besides suffering a scalp wound.

OVERHEAD WIRES AGAIN.

At the same time there was furnished one more example of the crippling effects of the overhead wires, and the demoralizing of the street car service by breaking off the line just at the hour when the crowds were trying to attend the two big theatres on King street.

From the very first, the battle with the fire was a stubborn one, as it seemed to have taken possession of the five-storey structure with the intention of devouring the whole stock and contents.

ALL FEEL SURE THAT SCOTT HAS REACHED SOUTH POLE, ERE THIS WORD IS EXPECTED AT ANY TIME FROM THE BRITISH EXPEDITION.

It was Well Equipped—They Expected to Reach the Goal on Christmas Day—May be Returning Now.

New York, Jan. 20. Officials of the Geographical Society and various similar organizations interested in polar exploration are eagerly awaiting word from Captain Robert Falcon Scott, who expected to reach the South Pole on Christmas Day, and they believe that when he announces the result of his British Ant-Arctic expedition it will be to say that his quest was successful.

Lieut. Shackleton, of the British navy, reached the farthest south, on January 1st, 1909, 97 geographic miles from the objective point, and then turned back only because he ran short of provisions. Capt. Scott had 750 miles to cover from his winter quarters to reach the south pole. His journey consisted of a dash across the comparatively level ice to the ice barriers, then up the glaciers side to the plateau, some ten thousand feet above sea level, and then to the pole.

The Scott expedition was outfitted as no other exploration party was equipped before. The British Government subscribed $100,000 to the fund and the British public subscribed an equal sum. Accompanying him, in addition to a picked crew, were five Lieutenants of the Royal Navy, two surgeons, and three biologists. Three motor sledges were carried in the hold of the vessel, seventy tons of provisions, 130 dogs, and 30 Siberian ponies.

STARVED TO DEATH

Temperance Field Day
Sunday January 28

A laudable effort is being put forth by the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Temperance Alliance to educate the public in both the legal and the moral aspects of the temperance question. The holding of a County Field Day is part of this educational program. On that occasion representatives of the Alliance speak in every pulpit in the city and county open to them. The addresses vary according to circumstances, but the general subject of temperance is not lost sight of, and almost every feature of the temperance question is discussed some time or other.

Last year nearly three thousand meetings were held and the educational value of such a propaganda can scarcely be over-estimated. The Field Day in Peterborough will be held on January 28th. Many pulpits in the County, and several in the city, will be occupied by representatives of the Alliance.

Two meetings will be held in the Opera House, Peterborough. One of them will be for men only at 4 o'clock, and the other, open to all, will be held at 8.15. Mr. Howard Russell, winner of one of Earl Grey's medals, will sing at each meeting, and addresses will be delivered by Rev. R. M. Hamilton, B. A., Field Secretary Rev. Dr. R. H. Abraham, Rev. B. H. Spence, General Secretary; and Rev. Professor Hallam of Wycliffe College, Toronto.

The Times was informed by a well-known citizen that a new Coal Company had decided to start business in Peterborough. It is said that those engaged in that occupation here have been holding up prices beyond what they should be. This may or may not be true, but there is no doubt that the prices for coal are practically the same amongst the local dealers. The following were the prevailing prices in October last in the following places:—

Peterborough, hard, per ton.....$7.50
Peterborough, soft, per ton..... 5.25
Omemee, hard, per ton..... 6.25
Omemee, soft, per ton..... 5.00
Fenelon Falls, per ton, hard 7.00

These are only two of the points from which prices were quoted The Times. We will endeavour to furnish further quotations later on.

WHAT CANADIANS ARE DOING

THOMAS GRIGG
Qu'Appelle

For nineteen years Thomas Grigg has farmed near Qu'Appelle, meeting set-backs, but prospering. Although a Canadian, he and his wife came to the Springbrook district from South Dakota. Generally speaking, wheat growing has been the mainstay. Horse-raising, also, has received attention to an extent sufficient to lead Mr. Grigg to pass opinion that a man can make as much money on a half section of rough land raising colts as he can on a real good quarter at wheat-growing. Pigs ... are kept, and on different occasions have helped him "out of a tight place." He finds that, as a rule, there is enough feed around to fatten a bunch. The farm comprises ... of which about one-quarter is summerfallowed annually. Wheat is grown for two years, and then oats or barley. Recently, Mr. Grigg has rented his farm for a year in order that he and his good wife may spend the winter in California and ... well-earned rest.

HON. HUGH J. MACDONALD
Police Magistrate
Winnipeg

Mr. Hugh Macdonald who was lately appointed Police magistrate of the Gateway city was formerly premier of Manitoba. Probably the importance of his magistracy lies principally in the fact that the man he succeeded was the famous late T. Mayne Daly, and though Mr. Macdonald is not in his famous father's rank he is big hearted enough to make the attempt to fill a big man's shoes. Nothing attempted, nothing done is certainly not in his make up.

Squire Macdonald is a son of the late John A. Macdonald, and might have been premier of Canada today, if he had remained in Dominion politics and followed closely in the ... of his sire. But he chose ... senior honors offered by a provincial premiership and got out of the ... for the post of prime minister ... Canada.

Such a one is Dr. A. Beverley Welford of Woodstock Ont. who is one of the pioneers of the Canadian Club movement in his district, though the doctor's energies are not confined to this laudable work. He is practically connected with every movement that has for its object—the raising of the standard of life.

NELLIE L. McCLUNG
Canadian writer

Mrs. McClung has lived in Manitoba for the last thirty years, having come from Owen Sound with her parents in the very early days of this province. However, she is always very careful to explain that she was only a "mere child" at that time, and yet her stories of some of the hardships of the long journey by ox-train from Winnipeg to the point on the Souris river where her parents located, are so vividly told that we are forced to believe that she must have been a very bright child for her years.

Mrs. McClung, who before her marriage was Nellie L. Mooney, received her education at a country school and afterwards at the Central Collegiate in Winnipeg. She taught school for five years and then married Mr. R. W. McClung, who was engaged in the drug business in Manitoba, Man. They lived in Manitou until last summer, when they removed to Winnipeg, and have taken up their residence on Chestnut street. Mrs. McClung was elected president of the local branch of the Canadian Woman's Press club for this year.

Mrs. McClung has written two books, "Sowing Seeds in Danny," and "The Second Chance;" also many short stories. Last year she gave a series of recitals, from her own books, in Manitoba, and also in Ontario.

At the present time she is engaged in writing another book.

Mrs. McClung chooses for her characters the plain people of every day life, whom we all know. The keen fidelity of her writing makes a strong appeal to the discriminating reader.

What poverty is like that of moral penury? What ... head is poor, what mockery is money wealth!

Few people regret the times when they were silent, but many regret and often suffer because of imprudent speech.

MY LADY'S COLUMN.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA'S PROTEGE

At the age of three, pianists in the making take more interest in toys than in sharps and flats. But Fitz Scavenius, the famous young Grieg player, who will visit Birmingham during his coming concert tour, and who is one of the favoured few to have his name entered in the book in which Queen Alexandra writes down the names of her favourite artists, on his third birthday astonished his family by clambering on to the piano stool and playing "Ding dong bell" and "Mary, Mary, quite contrary," hammering away at the notes till he struck the right ones. Later at the age of 14 he achieved another record by being the only competitor to obtain full marks at the senior Trinity College examination. Shortly after this exploit Queen Alexandra sent in young Scavenius, who is of Danish descent, and immediately set the seal of her approval upon his playing.

The Healthy Pose.

If the proper pose of the body be retained in all the ordinary duties of life, whether sitting or standing, it will minimize the fatigue of the daily routine. When double work is thrown upon some muscles, while others are idle, the result is the pain in back and limbs with which so many woman suffer. To walk upstairs with the figure erect and not like a half-shut jack-knife, legs and joints flexible and lungs breathing properly, will not only contribute to a woman's appearance but also to her health.

MATERIAL IMMATERIAL.
THE MODEL'S THE THING

Black and white continue to be the mode; whether frocks are of silk, chiffon, satin or cloth.

An exquisite model for an evening dress is composed of black chiffon over the same fabric of white. A lot of jet is used on the black tunic. The foundation of the gown is cream, veiled with the sheer white. A blue satin girdle gives a touch of color.

This gown would serve for a model in marquisette or it would be charming in any simple limp material. The mode is the thing.

Princess Mary's Rebuff

The following little story of the Queen and Princess Mary was told by one who could vouch for its truth. Princess Mary, when a younger child, ran one day into the sanctum of a certain well-known private secretary at Court. "I am sorry," said the much-harassed individual, "that I have no time to spare this morning for you, my little lady." The Princess, in high dudgeon, ran to her mother. "Sir So-and-So called me a "little lady,'" she complained, "and you know, mother, that I am a Princess." The Queen replied laughingly, "Run back, Mary, to Sir So-and-So, and tell him that you are a Princess who has not yet learned to be a little lady."

Poached Eggs with Stewed Tomatoes

Poach carefully the number of eggs required, and, after placing on hot buttered toast, put eggs and toast on a hot ashet. Now wipe some small tomatoes, and stew them for five minutes in a little butter, pepper, and salt. Make a border of the tomatoes round the poached eggs. This provides a dainty and appetising breakfast dish.

Grannie: "What's the matter, Willikin?"

Willikin: "Matter enough. You know some time ago I assigned all my property to my wife to — to keep it out of the hands of — of people I owe money, you know?"

"Yes."

"Well, she's taken the money and gone off — says she won't live with me because I swindled my creditors."

WHEN WOMEN LED

The Fair Sex Has Been Well to the Fore in the Past, But Where Real Fighting Was to Be Done.

In the French Revolution women often led the bands of peasants who rose against the aristocrats. At Troyes a similar sight was seen during the champagne riots which convulsed the Aube Department of France.

At the head of the detachment which one district sent to join the "Iron Battalion" marched a splendid-looking young woman, wearing a white-knitted cap, with the Revolutionary red ribbon twined around it. Her starting-point forty miles from Troyes, this girl tramped every step of the distance between dawn and dark. She was cheered by the crowds when she arrived in Troyes.

It was a girl, too, who headed the great no-rent strike in New York, three years ago.

Nearly all the big tenements in the Bowery, the most crowded section of darkest New York, are let to agents, who sub-let them in rooms or small flats to the poor. The rents are awful. A man will have to pay twenty-five dollars a month for three small rooms on a fifth floor.

It will be remembered that at the end of 1907 Eastern America suffered from the worst times which had been known in the States for very many years, and the result was that evictions for non-payment of rent became more and more frequent.

A REDUCTION IN RENTS

It was Cecilie Arkin, a nineteen-year-old girl, who devised the plan of campaign, and banded together no fewer than thirty thousand families, who all vowed to pay no more rent unless a general reduction of twenty per cent. was granted. Each family pledged itself to shelter as many as possible of the evicted ones.

The struggle was a long and bitter one. Hundreds of families were turned out, but in the end Cecilie Arkin won a victory; for the agents compromised, and a general reduction of ten per cent. was the condition on which the strike was settled.

The last Carlist rising in Spain was headed by a woman. This was in 1901, and the insurrection broke out ... The curious ... lady has never leaked out. She was tall, beautifully dressed, and rode magnificently.

It was rumoured at the time that she was Donna Blanca, Duchess of Braganza, and wife of Don Alfonso, brother of Don Carlos. But this surmise was proved to be false, and to this day her identity is a mystery.

There has always been a deal of smuggling along the western end of the boundary line between the United States and Mexico.

The most notorious of all these smugglers was a Mexican woman known as Laila, Queen of the Smugglers. She was quite young, and extremely good-looking, and by her extraordinary talents rose to be head of a band of most daring smugglers.

A QUEEN BETRAYED

For nearly four years she reigned supreme, and then one day, as her long train of "burros" (donkeys), bearing contraband goods, was crossing the Rio Grande, she was surprised by a sudden shower of rifle-bullets. She had been betrayed, and a strong force of Mexican "Rurales" had been ambushed among the rocks.

One of her arms was broken by a bullet, but with splendid courage she gathered her men and rode straight of the troops.

A soldier seized her bridle. She cut him down, and for some minutes a furious fight raged. Then numbers prevailed, and she and her surviving companions were pulled down. She died in hospital a few days later.

There is no part of the world and no race which does not produce its fighting women. Quite lately our Crown Colony of Southern Nigeria has been plagued by a lady of colour known as the "Omu."

Among her tribe she is reckoned officially as a man, and cannot have husband.

After causing endless trouble to the authorities she made peace, and then coolly demanded a seat upon the legislative Council. So far this has not been granted, but it is possible we may hear more of this coal-black Suffragette.

PERSIAN WEDDINGS

Tying the matrimonial knot is a very prolonged and serious affair in Persia. In fact, a wedding may extend for a week. On the last day of the wedding the bride, who has been treated as a sort of outcast, is conducted by a near relative to a room, where she undergoes further and more elaborate decoration.

She then returns to the guest-room, and her dowry is laid before her in state. The dowry often comprises such queer things as cheap and highly-coloured oleographs, gandy vases, ... and many useful household articles. Having kissed the earthstone of her home, she is then given bread, salt, and a piece of gold, and thus equipped and closely veiled she is hoisted on to a gaily-adorned donkey and, accompanied by a circuitous procession of friends, goes to her future home, where her husband awaits her.

"Are you a friend to William Bliggins? That ne'er-do-well?"

"I should think not, indeed!"

"Then you'll hardly be interested to hear that he has inherited a hundred thousand pounds."

"What? Dear old Bill!"

Asker: "How do you excuse those mother-in-law jokes of yours to your wife?"

Fuminan: "I tell her they refer to her mother-in-law, and she says they are not half bad enough." 42

WHO'S WHO IN CANADA

ABNER KINGMAN

Mr. Kingman of Montreal is by way of business a member of the big group of Canadian gentlemen who handle financial propositions, and is recognised as a successful and reliable business man. To the general public, he is, however, more widely known as one of the pillars of the Young Men's Christian Association, the active interest in which runs to a directorship of the International organization, formed in 1854 in connection with the Associations of the United States and Canada. To Montreal belongs the honor of having opened the Y.M.C.A. movement in the dominion. This was in 1851. Men of all faiths, even those with no religious professions whatever, are free to acknowledge the value of the good work being carried out by all departments of the body, and in connection with the effort in Montreal particularly, Mr. Kingman's name stands well to the front. He has been an active member from an early stage, and is looked upon not only as a conscientious worker, but as an able adviser in financial matters in which latter connection, his business capabilities admirably fit in.

ARCH. P. McKISHNIE

Mr. McKishnie, fiction Editor on the Canadian Century, issued from Montreal, is one of Canada's young writers who turns out his stories in a fashion that attracts and holds the interest of his readers from the initial letter to the final word.

If you are by nature a lover of the woods, lakes and the wild things which inhabit them. If you have a good outdoor story or hunting yarn to spin, Archie P. McKishnie is your friend. The well known writer and author of Gaff Linkum and "Love of the Wild" is Canadian in birth and sentiment and comes of that grand old Scotch Ontarian stock about which Ralph Connor has written so many stories. You do not meet the real McKishnie when he is at his office desk or in his study — tho' to be sure his personality impresses you right away with visions of the open and the nature he knows and loves so well — but trail with him thro' the tangle of bush grown up-lands in buff shirt and corduroy; paddle with him along placed, mountain hemmed lakes; or lay for drenching chilly hours in the reed blinds, and you will know McKishnie aright. The love of the wild games of the forest and marsh is his to impart to the ready listener, and McKishnie's camp soon receives his initiation into the Grand Lodge of the Open Spaces.

He is a practical man in wood wos: he knows his animals, reptiles, fish and birds at first hand. Nature selected him as one of the few to whom she reveals her secrets.

There is nothing conservative about him. Tho' his first love is the woods and the creatures of the wild, he has an open heart for kindred subjects, and is well informed upon topics other than that of nature. His numerous magazine stories show that he has a grasp on a wide range of subjects, while his next book will be illustrative of spheres far remotes from that of "the wild."

THE DOG NUISANCE.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—In The Times of Tuesday, I ote a Citizen states that in a short istance he counted fourteen dogs, n that day between the hours of 3 'clock and 4 p.m., from Aylmer St., n Charlotte St. to the Methodist 'hurch, and two blocks south, I counted eighteen dogs of all sizes and reeds, and heard one howl that was ot visible. As an old citizen I hink it is about time our up-to-date ldermen should take hold of this og nuisance and handle it without loves. The percentage of the people who keep canines is very limited, nd why should an up-to-date city ike ours have to tolerate this nuisance any longer.

In the good old days swine and cattle roamed our streets. When they were banished from the public highways a big noise was made about the rights of the poor man. There is not one person in this community who would wish to return to the old conditions. Then why should the citizens have to tolerate a greater danger by allowing all sorts of dogs to roam at large, especially after all the lessons we have had from other places? What guarantee have we, more than other places, that the dogs in this city have not already contracted this dread disease, rabies? The only sure way to prevent it is by banishing the dogs from our streets. The Aldermen by so doing will earn the gratitude of all thoughtful citizens.

OXFORD SLANG

Some Queer Words Used by Undergraduates Which are Bewildering to the Freshman When He First "Goes Up".

Oxford University has a jargon of its own, which is partly culled from the same kind of thing used in the public schools of England. Some of the expressions are rather bewildering to the freshman when he first "goes up" to the University.

Study, social life, and sport each have their peculiar expressions.

The first examination to be passed is Responsions, called "Smalls." The examinations are called "Schools" because they take place in the Examination Schools. After "Smalls" comes the Divinity examination, which all must pass. The undergraduate calls it "divvers." Then comes Moderations — called "Mods," and the final examination for the B.A. degree called "Greats." Lectures in preparation for these examinations are called "lekkers." If at the end of any term a student is not taking a public examination he has a college examination Collections, or "Collekers."

A man who is reading Chemistry is called a "Stinks" man. If he is attending Mathematics lectures he will be a "Maths" man. The tutors are called "Pous."

In his social life, too, the Oxford man has his pet expressions. Breakfast is a favourite meal for the display of hospitality. "Come to 'brekker' with me," a "second year" man will say to the "freshers." The manservant who brings up the breakfast, makes the beds, cleans out the rooms, etc., is called a "scout." Breakfast, lunch, and tea are taken in a man's rooms, dinner is taken in "Hall." The bill for dinners is called "battels."

An average man's day put into Oxford jargon would run something like this:

Get up and "keep a chapel," services being held every morning and evening. After "brekker" go to "lekkers." In the afternoon go and be "tubbed" or take part in a football "squash." He will, perhaps, take tea in the college Junior Common Room, or, familiarly, "J. C. R." At seven "Hall," after which he will read, having first, perhaps, "sported his oak" or closed his outer door to keep ... intruders.

IMMIGRATION TO CANADA.

During the year 1910 no less than 16,348 immigrants to Canada became naturalized British subjects. Of these 5,854, or more than one-third, gave up United States citizenship (including 328 Finns and 108 Poles); Austria-Hungary, 2,889; Iceland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden, 1,151; Italy, 818; France, 397; Germany, 337; Japan, 306; Roumania, 276; Turkey (including Syrians and Armenians), 290; Belgium, 191, and several countries less than one hundred each.

WHOLESALE PRICES STEADY ON VERY HIGH LEVEL.

Wholesale prices throughout Canada during December were on practically the same level as in the preceeding month, according to the index number of the Department of Labor. The number stood at 130.8 in both months. Compared with December a year ago, a rise of over 8 points is shown. These numbers, it will be understood, are percentages in each case of the average price level prevailing during the decade 1890-1909, and are calculated from quotations of about 230 articles. The chief increases during the past year occurred in grains and fodder, dairy products, fish, hides, and metals, there having been decreases in animals and meats, textiles, paints and oils.

FEWER INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS.

Eighty-two fatal and one hundred and ninety-four non-fatal accidents to workpeople were recorded by the Department of Labor during December. This record shows a slight decrease compared with the preceeding month, and is much less than in the same month of last year. In November there were 286 accidents, fatal and non-fatal, to individual workmen, and in December, 1910, there were 351 accidents. The chief disasters during the month were the suffocating of three miners at Middlesboro, B.C., in a chute of a mine, and an explosion in a powder factory at Departure Bay, Vancouver, B.C., in which three men were killed. There were eleven killed in the railway service, and fourteen in mining. The largest number of non-fatal accidents occurred in the metal trades, in which forty-two were injured. Nine men were killed and thirty-one were injured in the building trades, an unusually high number for the month of December. There were twenty-six non-fatal accidents in the railway service.

CANADA'S WATER-POWERS.

The water-powers of the Dominion, according to an estimate made by the engineers of the Commission of Conservation of Canada, stand as one of the great assets of the Dominion. The total amount of power classified in all the provinces, either developed or developable amounts to 21,070,470 horse-power. This includes nothing for the Yukon, and with the exception of one section—the Nelson and Saskatchewan rivers—nothing for the Northwest Territories. The water-powers of Ontario give a total of 6,760,595 horse-power, with the amount developed at 532,266 horse-power. For Quebec the estimate is 5,560,155 horse power, and developed 300,135 horse power. For Nova Scotia the total only reaches 83,200 horse-power, 15,272 horse-power being developed. For New Brunswick, 280,445 horse power, 9765 horse-power developed. For Saskatchewan, 20,200 horse-pawer; 45 horse-power developed. For Alberta 70,430 horse-power and 7,300 horse-power developed. For Northwest Territories an estimate of 6,950,000 horse-power, with no power developed, and for the Yukon no estimate with only one small development of 20,000 horse-power. Manitoba's total is 412,000 horse-power, 48,000 horse-power developed.

AN INTERESTING COMPARISON.

European immigration to Canada has shown a steady increase in nineteen hundred and eleven, but there has been a decided slump in European emigration to the United States.

The statement for the eleven months to December 1st shows that 300,000 fewer immigrants entered the United States in that period than in the year 1910. Moreover, the exodus from the United States to Europe in the same eleven months was exceeded only twice in late years. To trace industrial conditions as sketched this decline of migration in favor of the United States, but the spreading fame of Canada as a land of "milk and honey" has undoubtedly served to divert some of the better class of trans-Atlantic emigration. Nor is the falling off of immigration in the United States merely a matter of numbers. There is a falling off in quality as well. Mr. Williams, commissioner of immigration at New York, says in his report for 1911, that the immigrant of today is inferior, morally and physically, to the immigrant of earlier years. He adds that the south-eastern Europeans, who now form over 80 per cent. of the European immigrants, have exceedingly low standards of living, their habits are filthy and their ignorance so great that in his opinion they have no capacity for assimilation into the citizenship of the United States.

So far, Canada has been comparatively fortunate in the quality of her immigrants. In addition to drawing heavily on the very cream of the Anglo-Saxon farmer of the United States, Canada has succeeded in attracting emigrants from north-eastern Europe, almost to the exclusion of southern Europe people. In the year ending June, 1910, half of the European immigration into Canada was English and Scotch, and not 15 per cent. of it was from southern and south-eastern Europe. The plans now being arranged for more progressive and aggressive immigration work by the Borden government will further sift the quality, as well as increase the number of the immigrants.

RED DEER, ALBERTA

OFFERS THE SMALL INVESTOR THE BEST OPPORTUNITY AT THE PRESENT TIME OF A RAPID ADVANCE IN PRICES

Greater activity is being displayed at this point in railroad construction, than at any other point in the whole of the North West. When construction is completed, railroads will be operating in nine directions from the town, which will become one of the greatest divisional points in the whole of Canada. Persons buying at present prices can look for a quick turnover at double what they paid. We are offering lots in our sub-division of "RIVER VIEW HEIGHTS" at the following low prices: $100 each for inside lots, and $125 for corners, and on the very easy terms of $10 cash and the balance in payments of $5 per month. No interest on balance if deferred payments are made regularly.

BOGUS DETECTIVES

Tricks and Daring Dodges of Wily Impostors to Extort Money from Unsuspecting Men and Women.

It was a well-known magistrate who, a short time ago, described the offence of two men who, by impersonating detective officers, had obtained $50 from a woman under the pretext of shielding her husband from the consequences of a robbery which they said he had committed, as one of the "worst forms of blackmailing"; and from inquiries which the writer has made there does not seem to be much doubt in official circles that quite a large number of men are going about posing as detectives and obtaining money by such pretences.

They go to work in much the same way as the ordinary blackmailer. That is to say, they get to know something detrimental to the character of a man or woman, and then endeavour to come to terms with their victims by promising to withhold the warrant for arrest and "squaring" the matter. In the majority of cases the generally ignorant people, who do not stop to ask the "detective" to produce the warrant, or who forget that a detective by so acting, renders himself liable to the severest punishment, who are the usual victims, although at times these bogus detectives try to higher game.

Posing as Police Officers.

Last year, for instance, the case came to light of a wealthy manufacturer, whose son had led a wild life while in London and forged a cheque for $250, paying a man whom he believed to be from Scotland Yard and who made out that he held a warrant for the son's arrest, $2000 to report that the boy had fled the country. The "detective" called on the father, said that he understood the son was hiding in the neighbourhood, and that he would like the father's help to execute the warrant. Not doubting the man's word, the father, to hush up the matter, suggested that he should pay the detective a price to go back to London and state that he had failed to find the culprit. Two thousand dollars was the price agreed upon and it was not until the father had an official visit from Scotland Yard in regard to the matter that he learned how he had been victimized.

Quite recently a couple of men were heavily fined for representing themselves as police officers and threatening another man with arrest on account of a cheque which they said had been dishonoured because of the false signature; while a particularly mean trick was played upon a widow some months ago when a man called and said that he held a warrant for the arrest of her son, who was a sailor, for taking part in an alleged robbery of goods from the dockyard. The mother was frightened, and, knowing that her son was to sail in a few hours, parted with £5 to induce the "detective" to hold up the warrant until he had sailed. The detective knew that the case was a fabrication, and relied on this fact to extort money from the widow, who found out the trick when she read of the man being sentenced to imprisonment for trying a similar dodge in another part of the town.

The Worst Feature.

Perhaps the worst feature of this bogus detective business has recently been exposed in the English law courts. Cases are known of men who set up as private inquiry agents who have no qualifications for such work, and who simply announce themselves as such in order to acquire knowledge from those who seek their services, afterwards using this knowledge to extort money from their victims.

A couple of months ago, for instance, a lady who wished to relieve herself of the attentions of a blackmailer who had learned a secret of her past life and was continually worrying her for money, rashly confided her troubles to one of these bogus detectives, whose advertisement she had seen in a certain paper. He had no sooner learned all the circumstances of the case than he, too, after finding that she would pay no more money until he had achieved some result, turned round and demanded a large sum for keeping his mouth shut regarding the secret she had confided to him. Luckily, she had the courage to go to the police about the matter, with the result that the scoundrel quickly fled the country.

Sounds of the Saw

"Oi can see red rowses bloomin'!" sang the street vocalist, and he was about to broach the second spasm when a carpenter's apprentice beckoned him to his side.

"I'll give you tuppence," he declared, "if you'll stay in this shed and slug till I come back. I'm dying for a drink of milk." And the songster assented.

Soon the apprentice reappeared, and paid over the twopence.

"I s'pose," said the vocalist, "that my voice is about the same as yours, an' you thought your boss wouldn't know the difference—eh?"

The other looked at him indignantly, and then replied:—

"Your voice the same as mine! If you want to know, it's the same as my saw's, and I wanted the guv'nor to think I was working hard on these planks."

New Skin Absorber In Great Demand

(National Drug Review)

Since the discovery that mercolized wax possesses remarkable absorbent powers when applied to the skin, the demand for it as a complexion renewer has been tremendous. Druggists in every section report sales as far exceeding those of anything similar they have ever had on their shelves.

The mercolide in the wax, according to Prof. Hoffman, gently absorbs the devitalized cuticle, in minute particles, so that the user gradually loses her old, worn-out complexion, the more youthful under-skin taking its place. Cutaneous eruptions, blotches, moth patches, tan and freckles are of course removed at the same time. As mercolized wax is entirely harmless and easy to use, women all over the country are purchasing it to quickly rejuvenate their complexions. The wax is applied to face, neck or hands the same as cold cream, allowed to remain over night, then washed off with warm water.

MADE A JOURNAL

A Merry "Ad." That Set All Austral Laughing at a Premier and Made — Mission

Although the affair happened over thirty years ago, Australia still chuckles when the name of Henderson Africanus is mentioned; for it calls to mind the biggest joke ever perpetrated 'down under" — a joke which made all Australia laugh, covered a Premier with ridicule, and firmly established the reputation of the 'Melbourne Punch.'

The joke arose through Premier Berry, of Victoria, being defeated by the Upper House in his effort to change its constitution. He thereupon conceived the idea of sending an embassy to England to persuade the Imperial Government towards his scheme of reforming. The 'Melbourne Punch,' however, announced that, as there was to be an embassy, both sides should be represented, and promptly proceeded to appoint a "mock embassy" on its own account.

As Proud as a Peacock.

After due deliberation (says the 'Newspaper Owner'), the rival "ambassador" was chosen in Henderson Africanus, a full-blooded West Indian negro, who could talk politics by the league.

He was hired at $1.50 a day, and dressed in the worst-fitting and black est suit that could be obtained in Melbourne. On his head was a fantastical top-hat half a yard high. In his pocket was a huge brass watch, and across his aldermanic stomach swung a brass chain large enough to tether a steam-engine. Dressed in this absurd raiment, and as proud as a peacock, Henderson paraded Melbourne, a delighted crowd following him wherever he went. The whole thing was a most extravagant travesty. Of course the nigger took himself seriously as the chief figure in the political pantomime.

A Splendid Circulat on-Raiser.

"That Mr. Berry, sah, he have h private secretary, sah. Henderso Africanus want a private secretary sah," was his request to 'Punch's' delighted management, and a secretar he was given. The biggest, dirties ugliest nigger in Melbourne was hire and dutifully he followed at the "ambassador's" heels as he perambulated the streets. To all and sundry Africanus introduced him gravely, "M secretary, sah."

Everybody in the country was talking about Africanus, while the circulation of the 'Melbourne Punch' went up by leaps and bounds. As the Premier's departure drew near the paper further elaborated the joke. Public meetings were held to support the black "ambassador." A banquet was given him, to which sixty prominent citizens came and Henderson was brought to the hotel worthy of the magnificence and the importance of his mission. Brass band blared "See the Conquering Hero Comes," and the populace cheered madly as he drove up to the hotel steps.

Kicked Out.

The joke assumed such proportions that the Premier became quite alarmed, and he and many of his supporters really believed that their opponents intended to keep up the joke in London, and thus cover the whole mission with ridicule. A quiet hint, therefore, was given to the shipping company that, if Henderson was given a passage on the vessel in which the Premier and his friends intended to embark, they would not travel.

Africanus was sent to the shipping office to demand passages for himself and his secretary. He was promptly kicked out. This provoked an outburst of simulated fury. Indignation meetings were held to protest against the outrage put upon a Victorian citizen at the instance of the provoked [illegible] and signatures were a petition

Secretary at home.

Just at this psychological moment the 'Melbourne Punch' stopped the joke, which had now provided [illegible] The Premier went on his mission, and Henderson Africanus took up the humble but honest job of newsvendor. He had done the 'Melbourne Punch' a good service and established it firmly as a public favourite, which on its merits it thoroughly well deserves.

A WITTY BISHOP

Perhaps one of the best definitions of the functions of the House of Lords was that given by Bishop Wilberforce when called upon at a dinner of a City Company, London, of which he was an honorary member, to respond to the toast of "The Lords and Commons." "Gentlemen," said he, "I can only compare our two great legislative Chambers to a clock, of which the House of Commons is the mainspring and the House of Lords the pendulum — a pendulum which wags, wags, wags, the while it keeps the mainspring in order, and prevents the clock from running down."

The story is also told of the manner in which the bishop silenced some young men who endeavoured to drag him into a controversy at a time when a series of tracts, entitled, "The Road to Heaven," was creating a considerable sensation. The bishop however, proved too much for them, merely saying: "The best and only road to Heaven I know is to turn to the right and go straight on."

TWO AUDIENCES

Mr. Bonar Law Speaks to Lions and Hyenas.

Never, perhaps, has a leading politician delivered a speech under more extraordinary conditions than those which characterized a meeting three years ago at Mountain Ash, Glamorgan when Mr. Bonar Law, the new Leader of the Opposition was announced to speak. The pavilion at Mountain Ash, which will seat more than 10,000 people, had been let to the Tory Party for Mr. Bonar Law's meeting. Almost immediately afterwards Messrs. Bostock and Wombwell came along and offered forthwith to rent the big building for the winter. The hall was let to them, and the Conservatives were told that they could not have it for their demonstration.

Mr. Littlejohns, the organizer, informed the owners that his meeting would be held there at all costs. After some complimentary passages at arms had been exchanged it was decided that the lions and elephants and hyenas should form part of Mr Bonar Law's audience, but that they should be walled in with canvas matting. They were well fed before the meeting, and the show band was engaged so that the animals should not be disturbed with strange music. Inside the wall their keepers marched to and fro with prods to prevent the lions and monkeys from interrupting the speakers.

Mr. Bonar Law arrived late, and was unconscious of the fact that he was addressing two audiences. As the human audience applauded, however, the prods were vigorously used to prevent the listeners in the cages from discarding the chorus.

When Mr. Bonar Law reached his peroration one of the lions was so struck with the force of the arguments that he bellowed forth his approval. It was an anxious moment. The prod however, opposed his applause, and he subsided in disgust.

When Mr. Bonar Law had finished and had sat down he said to Mr Littlejohns: "I thought it was a very successful attempt by some Liberal opponent to imitate a lion's voice."

I Am Willing To Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10.00 Worth of Medicine

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this medicine, and anyone suffering from these diseases can get a box of it absolutely free. All that is necessary is to send me your address.

I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and pay me if cured. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the Uric Acid sufferers of the world, so I can show them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, nor would I accept it now or later if you sent it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying calls to urinate. But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to listen to anyone thereafter. Happily, I am in a position now to demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to spend any money to find out; I don't ask them to believe me, nor even to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my own cost. That is surely fair.

To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars, which will be used to compound my medicine. Much of it is ready now to be sent out, all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there be thousands of them. And anyone who needs it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have a disease for which this medicine is intended, I ask you to send me some of your leading symptoms. If you have any of the symptoms in the list printed here you need my medicine, and if you will write me I will gladly send you a box of it free with full directions for your use. Look the symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, then write me about as follows: "Dear Dr., I notice symptoms number"—here put down the numbers, give your age, full address, and send it to me. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 837 Franklin Building, Toronto, Can.

The ten thousand dollars I am spending for the compounding of my medicine is only a part of the money I am devoting to this cause, for the package of medicine I send you will be fully prepaid at my expense. From any standpoint you view it, YOU incur no expense or obligation. Just tell others who you know are suffering who sent you the medicine that cured you.

I am promising to give away ten thousand dollars' worth of medicine, and I will do that; I am promising to send any sufferer who writes me a box of this medicine and full directions free of charge, and I will do that.

DR. T. FRANK LYNOTT
who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

I can say further that this medicine has been vouched for according to law as complying in every detail with all requirements. It will stop rheumatism, it will stop pain and backache, it will stop too frequent desire to urinate; it will heal, soothe and strengthen. You will be better in every way for having taken it. There is not an ingredient that can injure; not one but will benefit. All that I ask is that you use it yourself so that you may be personally convinced.

Owing to the large number of requests I have had ten thousand more copies of my medical book printed. This book is new and up to date and contains complete descriptions, symptoms, causes, effects and cures of kidney, bladder and rheumatic diseases. All who write for the free medicine will be sent a copy of this grand illustrated medical book—the largest ever written on these diseases for free and general distribution.

If you need medicine such as I have, if you are anxious to be cured and don't want to spend any money LOOKING for cures, write me. Read the symptoms over and let me hear from you today.

These Are the Symptoms:

1—Pain in the back.
2—Too frequent desire to urinate.
3—Burning or obstruction of urine.
4—Pain or soreness in the bladder.
5—Prostatic trouble.
6—Gnawing pain in the stomach.
7—General debility, weak nerves, dizziness.
8—Pain or soreness in any right rib.
9—Aching in any part of the body.
10—Constipation or liver trouble.
11—Palpitation or pain under the heart.
12—Pain in the hip joints.
13—Pain in the small of the back.
14—Pain or soreness in the kidneys.
15—Pain or swelling in the feet.
16—Pain or swelling of the ankles.
17—Pain and soreness in nerves.
18—Acute or chronic rheumatism.

THE WONDERFUL BARN

In Ireland, in the county of Kildare, not far distant from Leixlip, is a very picturesque architectural effort, commonly called "The Wonderful Barn." It is built of brick and has six storeys. Each storey internally, is dome-shaped, and in the centre of each floor is a round hole, so fashioned that by means of tackle sacks of corn can be lowered or raised from floor to floor. The ordinary means of entrance and access is by way of a cockscrew flight of steps, which is carried around and outside the building, being connected with doors on each floor. The whole structure is 75ft. high, and was built with the chief object of providing employment for the out-of-works of the district.

MUFFS FOR MEN

Although the muff is now exclusively an article of feminine apparel, it was when first introduced to England, toward the close of the sixteenth century, used by both men and women. In fact, in the seventeenth century it was generally regarded as an essential part of the dress of a man of fashion. The muffs then used were somewhat similar to the present fashion — large and bulky.

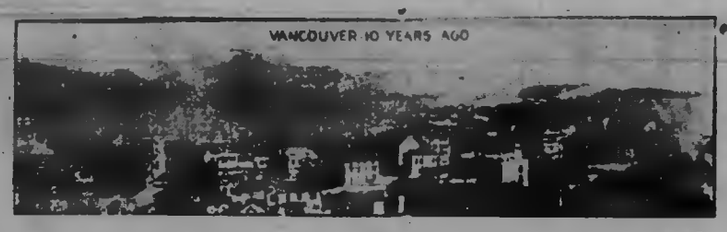
BUILDERS' PROFITS with Bankers' Security



100,000 SHARES AT $1.00

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has been organized recently with an authorized capital of $500,000, to do a general building, real estate, and insurance business, and is actively engaged in Vancouver and Victoria—two most promising fields. The profits from building houses for cash and selling on instalments is well known, and will be one of the principal channels from which profits will be derived. BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its own building department and architect, and does its own construction. In addition to building houses, BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its real estate department, where it carries on a general real estate business, discounting agreements of Sale, subdividing and transacting a general insurance business.

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS LIMITED, is a new concern, having been in business less than two months in Vancouver, but is becoming well known as the Company without any promotion shares and with a strong board of directors, made up of well known Vancouver and Victoria business men.

Shareholders may conservatively look for a 10 per cent dividend the first year, increasing thereafter and a steady advance in the value of their shares caused by the substantial reserve it will always be the policy of the directors to build up.

Companies run on similar lines, notably the Los Angeles Investment Company and "Home Builders," both of Los Angeles, have proved phenominally successful, the former, which has been in business some sixteen years, having accumulated assets of over $6,000,000, and paying 28 per cent. dividends; and the latter, which started business three years ago, with only $1,250 capital, has assets to-day of over $1,089,000, a surplus of over $308,000, is paying 17 per cent. dividends, and its $1.00 shares are selling at $2.30.

RUBY MINES AT DISCOUNT

Nature's Secret of Precious Stone Manufacture Said to Have Been Laid Bare and Big Slump in Prices is Promised.

Attempts to manufacture diamonds in the laboratory have drawn the attention of the public from time to time, notably in connection with a recent lawsuit. The rich harvest which awaits the successful and not too scrupulous experimenter, and the extraordinary political consequences which must follow upon any sudden collapse of the diamond market and of the diamond mining industry, are absolutely startling to think of; certainly both rewards and consequences would be out of all proportion to the scientific value of the achievement. Yet there is reason to believe that before many years have passed the "synthetic diamond" may be as much a reality as the synthetic ruby is today. But the public will not be allowed to hear of the discovery at once — the process will be kept secret as long as possible in order to maintain high prices — and it is pretty safe to prophecy that ten times as many swindles will be perpetrated with the synthetic diamond as there have been with the synthetic ruby. Even yet, although the industry has been in full swing for several years, and all the essential points of the process are known, the general public has not awakened to the fact that rubies of the finest quality and of the purest "pigeon's blood" colour, as well as sapphires, spinelles, and chrysoberyls, are being turned out in quantity from several laboratories in France and Germany. It is extremely difficult to get people to understand that these products are not imitation rubies — they are quite different from the red "paste" which masquerades as ruby in the cheaper sorts of jewellery. The new products are real rubies in every sense of the term, but they have been made by man, not by nature.

APPLES OF GOLD IN TASMANIA

Great Apple-Growing Centre Opening Up in Australia and Orchard-Owners on this Continent Will Have to Keep Awake.

Recent enlightenment has shown that Tasmania, which is one of the States of the Commonwealth, has a considerable area of splendid land available for agriculture and fruit-growing situated in the Great Tamar Valley near the city of Launceston. This Tamar Valley is destined, in a few years, to be more famed for the production of apples than Oregon and Washington, or the Pacific slopes of [illegible], are among the choicest fruits and have been selling in Great Britain recently at over $5.00 per bushel case, after over 12,000 miles cool storage.

The River Tamar extends over 34 miles; in parts it is two miles wide and is a great attraction for pleasure seekers. Some of the land here has recently been sold at low figures, but prices are rising owing to the greater knowledge of its value as fruit land. This locality has originally been settled by hardy pioneers from the River Tamar and the town of Launceston in Cornwall, England, from which places the local names have been derived. The climate has plenty of sunshine and no great extremes; in fact, it may be summed up in one word, "ideal"; also the rainfall is from 30 to 35 inches per annum.

The land is being readily taken up by settlers from the various countries of Great Britain, Canada, India, and other parts.

AMONG THE CANNIBALS

"Dear, dear!" remarked Mr. Jackpot Jones, as he dropped the newspaper upon his knees and gazed at his dear wife, sitting on the opposite side of the fireplace, "what an extraordinary case!"

"What is, dear?" asked sweet Mrs. J., as she leaned back in her chair to the sound of cracking whalebone.

"Why—er—a report here of a ship that was wrecked near Tierra del Fuego, where the cannibals are, you know, dear. The Fuegans killed and ate the males, it appears, but absolutely refused to eat more than one of the five females who were amongst the survivors of the wreck."

"Indeed! I should have thought they would have preferred to eat ladies. They are so much more tender than men, aren't they?"

"Well, I don't know. It seems, according to this account, that the two men they ate had nothing on but flannel shirts and linen trousers, which the savages munched up with the men. The one woman that they ate——"

"Ah!"

"Had on her, in addition to her stuff clothes, about a pint of hairpins, a wire corset, a bent steel dress-improver, seven oxidized silver bangles, a burnished waist-belt, with steel chatelaine, scissors, memo-book, corkscrew, etc., brass-tipped heels to her boots, gilt——"

"Good gracious, how they must have suffered!"

"Rather! Listen to this: 'For five days after, the chief of the tribe never moved or spoke, but has since recovered and celebrated his convalescence by burning forty children as a thank-offering. He has since sworn, and made his tribe swear, never to eat another white squaw.'"

The World's Largest Flying Bird.

Among the most notable of recent additions to the "Zoo" is what is generally regarded as the largest flying bird in the world. It is known as the lammergeyer (lamb vulture, or bearded vulture). This giant bird has recently arrived from India, and is the largest of all eagles or vultures. Its wings measure over 14 ft. from tip to tip, and it is not yet full grown.

The lammergeyer is found in Mid-Europe, Asia, and North Africa. It is said to live mainly on carrion, but it is not averse to "creating" carrion by knocking an unwary chamois or goat over a precipice with a blow from its tremendous wing, afterwards flying down to the body to obtain a meal. Even mountaineers have been reported as having fallen victims to this method of assault.

BRIGHT AS AN ORATOR

John Bright was the greatest orator England saw during the nineteenth century, an age and a country where oratory reached the heights. To hold such place he must out-tour Gladstone, the great; Disraeli, the brilliant; Palmerston, the witty; Cobden, the wise; Parnell even, with whom he is closely associated. His speeches are still read, and readable today, by those who rejoice in the lovely phrasing which keeps them literature where they were speech.

Augustine Birrell calls his address at the unveiling of the statue to Richard Cobden, "one of the greatest pieces of English speech," and again, the after breakfast speech in welcome to Lloyd Garrison in 1867, "perhaps the most beautiful speech ever made in the English tongue on a

His habit was ever to stand at the edge of the platform where the audience could "get at him" and he at them. As he criticized a friend who sheltered behind the reading desk, "no man can move an audience that does not see his boots." He must have been a splendid looking figure, like John Bright, as he thundered like Amos, and lamented the Jeremiah, and loved like Saint John. His was a splendid face, redeeming mankind from a counterfeit presentment of godhood. And it is not so stern or set a face as might have been expected from his prejudices. Was it of him one wonders that Sydney Smith asked of the portrait painter. "Couldn't you manage to throw into the portrait a little more antagonism to the Established Church?"

Load Affidavits

"What is that noise?" asked the presiding judge when a witness's voice was nearly drowned by a rasping uproar outside the court.

"My lord," said the counsel for the defendant, "I think it is the plaintiff filing affidavits."

Some of the new parasols are edged with narrow ostrich feathers, and have a big bow of ribbon on the handle, also edged with feathers.

For a satin slipper nothing is so effective as a small round buckle of rhinestone through which is inserted a satin or velvet ribbon.

Curls and puffs are used in profusion and quantities of false hair are still absolutely necessary. Infantile styles prevail — quite babyish, in fact.

A Home Recipe For Wrinkled, Shaggy Skin

(From Beauty and Health)

The famous saxolite lotion which is recommended by beauty specialists for the removal of wrinkles and for reducing distended pores, can be made at home. Ask your druggist for saxolite in powdered form, 1 oz., and ½ pint witch hazel. Dissolve the powder in the witch hazel and bathe the face, neck and hands in the solution. Results are remarkable, and instantaneous. The skin tightens, and this naturally reduces the wrinkles, as well as creases or folds about the neck, cheeks or hands. The tissue and muscle beneath the skin also become firmer and more solid.

One feels much refreshed and exhilarated after using this truly wonderful preparation. Its continued use for only a short time will make one look five or ten years younger.

When you have a bilious attack give Chamberlain's Tablets a trial. They are excellent. For sale by all dealers.

WHO'S WHO IN CANADA

SIR ROBT. PERKS, BART.

Financier and Engineer

Capital combined with foresight and industrial confidence, coupled with untiring energy and zeal, are among the requirements and in having these Canada can thank her great men. They have developed and are still developing her resources and making the brand "Made in Canada" favorably known in the marts of the world. The position which the Dominion has assumed, not only as the foremost of the outlying sections of the British Empire but in the estimation of all civilized nations, is a tribute to her great men and a striking evidence that our opportunities have not been neglected.

SIR ROBT. PERKS, BART.

And though Sir Robt. Perks is not a Canadian his interests lately, have been largely in this country particularly with his Georgian Bay scheme. A man who has sufficient confidence in Canada as to offer to invest millions of dollars of his own and friends must see a large future for the country.

HON. ADAM BECK

Toronto.

Canada's water powers are greater than those of any other country in the world. Her known or estimated flow development is about twenty-six million horse power, but it is certain that this is but a fraction of her water power asset.

So far the computation has been dependent upon somewhat unreliable statistics, but the energy displayed by the Conservation Commission has had beneficial results. This important body has stirred to action some indifferent provincial authorities, and there is now the prospect that by next Spring a complete table of waterpowers in the Dominion will be ready to place before the public, along with much valuable information relating thereto. It may be said in passing that the provincial governments for the most part have been negligent in the matter, and it is only where the federal government has control and responsibility that accurate information has up till the present time been available.

It is not the intention of the writer to convey the idea that all of the provinces have stupidly sat by and left the power question alone. There is the very notable exception of Ontario, where the Hydro-Electric Commission has done a wonderful work in developing cheap power for the people of that province. But none the less the province of Ontario has not gone to the trouble of accurately estimating the water powers of New Ontario or the great hinterland beyond.

The Hydro-Electric Commission, with which the name of the Hon. Adam Beck will always be associated, has an immense scheme under way to give the people of the whole province the cheapest possible light, heat and power that electricity can give. In general the proposal is that the power at Niagara will supply western and southwestern Ontario, from the rapids on the St. Lawrence will be derived the power for eastern Ontario from the vicinity of Ottawa will come the power for northeastern and central Ontario, while there are enough water powers in New Ontario to supply the whole of the north and the north central. Thus Ontario will have, unless it is interfered with, a complete network of transmission lines to supply every village.

Mr. Beck who was born in Waterloo, Ont. in 1857 is a successful business man as well as thorough sportsman and public man. He is member of many societies and orders.

Cause of Rheumatism

Many physicians believe that rheumatism is the result of over-feeding, followed by putrefactive changes in the foodstuffs in the alimentary canal; that the action of certain bacteria produces specific toxic (poison) substances which, when introduced into the blood, cause a deviation from the normal oxidation process, thus causing the condition that is designated rheumatic. In the majority of instances it is probably due to eating too much of the vegetable class of foods; in other cases it is the result of eating too much meat

MY LADY'S COLUMN.

HAIR POWDER

The first English ladies who had the courage to wear powdered hair were as much pointed at for their singularity as the wearer of a crinoline would be to-day. It was in the beginning of the reign of George the First that the pioneers ventured to make themselves so conspicuous, and at the time when the next King was crowned there were only two hairdressers in London; but in the year 1795 it was calculated that there were in Great Britain no less than fifty thousand hair-dressers! A writer with a turn for statistics reckoned up the probable amount of flour these fifty thousand would use in a year, and arrived at the conclusion that it was equal to what would make 5,214,285 quartern loaves.

Apart from the question whether the flour might not have been better employed, it must be owned that there is more excuse for the artificial production of grey hair than there is for the dyeing of hair which nature decides that it is time for it to be grey.

Simple Hospitality

Sometimes a young married woman finds a dreary, domestic routine, honestly believing that until her husband improve there is no other course for her to pursue. The very fact that many people cannot afford elaborate entertainments does not imply that they cannot enjoy simple ones. Novelty is the chief of life, as variety is its spice, and very often the guests who come from luxurious homes are the most easily pleased. The young housewife who, through fear of criticism, refuses to invite her richer or more experienced friend to her home is cheating herself of much pleasure.

SMART WINTER COSTUME

Fashioned of Black Velutina

An apron front edged with knitted silk fringe is the feature of a street costume of velutina.

This walking suit is of black, old blue satin being the contrasting tone in the revers upon the three-quarters length jacket. The revers, too, are edged with fringe and are embroidered with soutache braid of the blue tone.

The coat is trimmed with Hercules braid. A touch of white is given this walking costume with marabout. The delicate feather outlines the collar and cuffs.

The lines of the skirt show a slight tendency to fullness and in length it just escapes the floor.

The model would be pretty in corduroy or cloth.

Golden Orange Cake.

Cream one-fourth cup of butter, add one-half cup of sugar slowly, and continue beating. Add the yolks of five eggs, beaten until thick and lemon coloured, and one teaspoon of orange extract. Mix and sift seven-eighths cup of pastry flour with one and one-half teaspoons of baking powder, and add alternately with one-fourth cup of milk to the first mixture. Bake in a buttered and floured tin.

Highest on Earth

The Loa Bridge in the Chilean Andes is the highest bridge in the world. This wonderful construction is four hundred feet high, eighty hundred feet long, and stands ten thousand feet above sea-level. It crosses a great ravine some three hundred miles from Antofagasta, on the railway running from that port into Bolivia. This line is also of interest from the fact that it is the highest railway in the world, climbing at one point up to over sixteen thousand six hundred feet above sea level.

SPORTING COLUMN.

ENGLISHMEN AND OLYMPIC GAMES.

To win the Olympic games seems to be the ruling passion of a large number of Englishmen, just now. The wave of patriotism is sweeping in England. The cry for Olympic material has reached national proportions.

Englishmen have always been wonderful distance runners. They have been weak at the sprints and in some of the field events.

The effort now being made is to find men capable of holding the old country on the field and in the sprints in the hope that the distance runners

HARRY GREEN

will "bring home the bacon."

Two of the best amateurs in England are Harry Green, a marathon runner of ability and W. Scott, England's 10-mile champion.

LACROSSE ON SKATES

A new game is being introduced in Regina this winter, lacrosse on skates. It has been tried and accepted by the sportsmen in Eastern Ontario, and will be given a trial. It is played by seven-men teams, who line up as they would on a lacrosse green. A soft ball is used and players are not allowed to raise their sticks above the shoulders. An offender against this is sent to the penalty [illegible] rule makes underhand [illegible]

The Rough Riders are practising the game in Regina, and are ready to meet any team in town that would like to take a whirl at it. They organized at a meeting held in the Palmer House, when the following officers were elected:

Honorary president, A. W. McIvor; president, Geo. Harper; vice-president, C. N. Galvin; secretary, Chas. Wood; treasurer, A. A. Fisher; manager, Wm. Dogan.

The following players will be in the line-up: L. Arnold, A. Urquhart, F. Harper, H. Hall, W. Dogan, J. Staples Barlow, D. Hopp and Jimmie McLaughlin.

VARIETY OF HOLES IN GOLF

The up-to-date golf architects generally agree nowadays that in the arrangement of courses that must in something there should be a complete variety of holes not only as to length, but in their character, the way in which they are bunkered, the kind of tee shot that is required at them, and last, but not least, the kind of approach. In every case the putting greens should be thoroughly well guarded.

It has also been claimed that the shorter the hole the smaller should be the green and the more closely it should be guarded, so that on this principle when in good play a long shot can reach the green which should be fairly large and open in order to give the player encouragement to which he is entitled.

In this subject, however, there must ever be difference of opinion. There are those who argue that it is wrong to say that a fairly long course is a sufficient test to select the best golfer out of a field of any fifty or one hundred competitors. In other words, no course can be a thorough test of the skill and nerve of the player which has not so closely guarded greens that on occasions there is but room, and that a most skilful shot, by which the long approach can get home.

FOOTBALL

How sports, once only followed in the British Empire, have become popular all over the world, is again illustrated by Association football. Its growth has been rapid and its popularity is by no means confined to the white race. Some of the native teams in the ramparts of Empire are capable of showing really good football, all of which is satisfactory. How other nations have taken to "soccer," rather comes home to one through Fulham having tried Hussern Hegarti as centre forward on Saturday, against Stockport. He is an Egyptian, who showed capital form against English teams at Cairo before coming to England a few months ago. His play in England was closely watched, and he shaped very well for a first appearance in an important game.

The Down-Trodden.

A certain battalion — the Terrors" — possessed but a very small band. The commanding officer's feet — he was a burly farmer — were — well, very large. One day the battalion was to march out, but the music was not forthcoming.

"Where on earth is the band?" queried the adjutant.

For some time there was no reply; but when the question was repeated, a gruff voice was heard from the rear rank:—

"I do believe, sir, the colonel trod on it by accident."

Swansea, Wales, Jan. 19.—An unknown steamer was sunk with all hands near here during the night owing to a collision with the Cunard Line steamer Veria from Liverpool.

The Veria, which arrived here with damaged bows, cruised for several hours following the collision about the spot where it occurred, but she was unable to find any trace of survivors or of wreckage.

The lost vessel was a small one, probably carrying a crew of about a dozen men.

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Jan. 19.—Over a thousand men were killed and wounded in the battle yesterday at Yaguache, to the north east of this city.

An army supporting the Quito Government, under the command of Gen. Julio Andrade, formerly Ecuadorean Minister to Colombio, attacked and defeated an army of Guayaquil troops supporting the provisional Government, proclaimed by Gen. Flavio Alfaro.

The first and third troop of the Boy Scouts held a meeting last night to complete arrangements for holding a banquet. The Boy Scouts are a flourishing institution in Peterborough, though there is still room for a number of recruits.

KING EDWARD VACUM CLEANER

You cannot clean carpets, rugs and furniture by beating. If you think you have, just try a KING EDWARD VACUUM CLEANER and you will find the article full of dust, which breeds disease.

The KING EDWARD HAND MACHINE has no equal as compared with other hand machines. It is lighter to operate and its suction is much stronger. Its suction is stronger than many of the power machines, and the dusting is done easy with. On account of its short stroke, one person can operate it on carpets and rugs equally as well as two, and it is about half the weight of other hand machines to carry up and down stairs or from one room to another. It is sold for less money than any of the hand machines. All machines are guaranteed.

COSTLY SPITE

The most expensive act of damage ever committed by a railway worker was that of an Italian navvy employed in the construction of a tunnel through one of the mountains in the Black Forest. Having a grudge against his foreman, he succeeded one night in altering the position of the stakes which marked the course of the work. The excavators were working upon the tunnel in two sections, one from the north and one from the south. Owing to the shifting of the stakes the sections, instead of being directed to the same point, were found to be twenty-six feet apart when they reached the middle of the mountain. The northern half of the tunnel had, therefore, to be entirely reconstructed, at a cost of $875,000.

KING A FARMER

King George is a monarch who does not scorn to make money by sidelines. From his model farms at Windsor, Balmoral, and Sandringham he derives a handsome revenue, and maintains a herd of several hundred superb cattle, which take prizes at agricultural shows all over the country. His Majesty is also keeping up the late King Edward's horse-breeding establishment of Sandringham, where, in addition to racehorses, he raised hackneys, coach-horses carriage-horses and ponies.

MONEY FROM INVENTIONS

Many of the scions of Europe's reigning houses are in receipt of big sums from inventions for which they have been responsible.

The reigning Grand Duke of Oldenburg, for example, has invented a form of propeller which most of the German warships and liners use. A collar-stud, which is selling in hundreds of thousands, has been invented by the German Crown Prince. And one of the most up-to-date aeroplanes is the invention of the Grand Duke of Hesse.

HAYES AND JOE MANDOT

While all eyes were turned toward Los Angeles for the battle between Wolgast and Welsh it might be well to keep in mind another bout which although not so important, may have a bearing on the lightweight title in the future. The contest will be between Grover Hayes and Joe Mandot, who gained fame by whipping Mowburn Saylor. Mandot and Hayes should put up a grand fight and the winner will be in line for the winner of the Welsh-Wolgast bout.

REASONABLE REQUEST

It was a cold night. The traveller, inquired at the only hotel in the little town if he could be lodged for the night, but was informed that it was full up.

"But you must give me some sort of accommodation," said the stranger. "Surely you don't want me to sleep under the starry but chilly skies?"

"Well," said the proprietor, "the best we can do is to make you up a bed in the passage and curtain it off for you." And so it was arranged.

In the dark watches of the night the traveller awoke. A freezing draught chilled him, and the sheet which had been hung up as a partition was blowing merrily in the breeze. The traveller rose and shouted for the landlord.

"What is it?" queried a voice from the stairhead.

"Please," said the stranger, timidly, "may I have a paper of pins to fix my bedroom door with?"

THE SILENT JAP

The Japanese, alone of all races, utter no sound when engaged in combat. From this national trait springs the curious regulation which prevents Japanese regiments from possessing bands bugles, or drums. Orders are given verbally, or by means of signals with the hand or sword. No trumpets sound the charge, no drums beat the tattoo, and no bugles wake the troops with their ringing calls.

A FAIR OFFER

It was a political meeting in the East during the last recess, and the M. P., an exceptionally popular man, was addressing his constituents. The politician in question rejoices in a luxuriant crop of hair. The audience was sympathetic for the most part; but there was one man in the front row of the audience who made numerous interruptions. He was a coal-heaver, apparently, and had but recently been heaving coals.

"Get your hair cut!" he shouted during a most pathetic passage in the candidate's speech. The well-known catch phrase seemed particularly applicable, so a good many of the audience laughed.

But the M.P. was equal to the occasion.

"I will make a bargain with that gentleman," he said. "I will get my hair cut if he will get his face washed."

There were no more interruptions.

CALABASH PIPES

Showing How the Favourite of the Smoker Can Be Made to Grow in Your Back-Garden or Window.

The fruits are allowed to remain on the vine, which is a relative of the Gourds, till the outer parts are quite hard, for if gathered before they are thoroughly ripe, difficulty is experienced in seasoning. On the other hand, they must not be allowed to remain long enough on the ground to frost, for a before frost is likely to cause injury. Dry, sunny weather is more favourable to the development of fruit than wet weather, for though the plants will take plenty of water, more satisfactory results are obtained from watering by hand than from the plants being subjected to an excessive amount of rain. The past summer, with its long-continued heat, has been ideal for the successful cultivation of these Gourds, in England, providing they were well watered at frequent interval. Seeds sown here on a slight hot-bed and the plants allowed to grow till they had filled a frame, which could be lifted off about mid-June, would probably give the most satisfactory results. If grown throughout the whole of their career in a frame or greenhouse, however, arrangements ought to be made for a free circulation of air at all times. Apart from the utility of the fruits of this plant, it is quite ornamental enough to receive attention from a decorative standpoint, either indoors or out.

THE MAIN THING

The Poets May Sing that the Heart's the Thing and Scientists the Brain But It's the Stomach That Counts.

Troubles "to burn" we have, in turn, and blessings befall us, too; and we show our pluck and we have our luck in whatever we have to do; but all of our pluck and most of our luck will come from our real might, and that will depend in the usual end upon whether the stomach is right! There'll be bills galore and we'll walk the floor, if we're not in the best of trim; there'll be notes mature and we'll fail for sure, if we're lacking at all in vim; we may want to roam from the things at home and consider it all a blight, but there's nothing so punk it can make us frunk, if only the stomach is right! The poets may sing that the heart's the thing, and the scientists talk of brain, and these may not shirk in their daily work, but it's little that they ordain; they are organs fine but their chief design is as registers of mood, and the one that guides and their way decides is the one that handles food! And its function great and its high estate are the marvels we should admire, and to cherish it and to keep it fit should be our chief desire; if it's sound as a bell we can do things well, and do 'em with all our might; we can laugh at fate and can celebrate if only the stomach is right!

Sceptical

Meditating in a certain Northern churchyard the other day, we came across an old tombstone bearing the following epitaph:—

"Here lie the bones of William Shott,
He warmly welcomed travellers here,
But now his smile is seen no more."

"Requiescat in pace," we murmured. "One of the good old sort." Then our eyes wandered further down the sad "memento mori," and discovered that some sceptic with a sharp nail and added:

"Fret not; his welcome down below Was more than warm—'twas hot, I trow."

Then, alas! we, too, grew sceptical; so fertile are the seeds of doubt and suspicion. Alas! alas!

Kisses For Sale.

Miss Rose Bud: "Now, Mr. Compton, what are you going to buy at my table? We have home-made cakes, glass-cloths, tidies, and aprons. I am sure you want some of each."

Mr. Compton: "Oh, thanks, awfully; have you any kisses for sales?"

Miss Rose Bud: "Certainly, $5 each. How many will you have?"

Mr. Compton (handing out the money): "I'll take two; good measure, please."

Miss Rose Bud (with a seraphic smile): "Oh, yes, we are particular about that. Miss Autumn Leaf, will you deliver two kisses to Mr. Compton?" (Miss Leaf is forty in the shade and paralysingly masculine.)

Mr. Compton: "You are more than kind, Dobson" (turning to his man, who is carrying his parcels), "just take this purchase from Miss Autumn Leaf."

The present-day young man rarely gets left, even at a church bazaar.

A Tall Yarn.

A big-game hunter and his brother recently spent a year in and about the Rocky Mountains. They had two rifles, one bullet, and one keg of powder. With these they say they killed on an average twenty-seven head of buffaloes a day. The fact that they did all this with one bullet led to the following cross-question:—

"How did you kill all these buffaloes with only one-bullet?"

"Well, we shot a buffalo; I stood on one side and my brother on the other. Brother fired, and the ball passed into the barrel of my rifle. We kept up the hunt for twelve months, killing nearly 200 buffaloes a week, and yet brought home the same ball we started with!"

COL. STEELE, C.B., M.V.O.

Winnipeg.

The recent publication by Col. Steele of the military history of the prairie provinces, brings to mind the leading part the colonel himself played in its history, though he took too great care that he did not figure in the article, so that the reading of it was like "Hamlet" with the principal character left out.

Col. Samuel Benfield Steele was born in County Simcoe in the year 1849 and educated at Orillia School and the British American Commercial School, Toronto. He was granted his first commission in 1866 in the Militia and on the return of the Red River Expedition in which he served gallantly, in 1870 joined the Canadian Permanent Artillery. Mr. Steele joined the N. W. Mounted Police in 1873 rising to superintendence in 1885. For the next four years Col. Steele commanded the Police in most of their expeditions against the Indians and to restore order in the new districts. He was chosen to command the "Strathcona" Horse in the South African War. Col. Steele is now commanding military district No. 11.

As a sportsman Col. Steele is well known as one who takes a keen interest in every exercise that will strengthen a man both in mind and morality.

SPORTING COLUMN.

BEST LIGHTWEIGHT IN THE SOUTH

Your Champion as Result of Friends' "Josking".

Many persons, including Ray Bronson, Grover Hayes and Abe Attell, boxers, claim credit for bringing out Joe Mandot, the New Orleans lightweight, who looms up as a dangerous opponent to Champion Wolgast. Mandot says Johnny Lynch, of Boston, is responsible for him.

Two and a half years ago, Mandot, pushing a delivery wagon about New Orleans for his father's bakery, was induced to enter an amateur tourney ment. He did not know who his first opponent would be until the night of the fight. Imagine his surprise to find himself matched against a boy larger than himself, who had been the neighborhood bully for years. Mandot's heart almost failed, and although he knocked out his opponent he took a hard lacing.

Joe had enough then and there, but friends "kidded" him into another match. That little southpaw [illegible] among the spectators was Johnny Lynch, training for a fight with Freddy Andrews, of Milwaukee. Lynch heard Mandot's friends making fun of him and asked the boy to trade with him.

JOE MANDOT

Joe learned rapidly and Lynch secured a preliminary engagement for him and he won handily.

Mandot's rise has been little short of phenomenal. Since he joined with Bleichey Raggio, a Memphis Sporting man, he has defeated all comers.

Had it not been for the "kidding" of his friends, Mandot would not be a near champion. His determination to silence the "josking" had his natural ability made him a star, although he never fails to credit Lynch as the man who really gave him the first encouragement.

PEDESTRIANISM

A good performance was accomplished by C. Harris when beating Pat White for the 10 miles Irish professional running championship recently. The event was decided at Dublin, and as rain fell in torrents during the race, the track was very heavy. In spite of this handicap, Harris covered the journey in 53 mins. 5 secs., winning by 500 yards, a very smart bit of running on the part of the ex-amateur.

The times accomplished in the series of sprint races between A. E. Postle and J. Donaldson, at Manchester, make interesting reading. The course was grass, but a good turf track is quite as fast as cinders. Postle's 7 4-5 secs. for 90 yards, and Donaldson's 9 3-5 secs. for 100 yards are both splendid, but Donaldson's 11 4-5 secs. for 100 yards does not strike one as remarkable. On the 100 yards time, Donaldson ought to have shown 10 1-2 secs. at least, though possibly Postle failed to push him. There can be little doubt that the winner is a wonderful sprinter, and the writer can testify from personal experience that Donaldson is very modest about his great ability.

QUEBEC HOCKEY CLUB

The Quebec Hockey Club have concluded arrangements with the Quebec Skating Club, and it has been decided to erect a new gallery at the far end of the rink. This will give increased accommodation. The architects are now busy upon the preparation, and the work will be rushed through for the opening match. Three new exits will be installed.

The line-up of the Quebec team is expected to be one of the strongest it has had for a long time. Outside clubs are still dickering for some of last year's players, but nothing definite has yet been done.

The locals expected to get to work tonight, but owing to the mild spell the ice was not in condition.

"Silver Greyhounds."

Election of Officers.

St. Luke's Bible Class has elected its officers for 1912, as follows:

Hon. President—Rev. F. J. Sawers
Hon. Vice-Pres.—J. J. Turner, Jr.
President—Sam. Whittaker.
Vice-Pres.—Miss B. Hartley.
Rec. Sec'y—Miss May Curtis.
Treasurer—Miss Lillian Scott.

Stock Judging Course.

The stock judging course begins on Monday of next week, continuing on Tuesday. Messrs. R. S. Stevenson and John Campbell, of Ancaster and Woodville, respectively, are the judges for the cattle, while Mr. C. M. MacRae, of Ottawa, will perform similar duties, as regards the horses. Lectures will be given by the instructors based on the animals in the ring, illustrating the ideal type desired in each class.

Sorry to Lose Him.

The boys of the Y.M.C.A. sincerely regret the departure at the end of the month of General Secretary H. M. Gilchrist. During a period of two years the secretary has worked well and faithfully to advance the interests of the institution, and has won many warm friends there. He goes from her to take the position of General Secretary of the Broadview Branch, Toronto.

Artistic Souvenir.

That burg of Lindsay appears to be unable to trim this speedy town at hockey; but there's a lot of enterprise there for all that. The Poultry Association are arranging to give souvenirs of the annual exhibition in the shape of artistically dyed feathers, stamped with the name of the Association and date of the show. The dyeing will be in three colors—red, green and yellow—which is being done by Mr. R. M. Bench, of this city.

NEW MAIL ROUTE.

Energetic Work Being Done to Get Another in Smith.

Fred McKee, of Selwin, deputy-reeve of the Township of Smith, was in the city on Saturday, and in conversation with The Times said that energetic work was being done to have another mail route established in his township. The proposed route would run from Lakefield; thence northerly to the Fourteenth concession; come back to the Twelfth; thence westerly to Chemong lake; south to the Eighth and back to Lakefield.

This new route will fill a long-felt want to the farmers of a rich district, and it is to be hoped that their wishes will soon come to fruition.

Stops a Cough in ONE NIGHT

CATARRH AND WEAK THROAT NOW CURED WITHOUT SWALLOWING DANGEROUS DRUGS.

By Breathing the Soothing, Healing Vapor of Catarrhozone All Throat and Catarrhal Trouble is Quickly Cured.

It's simply wonderful to think how quickly a bad throat or catarrh can be cured with Catarrhozone. Its rich balsamic vapor is carried along with the breath into the innermost recesses of the lungs, bronchial tubes, and chest, making it impossible for the germ of any disease to live. Thus soreness in the chest is at once alleviated, phlegm is loosened and ejected from the throat, old-standing coughs are removed.

"I suffered from an irritable, weak throat for three years. I had a raw sore cough, pains over the eyes, constant bad taste in my mouth, and noises in my ears. It was chronic catarrh. Nothing gave permanent relief till I used Catarrhozone. In one hour it relieved, and in a few weeks drove all trace of catarrh from my system."

VOL XXVIII NO 20 PETERBOROUGH ONTARIO, TUESDAY, JANUARY 23 1912 PRICE TWO CENTS

"Absolute Supremacy of the State Over the Church" Says the Premier of Canada

ANNUAL REPORT OF FIRE CHIEF HOWARD

Fire Chief Howard Presented His Annual Report to the Fire, Water and Light Committee Last Night. No Action Was Taken in the Matter, However, the Report Was Read as Follows:

Fire Chief Howard submitted his annual report as follows:

Gentlemen,—I have the honour to submit herewith the fourth annual report of the Paid Fire Department, for the year ending December the 31st, 1911.

During the year the Department responded to 127 alarms of fire. And you will please find attached a table of the various fires giving a detailed statement of the cause, etc., as near as could be ascertained. You will also find attached a stock sheet, with an inventry of all the apparatus, supplies, etc.

In responding to fires, the Department travelled 924 miles, we laid 26,500 feet of fire hose, raised 880 feet of ladders and used 263 gallons of chemicals.

The total damage by fire for the year 1911 amounted to $22,583.00, of this amount $12,414.00 was damage to buildings, and the damage to contents to buildings amounted to $10,-820.00. The damage for the year was $4,166.00 in excess of the preceding year, with four less alarms responded to.

While the Department has had to handle some very serious fires we have been exceptionally fortunate in keeping the loss as low as it is, and the figures submitted make a very creditable showing for the City of Peterborough.

The systematic inspection of public and mercantile buildings conducted by this department has had the effect of enlisting the attention and co-operation of our business men in the matter of fire prevention. The merchants and manufacturers have assisted in reducing the fire waste by [illegible] their premises. The practice of allowing combustible waste paper to accumulate in large quantities in and about our business blocks is a thing of the past, and the thanks of this department are due the businessmen for their assistance in this matter. We have received less calls for the business district than in any preceeding year.

You will observe from the list of causes of fires that there were less incendiary fires than heretofore, due to the fact that Chief Constable Thompson and his staff have made an effort to stamp out this practice.

The elimination of combustible rubbish and incendiary fires, with other precautions to prevent fire will have the effect of giving Peterborough a better standing with the insurance companies, and in time will prove profitable to the whole community.

During the year the Department was called to extinguish 41 chimney fires, and at least one family was rendered homeless from this cause. I wish to sound a note of warning to householders who never think of cleaning their chimney until it gets on fire.

I also find that the habit of lighting fires with coal oil is still very prevalent. This practice was attended with fatal results on September the 14th when the late Mrs. Peter Gifford was fatally burned while lighting a fire with coal oil.

The health of the department has been excellent during the past year, and seldom have any of the members been rendered incapable for duty through illness. I am also pleased to be able to report the happy absence of serious accidents.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

There are a few matters that should engage the special attention of your committee.

1.—Provision should be made in the estimates of expenditure for the extension and further improvement of the Fire Department, and I would urgently request, as I have before, that the equipment be added to by the purchase of a chemical engine the purchase of a chemical fire engine, which, if installed, would be the most useful and valuable piece of apparatus in the Department. Other years, the Fire, Water and Light committee have not been impressed with the real necessity of purchasing a chemical engine until after the estimates were struck, and then it was found to be impossible to do anything in the matter. At the same time each gentleman of Council realizing the importance of this thing were powerless to act. I trust the gentlemen of your Board will take time by the forelock and go at this matter in real earnest in the beginning.

2.—You must admit that the city is growing very rapidly and provision must be made for a sub-station. I would recommend the purchase of a suitable lot to erect a small building that will house a hose company.

3.—The 1911 Committee decided to instal five additional fire alarm boxes and I believe the money was available but for some reason the project was not carried through. I hope the committee will place the order for these boxes at once.

4.—It will be necessary to purchase some 1500 feet of fire hose in order that a sufficient supply of first class fire hose will be always available. The greater portion of fire hose in stock at the present time is beginning to show signs of wear. We should be in a position to cull out the inferior hose, for the bursting of one length of fire hose not only delays the work of firemen, but at some time might be attended with loss of life.

5.—You will please find attached to this report a petition signed by the firemen for an increase in salary. The men have asked me in a very respectful manner to place the petition before your honourable body. And I sincerely hope that it will be given due consideration. The men present a valuable argument in support of their contention, and I assure you that any action taken along the line of an increase will be greatly appreciated, and then I have pleasure in recommending an advance in salary.

In conclusion I desire to exoress my sincere thanks to all the city officials for the kindness extended to the firemen and myself from time to time. To the Chief of Police and his staff of constables who have rendered valuable assistance on many occasions. And also to the public press for the many kind references to the Department and myself during the past year.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

I have the honour to be sirs,
Your obedient servant.
W. A. HOWARD,
Chief Fire Dept.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

Members Passed a Motion for the Removal of Garbage.

At a meeting of the Board of Health held yesterday, a resolution was presented by Dr. Burnham and Mr. Neill, that in the opinion of the Board, it is necessary in the sanitary interests of the city that a by-law for the collection of garbage be passed by the City Council.

The Medical Health Officer was instructed to report upon the various complaints of nuisances. On motion Dr. McPherson was enrolled as a member of the Canadian Health Association.

On motion of Messrs. Neill and Kernoghan, the cutting of ice in the Little Lake for the purpose of any public supply was prohibited.

In answer to a member of the Board, Dr. McPherson said "I think decidedly that ice should not be cut in the Little Lake. I tested some of it and it contained a lot of poisonous matter."

The Medical Health Officer was given authority to get what bottles he needed in which to collect milk for testing.

ITALIAN MURDERED

Sault Ste Marie, Jan. 23.—Without any warning, Guiseppe Nardone, shot and killed Mike Pappa, in the bedroom of a west end boarding house. Seven or eight Italians were sitting together listening to music. Suddenly Nardone rose from the bed on which he was sitting and walking over to Pappa, fired one shot into his abdomen after which he coolly walked to the door and out into the night. He has not since been seen.

No motive is ascribed for the crime for the other Italians say the two had only just met. Pappa was rushed to the hospital and died at 9 o'clock this morning. He was 26 years of age and was respectable. His murderer was only twenty years of age.

GAVE BOYS A BOOST

Police Commissioners Said "This Force of Ours Is Worth While.

The Police Commissioners held a meeting yesterday afternoon at which were present Judge Huycke, Magistrate Dundle and Mayor Bradburn.

The right hand of fellowship was extended to the Mayor on attending the first meeting, the judge saying some rather nice things.

The Mayor blushingly responded, and said that he would do his level best to live up to the high reputation established by his predecessors. He got back at the judge by moving that His Honor be again elected to the position of chairman. The Magistrate seconded this, and as the judge found himself in a hopeless minority, he acquiesced gracefully.

The only important business before the Board was the annual report of the Chief of Police. Although it looked like a formidable document, it really resolved itself down into this. That this town of ours has a [illegible] as far as police [illegible] to none in towns of its size. The police are doing good work, but it's a big proposition to properly patroland protect the city with the small number of men now enrolled. The Chief asked for more men, and as an incentive to better work, a little increase in wages.

The Magistrate read a tabulated statement which he had prepared, showing that Peterborough stood well within the high-water mark of criminology, though the list of convictions for drunks seemed to stand high.

The Chief said that the constables now knew the habitual boozers, and kept a steady eye on them; they were doing well too, in watching other infringements of the liquor law.

The Commissioners then went into executive session to consider the Chief's report, and finally decided that the Chief was right when he said the staff was undermaned, and that it would be well to appoint two new constables, unless a sanitary inspector be appointed by the Board of Health, in which one will be appointed.

The Commissioners took the stand that in view of the good work being done by the force that the city should show its appreciation and do a little boosting in salaries, so it was decided that the Chief should [illegible] Sergeant Adams, $675; Detective Sewhill, $650; Constables Hall, Mallaley, Kidd and Hooton, $600; and Constable McGill, $625.

The Chief of Police was given leave of absence to attend the Chief Constable's Convention.

IT WAS A BATTLE ROYAL

The Men of the Northern Zone Won by Narrow Margin from the Sons of Scotia.

It was a great and glorious struggle that Peterborough put up against the united force of Auld Scotia in the curling competition. The mooming game saw the Canadians down, and their was dismay in the hearts of many of their supporters. The splendid, regular, put-it-just-where-you-want-it play of their opponents wore on them apparently.

There were plenty of friends there to see them go down to defeat, and it was the commiserating hand-shake for theirs.

But tin the evening there was a change. It was practically a Peterborough aggregation and the men from the old land found they had their work cut out. The Canadians not only evened up for the morning score, but passed the men from Scotia.

The score at 2 o'clock was not available, but the visitors admitted that on the day's play they had been beaten.

"Tell the people we've had a bonny time; tell them we'll have forever a kindly feeling for Peterborough; tell them that we're a' British together"—was the parting message of one of the great leaders of Britain's armies this morning.

THE BANQUET.

The visiting curlers were entertained to a banquet last night by their visiting brethren. The affair took place in the Masonic Hall, which was kindly placed at the disposal of the curlers by the Masons. About 200 sat down to a splendid menu, a procession being formed in the hall above and headed by a bagpipes, marched down to the large dining room below.

Mr. James Connal, president of the Peterborough Curling Club, presided. The toast list was as follows: "The King," "The District Clubs," and "Canada." The toasts were responded to briefly, by prominent gentlemen present, and were interspersed with songs by Mr. W. Mellroy and Mr. Gordon Wright. The affair terminated with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," after which the curlers formed in a line and returned to the rink, where the bonspiel was resumed.

A vote of thanks to the ladies, in connection with the decorations and salads that were supplied at the banquet, and also for the sandwiches, etc., given to the curlers at the rink in the afternoon.

INCREASE OF SALARY FOR THE FIREMEN

A Grading Schedule of $550, $600 and $650 Decided Upon.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council met last night. There were present Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Gordon, Buller, Anderson, Morgan and Brown.

The Committee approved of Chief Howard's request for a hose tester, but will enquire if they can get one manufactured in Peterborough instead of sending out of town for it.

FIREMEN'S WAGES.

Regarding the firemens petition for increased salary, it was generally conceded that the present schedule of $525 for first year men; $575 for second year men and $600 for third year men, is not satisfactory.

Chief Howard offered that there were no third year men on the brigade—they don't live long enough. They are all first year men but two.

Ald. Gordon contended that $525 is altogether too low a salary on which to start a man who practically devotes his whole time to the job, to say nothing of risking his life and limb.

Moved by Ald. Anderson, seconded by Ald. Buller, That the salaries of the firemen be increased to $550 for the first year, $600 the second, and $650 the third year, to go into effect February 1st

Chief Howard remarked incidentally that several of the men will drop into the second grade shortly.

Moved by Ald. Brown, seconded by Ald. Morgan, That in amendment that the schedule be $575, $600, and $625.

The amendment lost and the motion carried. The firemen's wages will in consequence be increased to $550, $600 and $650 covering a three year schedule.

UNSETTLED ACCOUNTS.

The chairman reported a bill to hand from the Peterborough Light and Power Co., claiming $732 for street lighting service not heretofore charged. This covered a period from [illegible] to the end of 1911.

The Committee expressed their surprise at this delayed account, and will investigate.

ANOTHER LAMP.

The Mayor asked that an incadescent light be placed on Langton street for the benefit of the Isolation Hospital.

The placing of this lamp was left to the chairman's judgment, who will interview Ald. Duncan, chairman of the Property Committee on the question. This was decided on motion of the Mayor and Ald. Morgan.

A VEXED QUESTION.

Ald. Buller rushed that the by-law be amended to replace the full control of the fire hall in the hands of Chief Howard, allowing members of the brigade the privilege of appealing to the committee in case of any alleged grievance. That is to say, the Chief be held responsible for the discipline and welfare of the brigade, and for hiring and discharging men.

This evoked considerable discussion pro and con, and in respect to the wishes of the chairman the matter was left in abeyance for the time being.

CHANGING OF LIGHTS.

In regard to the suggested changes of the present arc lamps into the centre of the street, Mr. Munro, manager for the Peterborough Light and Power Co., contended that as the company's contract with the city for street lighting is drawing to a close it would not be fair to expect the former to entail the additional expense of removing said lights. He thought were the change insisted upon cost of same should be borne by the city. It would cost on an average of $21 a lamp.

His Worship offered that in this event the matter had best be left as it is until expiration of present contract.

Mr. Munro said the city is asking that at least 100 lamps be changed to the centre of the streets, and while the company had not in the passed charged for changing individual lamps, it would be necessary to so in this case, where 100 changes are asked for.

Moved by Alb. Brown, seconded by Ald. Buller, That the chairman inspect all the lamps proposed to be changed and report back to the Committee.—Carried.

Ald. Buller offered that in some cases it might be found advisable to replace are lamps with incandescents.

His Worship supported this contention.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP OF THE STREET RAILWAY.

Ald. Gordon thought that in view of the present situation an official letter should be sent to Mr. Munro asking for an estimate for what the amount they would dispose of the street railway system to the city.

No definite action was taken in this matter, which will [illegible] be brought up again at the next Council meeting.

CUTTER FOR CHIEF.

A cutter for Chief Howard's service will be rented from Mr. Gibbs, at $5 a month.

CAP FOR CHIEF.

The Committee will purchase a Persian lamb cap for Chief Howard at a cost of $12 or $15.

TRANSFER OF HOSE.

THREE WATCHMEN

Toronto, Jan. 23.—The cause of the conflagration at the factories of the Allen Manufacturing Company, and the R. D. Fairbairn Company, on Friday evening, remains a mystery, Mr. Fairbairn cannot account for it, after making full enquiries.

Three watchmen were supposed to be looking after the building, but Fire Chief Thompson says his men did not see any of them.

The Allen loss estimated at $100,-000, is covered by $166,000 insurance. The Fairbairn loss is placed at $90,-000 to $100,000 with $155,000 insurance.

When the Nerves Cry—
Look to the
Tea and Coffee

The cry may be in some one of many ways—Trembling, Sleepy in the day time (comes from stomach) Headache, Dyspepsia, Bowel Trouble, Heart Palpitation, and even Pains in various parts of the body originate in a disordered nervous system. Such a condition of the nerves may be produced from various causes. It is VERY OFTEN brought on by TEA AND COFFEE.

If you don't heed the cry (Nature's hint) you may be sure the trouble will get worse, and not better, until you either quit the cause, or you develop fixed organic disease that may carry you down.

It is the finest trade possible, to quit TEA AND COFFEE and observe the result.

Health is the most exquisite fun on earth.

It is easy to quit tea or coffee when you have choice, well-made a delicious hot beverage with a deep seal brown color which changes to a rich golden brown when cream is added. Then you have the crisp "snappy" flavour all its own. The nerves are relieved of the old hurt of the poisonous "Caffeine" of tea and coffee and in its place you feed the system on the strong food elements in Postum which help to quickly rebuild the worn out and exhausted nerve and brain cells DESTROYED BY TEA AND COFFEE.

POSTUM

These are Facts. Prove them by 10 days trial.

SCHOOL TEACHER
And Coffee Drinking.

Many good people are loth to give up tea and coffee, even though they admit that they are doing them harm because they fear that nothing else in the way of a hot beverage will satisfy them. A school teacher says: "I always enjoyed coffee for breakfast. The day seemed lost without it. But in time I began to experience bad results from its use." (Tea is just as injurious because it contains the same drug—caffeine—found in coffee.) "I grew very nervous and lost flesh and finally was prostrated by a complete nervous breakdown. Then I was compelled to abandon the use of coffee.

"I adopted Postum as my hot beverage at breakfast. Have been using it for more than two years. My health is restored and I am able to take an interest in life once more.

"My whole family, children and all, drink Postum, and we all thrive and keep healthy on it. It is to us a delightful, drink, delicious and tempting and with none of the harmful effects that usually followed the use of coffee. The choicest brands of Java and Mocha, offered free, would not tempt us to quit the use of Postum." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. "There's a reason." STARVED TO DEATH

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 20.—How Miss Claire Williamson, a wealthy English woman, starved to death under the immediate care of Mrs. Linda Burfield Hazzard, a sanatarium keeper who, it is alleged, wanted her money, and how Dorothea Williamson, a sister, was rescued a delirious living skeleton by her childhood nurse, was recounted here to-day by Prosecutor Kelly to a jury trying Mrs. Hazzard on a charge of murder.

Hastings County Wants Help.

A deputation from the County of Hastings, thirty strong, called upon Sir James Whitney on Wednesday to ask for more Government assistance in the construction of bridges in the county on other than roads embraced in the good roads scheme. The Madoc members of the deputation called upon the Hon. Dr. Pyne earlier in the day, and urged the Minister to restore the Model School Madoc possessed before the Government adopted its policy of wiping out the Model Schools.

DEFINE RIGHTS OF THE DOMINION TO CONTROL THE MARRIAGE LAWS.

Government Likely to Refer the Matter to the Supreme Court and Finally to the Privy Council.

Ottawa, Jan. 20.—It is said on good authority that the Government will refer the Ne Temere question to the Supreme Court and later to the Privy Council with a view to clearly defining the rights of the Dominion and the Provinces in regard to dealing with the marriage question.

Sir Allen Aylesworth was of the opinon that it was a matter for the Provinces to deal with. The British North America Act is very indefinite. The Government, it is said, fears that it is useless to pass any laws until there can be no doubt of its power. The bill of E. A. Lancaster on the subject will likely come up on Monday in the House, and this, it is said, is the way it will be dealt with.

PROFESSIONAL ETIQUETTE

Some Barristers' Curious Customs and Traditions Belonging to the Old Country.

From the day when he eats his first student's dinner to the day when he pockets his last professional fee, the man of wig and gown in England has to observe customs and to obey traditions such as the members of no other learned profession have any knowledge of and which are not even known in Canada amongst the lawyers.

The Temple, where for the most part the would-be Lord Chancellor eats his legal nursery, is an effect of old-world observances, dating with the far-away time when it was the home of Crusading Knights, feasted, six and more centuries ago, on the very spot on which the Inner Templar of our day eats the dinners that go some way towards qualifying him for his wig.

Brothers All!

The very grace that heralds his meal and the grace that concludes it are the same. In the Inner Temple, as in the Knights of the Order, before the Plantagenet Kings wore their crowns. Like their predecessors, the Benchers of the Middle Temple Hall preside over the meal, the substitute for the battle-axe. Their entry is announced by a loud blow of the staff on the floor, as was that of the Knights Templar of old by a loud blow with the butt-end of a spear, and the entrance is preceded by the blows with a wooden mallet, a quaint knightly form of invoking silence.

Benchers and students mingle and dine together at the same tables, without any regard to seniority — a survival of the ancient Templar practice of the essential principle of brotherhood. If one of them is dissatisfied with his food, he may send a plate of it to the Treasurer for instance, just as the most junior Templar in King John's time would send an; food of which he disapproved to the Senior Knight; and the descendants of the modern Grand Day dishes are given to the servants of the Inn, just as the surplus food was given by the Knights of old to the poor.

The Knights Templar were summoned to the hall of feasting by the sound of a horn; and to-day the Inner Templar is summarily called to table by blasts of the very horn that summoned his predecessors in bygone days. These, and the arrangement of messes, the ceremonials following, the circulation of the loving-cup and many another custom, serve to link the Templar of to-day with his many "forefathers" of bygone centuries.

Briefs and Fees.

Of those are but a few of the traditions and regulations to the wear of wig and gown must conform if he does not wish to get himself into trouble.

Before he is admitted to accept a brief and to play the part of a counsel learned in the law," he must walk circuit to avoid the countless pitfalls and quicksands that mark his path to success.

However an empty purse may tempt him, he must not accept a professional engagement that falls short of the irreducible minimum with a half-crown added for the clerk, whether he has one or not. He must be accept less than the fee, whatever big it is, that is marked on the brief for all to see.

However much he may yearn for clients, he cannot even see one unless through the introduction of a solicitor, and the solicitor must be present at the interview. Between him and the litigant whose cause he is to plead there is a gulf which only a solicitor can bridge. And when the barrister appears at his chambers, there is the coveted brief. It must be noted, not to Mr. "Wig," but to his clerk, and it is the clerk, and not the barrister, who arranges the delicate matter of fees.

No Touting Allowed.

Some professional men may tout for clients; but not so the barrister. It will be an evil day for him when he starts brief-hunting, though he may be starving for lack of golden guineas. If he calls at a friendly solicitor's office for a gossip, or accepts an invitation to a dinner or a dance at his house, he is going perilously near the danger-line. If he is a wise man he will avoid the company of solicitors and pass them by, like the Levite, "on the other side."

On circuit the watchful eyes of Etiquette are always on him. Even for the sake of company, if he be a sociable man, he must not travel there by any class but the first; nor may he reach an Assize town another than the day before the list opens.

However much his services are wanted on another circuit than his own he must turn a deaf ear, unless his brief comes to him marked with a special fee of at least fifty guineas, in addition to the fee he would receive on his own circuit. If he is unable to appear in any case for which he is retained, he must provide a substitute; for whose services, however, he may pay what he pleases. The fee he puts into his own pocket.

Even his professional dress is regulated for him to the extent that he must not appear in court in any coat but one of sober black; nor must he show his face in court if he is carrying the blue bag which may be his familiar companion in the street and train. Unless he is entitled to carry a red bag (and this he may not buy—it must be given to him by some friendly senior), he must be content to make his appearance with his briefs and papers under his arm.

Our tame dog [illegible] ll go wild if left to themselves for a few years. They tried the experiment once on Robinson Crusoe's island. They left some of their dogs there, and nobody called at the island again for about thirty years. And they found all the dogs had become quite wild. They hunted just like wolves and they had forgotten how to bark; they could only howl. It was not till they became used to men again that they learnt to bark. A few years ago two dogs near to Nottingham lost their owners, so they made homes for themselves in a field. They hunted sheep and lambs and did a great deal of damage, just as the wild dogs of India and Africa and Australia do. They looked just like wolves—so much had they changed during the months they had lived the life of wild dogs; and, finally, they had to be shot.

CALABASH PIPES

Showing How the Favourite of the Smoker Can Be Made to Grow in Your Back-Garden or Window.

The fruits are allowed to remain on the vine, which is a relative of the Gourds, till the outer parts are quite hard, for if gathered before they are thoroughly ripe, difficulty is experienced in seasoning. On the other hand, they must not be allowed to remain long enough to be subjected to frost, for a severe frost is likely to cause injury. Dry, sunny weather is more favourable to the development of fruit than wet weather, for though the plants will take plenty of water, more satisfactory results are obtained from watering by hand than from the plants being subjected to an excessive amount of rain. The past summer, with its long-continued heat, has been ideal for the successful cultivation of these Gourds, in England, providing they were well watered at frequent interval. Seeds sown here on a slight hot-bed and the plants allowed to grow till they had filled a frame, which could be lifted off about mid-June, would probably give the most satisfactory results. If grown throughout the whole of their career in a frame or greenhouse, however, arrangements ought to be made for a free circulation of air at all times. Apart from the utility of the fruits of this plant, it is quite ornamental enough to receive attention from a decorative standpoint, either indoors or out.

THE MAIN THING

The Poets May Sing that the Heart's the Thing and Scientists the Brain But It's the Stomach That Counts.

Troubles "to burn" we have, in turn, and blessings befall us, too; and we show our pluck and we have our luck in whatever we have to do; but all of our pluck and most of our luck will come from our red night, and that will depend in the usual end upon whether the stomach is right! There'll be bills galore and we'll walk the floor; if we're not in the best of trim; there'll be notes mature and we'll fall for sure, if we're lacking at all in vim; we may want to roam from the things at home and consider it all a blight, but there's nothing so punk it can make us flunk, if only the stomach is right! The poets may sing that the heart's the thing, and the scientists talk of brain, and these may not shirk in their daily work, but it's little that they ordain; they are organs fine but their chief design is as registers of mood, and the one that guides and their way decides is the one that handles food! And its function great and its high estate are the marvels we should admire, and to cherish it and to keep it fit should be our chief desire; if it's sound as a bell we can do things well, and do 'em with all our might, we can laugh at fate and can celebrate if only the stomach is right!

Meditating in a certain Northern churchyard the other day, we came across an old tombstone bearing the following epitaph:

"Here lie the bones of William Shott,
Bluff landlord of the 'Foaming Pot';
He warmly welcomed travellers sore,
But now his smile is seen no more."

"Requiescat in pace," we murmured. "One of the good old sort." Then our eyes wandered further down the and "memento mori," and discovered that some sceptic with a sharp nail and added:

"Fret not; his welcome down below
Was more than warm—'twas hot, I trow."

Then, alas! we, too, grew sceptical; so fertile are the seeds of doubt and suspicion. Alas! alas!

Kisses For Sale.

Miss Rose Bud: "Now, Mr. Compton, what are you going to buy at my table? We have home-made cakes, glass-cloths, tidies, and aprons. I am sure you want some of each."

Mr. Compton: "Oh, thanks, awfully; have you any kisses for sales?"

Miss Rose Bud: "Certainly, 55 cash. How many will you have?"

Mr. Compton (handing out the money): "I'll take two; good measure, please."

Miss Rose Bud (with a seraphic smile): "Oh, yes, we are particular about that. Miss Autumn Leaf, will you deliver two kisses to Mr. Compton?" (Miss Leaf is forty in the shade and paralysingly masculine.)

Mr. Compton: "You are more than kind. Dobson" (turning to his man, who is carrying his parcels), "just take this purchase from Miss Autumn Leaf."

The present-day young man rarely gets left, even at a church bazaar.

A Tall Yarn.

A big-game hunter and his brother recently spent a year in and about the Rocky Mountains. They had two rifles, one bullet, and one keg of powder. With these they say they killed on an average twenty-seven head of buffaloes a day. The fact that they did all this with one bullet led to the following cross-question:—

"How did you kill all these buffaloes with only one bullet?"

"Well, we shot a buffalo; I stood on one side and my brother on the other. Brother fired, and the ball passed into the barrel of my rifle. We kept up the hunt for twelve months, killing nearly 200 buffaloes a week, and yet brought home the same ball we started with!"

Brannigan: "What's the matter, Willikin?"

Willikin: "Matter enough. You know some time ago I assigned all my property to my wife to — to keep it out of the hands of — of people I owe money, you know?"

"Yes."

"Well, she's taken the money and gone off — says she won't live with me because I swindled my creditors."

Highest on Earth

The Lee Bridge in the China Andes is the highest bridge in the world. This wonderful construction is four hundred feet high, eight hundred feet long, and stands ten thousand feet above sea-level. It crosses a great ravine some three hundred miles from Antofagasta, on the railway running from that port into Bolivia. This line is also of interest from the fact that it is the highest railway in the world, climbing at one point up to over sixteen thousand six hundred feet above sea level.

WOMAN WALKS 8000 MILES

A walk of 8,000 miles was recently finished by Mrs. Stella Woolf, and her husband, Dwight H. Woolf, when they arrived at their home in Kansas City.

The trip started at San Antonio, Texas, more than thirteen months ago. The pair went first to Atlanta and then to New York, where they turned their steps toward home. Previously they made two other walking tours and have covered a total of 10,300 miles on foot.

"When you get into a rut walk out," said Woolf today, as he explained that he took up walking in order to get the outdoor life which his physician two years ago said he must have. At that time Woolf was a jewelry dealer. His health was poor and the doctor told him he would have to get out in the open or die.

"Let's walk," suggested Woolf, "for I'm going along."

With them went the family pet, a faithful pony, which has drawn the cart carrying their baggage for many marches, and a dog.

The Woolfs have eaten and slept in the open. Since leaving San Antonio they have spent only twenty-one nights out of 411 with a roof over their heads.

OFFICIALS AT STOCKHOLM OLYMPIC GAMES.

BOB FITZ THE MOST REMARKABLE FIGHTER

Who was the most remarkable heavy-weight fighter who ever put up his gloves under the Marquis of Queensbury rules? Answer: Bob Fitzimmons. The freckled faced Cornishman, maker of horse shoes, and built like a reversed pyramid, was the most extraordinary fighter.

Fitz was thirty-five years old when he won the championship of the world from Jim Corbett at Carson City. He was thirty-seven when he lost the title to Jeffries and thirty nine when beaten by the Californian the second time.

Age is a big factor in this story. It serves to show that the ruddy product of the antipodes was more extraordinary than Jeffries, who up to the recent disaster at Reno was generally conceded the distinction. Likewise it proves that care of a body can combat the advance of years to a certain extent.

Jeffries was twenty-four years old when he beat Fitzimmons at Coney Island. He was thirty-five years, two months and nineteen days old when Johnson whipped him in the "battle of the century," July 4. At thirty five he is an old man. At this same age Fits was in the zenith of his great power.

After the two knockouts which Jeffries imposed on him, the Cornishman went out and beat all candidates except Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, with whom he drew, until the total period of his existence totalled forty-three years. What other fighter in the history of pugilism can claim such a record? None.

Fitzimmons is to be considered all the more extraordinary because of the weight handicap which he suffered after he defeated all the middleweights. Never scaling more than 170 pounds he had all the punching force of men of fifty pounds more left.

At twenty-nine Jeff retired from the ring and rested on his reputation. He did much hunting and fishing but idleness was his principal occupation for six years. And when he was induced to train and knock the packing out of Johnson, his paunch bulged out like a submarine boat. He reduced to his old weight after much effort. In training he looked as good as when he had made mince meat of Jack Munro, as his farewell fight. But Ed Dunkhorst could have put up a better battle at Reno than the "mighty" Jeff.

BASEBALL SALARIES WONT BE CUT.

The fact that the minor baseball leagues intend to reduce salaries of players in future has alarmed members of the profession who firmly believe that in the course of time the magnates of the majors, the National and the American, will decide to adopt a similar policy. Alarmists point to present conditions in organized baseball as favorable. From the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico there isn't an outlaw circuit. The players, big and little, are at the mercy of organized major and minor leagues wherever professional baseball thrives upon gate receipts. If the major league magnates wanted to apply the screws and chop salaries the players would be compelled to submit or retire from the diamond. They could get no baseball employment anywhere else unless with semi-professional teams paying nominal salaries for one or two games a week.

THE PRIMROSE LEAGUE

The Story of the Founding of the Famous British League. The Primrose Was Beaconsfield's Favorite Flower.

It was really a chance remark which led to the founding of the Primrose League — that remarkable political organization which to-day has over 1,500,000 members.

When, on April 19th, 1883 — the second anniversary of Lord Beaconsfield's death — his statue was unveiled in Parliament Square, Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, arriving at the Commons late in the afternoon, was given a privilege by Mr. Cove, superintendent of the members' cloak-room. When Sir Henry entered the Chamber he found the whole Conservative party similarly decorated with Lord Beaconsfield's favourite flower. The fact impressed him so much that as he walked home with Lord Randolph Churchill he remarked: "What a show of primrose! This should be turned to account. Why not start a Primrose League?"

Lord Randolph was instantly interested. "Draw up a plan," he said, "to carry out your idea, and we will see what can be done."

Ultimately Lord Randolph and Sir Henry were joined by Sir John Gorst and Sir Alfred Shade and in due course these four gentlemen formed the League, and constituted themselves the ruling council.

It was originally intended to admit men only, banded in companies of about a hundred, to act as missionaries of the League. Ultimately, however, it was decided to admit ladies with the result that the membership rose from 957 in 1884 to 237,852 in 1886. Not long ago it was reported that the total membership had touched 1,700,000.

It has, of course, been said that the primrose was not Lord Beaconsfield's favourite flower, and that when Queen Victoria sent a wreath of primroses to Lord Beaconsfield's funeral and wrote on it, "His favourite flower," the allusion was to the Prince Consort — not to the dead statesman. Mr. Reginald Lucas, however, in "Lord Glenesk and the Morning Post," says that one who knew Lord Beaconsfield well declares that he habitually wore a single primrose in his button hole when he was at Hughenden in the early spring, while another more intimate friend can speak of having seen an abundance of primroses in [illegible] house in Curzon street that had been gathered on the [illegible]

THE MEAN MAN

"Talking about meanness," said an old son of the soil, who nursed a pint of ale in a chair by the fire, "you should ha' known old Ruby what used to keep a farm out Goswell way.

"Twenty years ago, it is that his son went out with a tin bucket to milk a cow. Somehow or other, both the lad and the bucket disappeared mysteriously.

"No more was heard of him till he wandered back home ten years after, as rich as a millionaire, and loaded the old man up with gold and diamond pins and new clothes, and gave him five thousand dollars as a birthday present.

"And d'ye think old Ruby was grateful? Ne'er a bit!

"'George,' says he 'wot 'ave ye done with the bucket?'

"And George left home again, wondering whether his dad was the meanest man in the world or whether the distinction was still held by the fellow who used a wart on the back of his neck for a collar-stud."

PURE ENGLISH

"My dear, I wish you would speak more carefully," said a stickler for pure English to his wife. "You say that 'Henry Jones came to this town from Sunderland.' Don't you see that it would be better to say 'that he came from Sunderland to this town'?"

"I don't see any difference in the two expressions," rejoined the lady.

"But there is a difference in the two expressions — a rhetorical difference. You don't hear me make use of such awkward expressions. By the way, I have a letter from your father in my pocket."

"Oh, dear, is my father in your pocket?" inquired the wife. "You mean that you have in your pocket a letter from my father."

"There you go with your little quibbles! You take a delight in harassing me; you are always taking up a thread and representing it as a rope."

"Representing it to be a rope, you mean, dear?"

And then he grinned a sickly grin and wished he had never started the discussion.

RUN DOWN

The council employé had formally applied, in writing, for a holiday — with salary, of course — on the grounds that he was "run down."

"I'm a bit suspicious of this run downitis," remarked the chairman. "It's been very prevalent among the council's employés of late. I propose the applicant be sent for."

"I beg to second that."

The proposition being carried, a messenger went in search of the applicant. Presently there was a scuffling at the door of the council chamber.

"Order there!" commanded the chairman. "Officer, why do you allow that person to try and force his way into the room? Remove him instantly!"

"Beg pardon, sir," said the officer, with a smile, the breadth of which not even his own capacious palm could conceal, "it's the man you sent for — the road foreman wot's run down."

"Oh, well, let him enter, then."

"Beg pardon, sir, 'e can't. 'E's too fat for the door!"

WHOLESALE PRICES STEADY ON VERY HIGH LEVEL.

Wholesale prices throughout Canada during December were on practically the same level as in the preceding month, according to the index number of the Department of Labor. The number stood at 130.8 in both months. Compared with December a year ago, a rise of over 8 points is shown. These numbers, it will be understood, are percentages in each case of the average price level prevailing during the decade 1890-1909, and are calculated from quotations of about 230 articles. The chief increases during the past year occurred in grains and fodder, dairy products, fish, hides, and metals, there having been decreases in animals and meats, textiles, paints and oils.

IMMIGRATION TO CANADA.

During the year 1910 no less than 16,348 immigrants to Canada became naturalized British subjects. Of these 5,854, or more than one-third, gave up United States citizenship. Russia contributed 2,865 (not including 328 Finns and 102 Poles); Austria-Hungary, 2,869; Iceland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden, 1,151; Italy, 818; France, 397; Germany, 337; Japan, 306; Roumania, 278; Turkey (including Syrians and Armenians), 280; Belgium, 191, and several countries less than one hundred each.

FEWER INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS.

Eighty-two fatal and one hundred and ninety-four non-fatal accidents to workpeople were recorded by the Department of Labor during December. This record shows a slight decrease compared with the preceding month, and is much less than in the same month of last year. In November there were 286 accidents, fatal and non-fatal, to individual workmen, and in December, 1910, there were 1,351 accidents. The chief disasters during the month were the suffocating of three miners at Middlesboro, B.C., in a chute of a mine, and an explosion in a powder factory at Departure Bay, Vancouver, B. C., in which three men were killed. There were eleven killed in the railway service, and fourteen in mining. The largest number of non-fatal accidents occurred in the metal trades, in which forty two were injured. Nine men were killed and thirty-one were injured in the building trades, an unusually high number for the month of December. There were twenty-six non-fatal accidents in the railway service.

CANADA'S WATER-POWERS.

The water powers of the Dominion, according to an estimate made by the engineers of the Commission of Conservation of Canada, stand as one of the great assets of the Dominion. The total amount of power classified in all the provinces, either developed or developable amounts to 21,070,470 horse-power. This includes nothing for the Yukon, and with the exception of one section—the Nelson and Saskatchewan rivers—nothing for the Northwest Territories. The water-powers of Ontario give a total of 6,760,595 horse-power, with the amount developed at 532,266 horse-power. For Quebec the estimate is 5,560,155 horse-power, and developed 200,135 horse-power. For Nova Scotia the total only reaches 83,200 horse-power, 15,272 horse-power being developed. For New Brunswick, 280,445 horse-power; 9765 horse-power developed. For Saskatchewan 20,200 horse-power; 45 horse-power developed. For Alberta 70,430 horse-power and 7300 horse-power developed. For Northwest Territories an estimate of 6,950,000 horse-power, with no power developed, and for the Yukon no estimate with only one small development of 20,000 horse-power. Manitoba's total is 412,000 horse-power, 48,000 horse-power developed.

THIN FRAIL WOMEN WITH PALE CHEEKS

NOW RAPIDLY LEARNING THE WAY TO HEALTH AND VIGOR BY THE USE OF DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS.

Thousands of half-dead, emaciated, worn-out women are dragging out their weary lives simply because they don't know what ails them. Nine times in ten it's indigestion, which directly leads to anaemia, poor circulation, and eventually invalidism.

The first step towards relief is to flush out all wastes and unhealthy matter. Loosen the bowels—stir up the liver—stimulate the kidneys. Once this is done, Dr. Hamilton's Pills will quickly manifest their health-restoring qualities.

"The best way to correct impaired digestion, to cure constipation, headache, liver trouble, and other ailments of the stomach and bowels," writes Mrs. Uriah A. Dempsey, from Woodstock, "is by the frequent use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I didn't know what it was to enjoy a good meal for months. My stomach was sour, I belched gas, was thin, tired, pale, and nervous. I simply house-cleaned my system with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and have been robust and vigorous ever since."

To keep the machinery of the body in active working order, no remedy is so efficient, so mild, so curative as Dr. Hamilton's Pills—good for men, women and children. 25c. per box, at all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE MORNING TIMES

TUESDAY, JANUARY 23, 1912.

NO SURRENDER.

The resolution of E. A. Lancaster, M. P. for Lincoln, against the Ne Temere decree, calls forth some warm support from the trenchent pen of that indomitable fighter, Editor J. R. Robertson, in the Toronto Telegram. Here are some extracts:

A Government of trucklers and an Opposition of bigots and time servers at Ottawa—these stand shivering on the brink of E. A. Lancaster's resolution against the Ne Temere decree.

Canadians could not get a hearing for their objections to the Ne Temere decree last September. Clericalism was a foe that could be faced after Continentalism had been defeated.

The Ne Temere issue is only dangerous if Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden and his advisers try to run away from that issue.

The Borden Government cannot meet the Ne Temere issue by inciting its flatterers to speculate as to the motives of E. A. Lancaster, M.P. It may be that Mr. Lancaster's hatred of the Ne Temere decree has not been modified by the fate that isolated Mr. Lancaster from a portfolio in the Borden Government.

The question of motives may be left out of the discussion.

The motive that inspires E. A. Lancaster to raise the Ne Temere issue is as noble, patriotic and praise worthy as any motive which may inspire Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden to evade the Ne Temere decree.

The Borden Government should not provoke a warfare upon motives and records. Canadians hope and believe that the procedure of the Borden Government may be such as to cause them to forget the truths of history. These truths principally teach that Mr. Borden made up his Cabinet from among public men who are as free as Mr. Borden himself is free from the taint of respect for "Protestant ideals."

Roman Catholics, by the thousand, are utterly out of sympathy with the intricacies of papal jurisprudence. Their Canadian hearts revolt against the decree which ruled that the vocalist Gogorza could marry a Jewess according to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church, and years afterwards secure a papal ruling which divorced him from the wife with whom he had lived, on the pretext that the Jewess, being an unbaptized person, her marriage to a Roman Catholic was void, even when the marriage was solemnized by the Roman Catholic Church.

The subtleties of ecclesiasticism are making a divorce court out of a church which once gloried in its power as a witness for the truth that "Those whom God has joined together let no man put asunder."

The Ne Temere decree operates in the province of Quebec as a shelter for the most damnable crimes against helpless women. To quote the words of an observer who has studied the infamies that follow the workings of the Ne Temere decree even as the night follows the day:

"I am familiar with the work of a society for the protection of old country girls arriving in our province. We have had heartrending cases of scoundrels who, profess the Roman Catholic religion, and practice no religion, getting married to these girls under license and before a Protestant minister. They may live together as man and wife, but as soon as the relationship becomes burdensome the husband explains that he married contrary to the laws of his church, and that these laws are supreme in Canada Consequently a marriage solemnized by a minister under the authority of a license granted in the name of the King is no marriage at all. The man is free from all obligations to the woman he swore to love and cherish; the wife is an outcast, and the children are illegitimate."

E. A. Lancaster, M.P., will be guilty of bad patriotism and worse partyism if he allows himself to be bullied or wheedled or coaxed into helping the Borden Government to escape an opportunity to face the great question bravely, and settle that question right. Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden minimizes his own size and magnifies the size of the difficulty that confronts him. Mr. Borden is bigger than the Ne Temere question if Mr. Borden faces the issue. The Ne Temere question is bigger than Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden if Mr. Borden runs away from the issue. Is Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden going to fight, or is he going to run?

A Simple Way To Reduce Wrinkles

(From The Home Maker)

Bear in mind that wrinkles, as well as bagginess of cheek or chin, are due to the muscular tissue losing its strength and shrinking. The skin is then too large in area to fit such tissue smoothly. It wrinkles or sags.

To remedy this condition there's nothing so effective, so quick-acting, as a simple wash lotion you can easily make at home. Get an ounce of powdered saxolite at your druggist's, and a half pint witch hazel, mix the two and bathe your face in the liquid. This treatment at once tightens the skin and solidifies the underlying tissue—which of course smoothes out the lines and draws in the sagging skin. It also stimulates circulation, bringing natural color to faded cheeks.

THE ROMANTIC HAPSBURG FAMILY

Archduke Henry Ferdinand Abandons His Rank and Title in Order to Marry a Bavarian Girl of the People.

(Publishers Press News Service)

Vienna. — Another romance connected with the imperial house of Hapsburg is contained in the dry official announcement that the Emperor Francis Joseph has placed the Archduke Henry Ferdinand, brother of the Princess Louise of Saxony, and of [illegible] have, with the stoppage of all emoluments."

Archduke Henry Ferdinand, who is a painter, with great distate for court life and military duties, has been living for some time in Munich. He has desired for a long time to abandon his rank and title in the same way as Archduke John Orth, Archduke Leopold Salvatore, and, more recently, Archduke Ferdinand Charles in order, as is reported, to marry a Munich girl belonging to [illegible] not of noble rank. Finding [illegible] most difficult, the Archduke has taken the easier course of throwing up his military career.

A Romantic Family.

The family of the Hapsburgs has experienced a series of romances. The first among the more recent was that of the Archduke John Salvatore, known as John Orth, who completely disappeared after giving up his rank and title and marrying an actress named Milly Stiebel. He was said to have sailed for Chile on board the Santa Margaretha in July, 1890, and no trace of him has since been found.

Then came Princess Louise of Saxony, who disappeared from Dresden in 1902, leaving her husband, the present King of Saxony. She was forbidden to use her title of archduchess by imperial decree. She was divorced from the King of Saxony in 1903.

Archduke Ferdinand Charles this year ran away from his military duties and married a daughter of a court chancellor, afterwards assuming the name of Burg and living as a private citizen.

Archduke Leopold, who was a major-general in the Austrian army, renounced his career in 1902 in order to marry a Bavarian actress named Adamovich, whom he later divorced. He lives in Switzerland under the name of Wolfling.

Not Room for Both

"I know Ames comes in for a lot of praise because he hunts with a camera instead of a gun," Forbes began, in a slightly acrid tone. "It never seems to strike people that there may be more than one kind of brutality."

"What's the matter with Ames?" demanded one of the men on the clubhouse porch.

"Up in Canada last fall, Forbes readily resumed, "I went off by myself one day, when Ames was fiddling over his kodak, and I stumbled full on a black bear. Because I was the only thing in sight, very likely, I became the immediate object of her attentions. I had only a slight lead, but I was going pretty well when Ames poked through the brush and took in the situation.

"'Hold on there, old chap!' he yelled. 'You're too far ahead. I can't get you both in.'"

AFTER THE BANTAMWEIGHT

Al Delmont, who has fought Jimmy Walsh about as often as Jim Barry has mixed with Sam Langford, wants to get the bantamweight belt and has challenged Johnny Coulon at 116 pounds. Albert is a great little fighter, but he will not be able to make 116 pounds ringside and Johnny Coulon absolutely refuses to make a lower weight for any star.

LABOUR LEADER IN UNITED STATES

British Labour Leader Predicts a World Wide Association of Labouring Men and Women With Strong Purposes.

Atlanta, Ga. — An international association of laboring men that will include the workmen of every civilized country, is predicted by G. H. Roberts whip of the labor party in the British house of commons.

Mr. Roberts, together with J. Crinon, of the English association of mill operatives, attended the recent convention here of the American Federation of Labor, as fraternal delegates from Great Britain. Mr. Roberts will remain in the United States for several weeks and will then visit Canada.

"In England," he says, "the labor party is striving for home rule for Ireland, reduction of the hours of employment in shops and mills, pensions for aged and disabled working men and women, and the abolishment of special taxes.

"Our purpose is to render the lives of working people comfortable and healthful. We shall not rest satisfied until all are well housed and well clothed; until they have the means of properly educating their children.

HUSBAND AS PRIZE

In Many Parts of Europe Lotteries Are Held in Which Husbands Are Offered as First Prize.

A lottery has just been organized for its women readers by the Odessa 'Courier,' the prize being a young and handsome member of the staff, who has undertaken to marry the winner, be she young or old, fair or ugly, rich or poor. Not only does the enterprising journal agree to pay all wedding expenses, but also promises the couple a sufficient annuity.

Similar was the offer made some years ago by a German newspaper. The prize, however, by no means came up to the expectations of the winner, who declared that the pursy, baldheaded little man who presented himself for her acceptance bore no resemblance to the portrait of the aristocratic-looking individual which had appeared in the paper.

"Mr Arnett was born in Virginia, January 12th, 1850, making him twenty-five years old. He was educated in the University of Virginia, and is in business in Kansas City. He has chestnut hair and brown eyes; his height is 5 ft. 8 in., and his weight is 30 st 10 lb. He does not use narcotics nor intoxicants, has no bad habits, and is a gentleman in every sense of the word. He has a jovial disposition, and is very popular."

Husband With $1000 a Year.

In the early forties the proprietor of the leading library at one of the chief Kentish watering-places announced a grand raffle, the first prize to consist of a young man, who, in addition to good looks, amiable manners, and unexceptionable family connections, was guaranteed to be in possession of property bringing in an annual income of $1000. Considerable excitement prevailed, especially among spinsters—young, middle-aged and old—several of whom came from afar to take part in the event. Woeful, then, was the dismay when, on the morning of the day appointed for the drawing, a couple of constables arrived from London and arrested the much-advertised "prize" on a charge of fraud.

FORTUNE FROM A SHOVEL.

The Shovel, Used by Navvies on Canadian Road Making, the Invention of a Labourer in England.

The [illegible] fortune. Eighty-nine years ago a number of men were at work on the road-bed of a line of railway in course of construction between Birmingham and Manchester, England. They were cutting through a hill and moving the material by loosening it with picks, shovelling it into barrows, and wheeling it away. The shovels they were using were known as Irish shovels, with a square-cornered blade about 15 in. long. The work progressed but slowly, and the sub-contractor in charge rebuked his workmen for not making quicker progress. One of them replied that if he would grind off the corners of the shovels it would be easier to get them into the earth, and consequently they would be able to work more quickly.

The contractor ridiculed the idea, which he considered a piece of insolence on the part of the workman, but the navvy was quite in earnest and not easily discouraged. When the work was completed he discussed the matter with a friend of his at Sheffield, who persuaded an ironmonger he knew to make a dozen or so as an experiment. The tools were offered to a large contractor, who promised to let some of his men use the new shovels and report results.

About a week afterwards the contractor returned with the information that his men were fairly quarrelling as to who should use the new tools, some arriving to work a quarter of an hour before time in order to be there first when the tool-box was opened. The navvy's suggestion had proved a good one; a patent was secured, and an agreement made between the navvy, the manufacturer, and the contractor. When the navvy died he left a fortune of over $335,000 the proceeds from royalties on the manufacture of shovels under his patent.

FAMOUS SNUFF-TAKERS

The eighteenth century was the age of snuff-taking "par excellence." The custom was general among all classes of people, it was an act of politeness for well-bred men to offer their snuff-boxes to well-bred women. Women themselves carried their own boxes, and interchanged pinches with the gentlemen; and in Canada it was fashionable amongst the officials.

At fashionable dinner-parties after the cloth was removed snuff-boxes were passed around. Pope and Bolingbroke, Swift and Congreve, Addison and Steele, all indulged in the pleasure of snuff. Dr. Johnson carried his snuff in the capacious pockets of his waistcoat, and would convey it to his nose without stint. He could not abide the narrow confines of a box. Frederick the Great resembled him in this respect. Both Napoleon and Wellington were prodigious snuff-takers, but Wellington indulged only moderately. Jefferson was fond of snuff, as his waistcoat and frill often showed. Henry Clay was another famous snuff-taker, and often needed the stimulus of a pinch when making a speech.

The Down-Trodden.

A certain battalion of the Terrors" — possessed but a very small band. The commanding officer's feet — he was a burly farmer — were — well, very large. One day the battalion was to march out, but the music was not forthcoming.

"Where on earth is the band?" queried the adjutant.

For some time there was no reply; but when the question was repeated, a gruff voice was heard from the rear rank:—

"I do believe, sir, the colonel trod on it by accident."

I Am Willing To Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10 00 Worth of Medicine

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this medicine, and anyone suffering from these diseases can get a box of it absolutely free. All that is necessary is to send me your address.

I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and pay me if cured. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the Uric Acid sufferers of the world, so I can show them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, nor would I accept it now or later if you sent it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying calls to urinate. But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to listen to anyone thereafter. Happily, I am in a position now to demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to believe me, nor even to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my own cost. That is surely fair.

To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars, which will be used to compound my medicine. Much of it is ready now to be sent out, all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there be thousands of them. And anyone who needs it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have a disease for which this medicine is intended, I ask you to send me some of your leading symptoms. If you have any of the symptoms in the list printed here you need my medicine and if you will write me I will gladly send you a box of it free with full directions for your use. Look the symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, then write me about as follows: "Dear Dr., I notice symptoms number"—here put down the numbers, give your age, full address, and send it to me. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 867 Franklin Building, Toronto, Can.

The ten thousand dollars I am spending for the compounding of my medicine is only a part of the money I am devoting to this cause, for the package of medicine I send you will be fully prepaid at my expense. From any standpoint you view it, YOU incur no expense or obligation. Just tell others who you know are suffering who sent you the medicine that cured you.

I am promising to give away ten thousand dollars' worth of medicine, and I will do that; I am promising to send any sufferer who writes me a box of this medicine and full directions free of charge, and I will do that.

DR. T. FRANK LYNOTT
who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

I can say further that this medicine has been vouched for according to law as complying in every detail with all requirements. It will stop rheumatism, it will stop pain and backache, it will stop too frequent desire to urinate; it will heal, soothe and strengthen. You will be better in every way for having taken it. There is not an ingredient that can injure; not one but will benefit. All that I ask is that you use it yourself so that you may be personally convinced.

Owing to the large number of requests, I have had ten thousand more copies of my medical book printed. This book is new and up to date and contains complete descriptions, symptoms, causes, effects and cures of kidney, bladder and rheumatic diseases. All who write for the free medicine will be sent a copy of this grand illustrated medical book—the largest ever written on these diseases for free and general distribution.

If you need medicine such as I have, if you are anxious to be cured and don't want to spend any money LOOKING for cures, write me. Read the symptoms over and let me hear from you today.

These Are the Symptoms:

1—Pain in the back.
2—Too frequent desire to urinate.
3—Burning or obstruction of urine.
4—Pain or soreness in the bladder.
5—Prostatic trouble.
6—Sore or pain in the stomach.
7—General debility, weakness and drowsiness.
8—Pain or soreness under right rib.
9—Soreness in any part of the body.
10—Sediment or liver trouble.
11—Pain in the heart.
12—Pain in the hip joint.
13—Pain in the small of back.
14—Pain or soreness in the kidneys.
15—Pain or soreness in the bladder.
16—Swelling of the feet or ankles.
17—Pain and soreness in nerves.
18—Attacks of chronic rheumatism.

THE WONDERFUL BARN

In Ireland, in the county of Kildare, not far distant from Leixlip, is a very picturesque architectural effort, commonly called "The Wonderful Barn." It is built of brick and has six storeys. Each storey internally, is dome-shaped, and in the centre of each floor is a round hole, so fashioned that by means of tackle sacks of corn can be lowered or raised from floor to floor. The ordinary means of entrance and access is by way of a corkscrew flight of steps, which is carried around and outside the building, being connected with doors on each floor. The whole structure is 75ft. high, and was built with the chief object of providing employment for the out-of-works of the district.

MUFFS FOR MEN

Although the muff is now exclusively an article of feminine apparel, it was when first introduced to England, toward the close of the sixteenth century, used by both men and women. In fact, in the seventeenth century it was generally regarded as an essential part of the dress of a man of fashion. The muffs then used were somewhat similar to the present fashion — large and roomy.

BUILDERS' PROFITS with Bankers' Security

100,000 SHARES AT $1.00

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has been organized recently with an authorized capital of $500,000, to do a general building, real estate, and insurance business, and is actively engaged in Vancouver and Victoria—two most promising fields. The profits from building houses for cash and selling on instalments is well known, and will be one of the principal channels from which profits will be derived. BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its own building department, and architect, and does its own construction. In addition to building houses, BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its real estate department, where it carries on a general real estate business, discounting agreements of Sale, subdividing and transacting a general insurance business.

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS LIMITED, is a new concern, having been in business less than two months in Vancouver, but is becoming well known as the Company without any promotion shares and with a strong board of directors, made up of well known Vancouver and Victoria business men.

Shareholders may conservatively look for a 10 per cent dividend the first year, increasing thereafter and a steady advance in the value of their shares caused by the substantial reserve it will always be the policy of the directors to build up.

Companies run on similar lines, notably the Los Angeles Investment Company' and "Home Builders," both of Los Angeles, have proved phenominally successful, the former, which has been in business some sixteen years, having accumulated assets of over $6,000,000, and paying 28 per cent. dividends; and the latter, which started business three years ago, with only $1.250 capital, has assets to-day of over $1,089,000, a surplus of over $308,000, is paying 17 per cent. dividends, and its $1.00 shares are selling at $2.30.

RUBY MINES AT DISCOUNT

Nature's Secret of Precious Stone Manufacture Said to Have Been Laid Bare and Big Slump in Prices is Promised.

Attempts to manufacture diamonds in the laboratory have drawn the attention of the public from time to time, notably in connection with a recent lawsuit. The rich harvest which awaits the successful and not too scrupulous experimenter, and the extraordinary political consequences which must follow upon any sudden collapse of the diamond market and of the diamond mining industry, are absolutely startling to think of; certainly both rewards and consequences would be out of all proportion to the scientific value of the achievement. Yet there is reason to believe that before many years have passed the "synthetic diamond" may be as much a reality as the synthetic ruby is today. But the public will not be allowed to hear of the discovery at once — the process will be kept secret as long as possible in order to maintain high prices — and it is pretty safe to prophecy that ten times as many swindles will be perpetrated with the synthetic diamond as there have been with the synthetic ruby. Even yet, although the industry has been in full swing for several years, and all the essential points of the process are known, the general public has not awakened to the fact that rubies of the finest quality and of the purest "pigeon's blood" colour, as well as sapphires, spinelles, and chrysoberyls, are being turned out in quantity from several laboratories in France and Germany. It is extremely difficult to get people to understand that these products are not imitation rubies — they are quite different from the red "paste" which masquerades as ruby in the cheaper sorts of jewellery. The new products are real rubies in every sense of the term but they have been made by man, not by nature.

APPLES OF GOLD IN TASMANIA

Great Apple-Growing Centre Opening Up in Australia and Orchard-Owners on this Continent Will Have to Keep Awake.

Recent enlightenment has shown that Tasmania, which is one of the States of the Commonwealth, has a considerable area of splendid land suitable for agriculture and fruit-growing situated in the Great Tamar Valley near the city of Launceston. The Tamar Valley is destined, in a few years, to be more famed for the growing of apples than Oregon and Washington, or the Pacific slopes of B.C. Cox's "apples of gold" from this district are among the choicest fruits and have been selling in Great Britain at over 12,000 miles distant storage.

The River Tamar extends over 34 miles; in parts it is two miles wide and is a great attraction for pleasure seekers. Some of the land here has recently been sold at low figures, but prices are rising owing to the greater knowledge of its value as fruit land. This locality has originally been settled by hardy pioneers from the River Tamar and the town of Launceston in Cornwall, England, from which places the local names have been derived. The climate has plenty of sunshine and no great extremes; in fact, it may be summed up in one word, "ideal"; also the rainfall is from 30 to 35 inches per annum.

The land is being readily taken up by settlers from the various countries of Great Britain, Canada, India, and other parts.

CALGARY FOOTBALL

The energy of Calgary is becoming almost phenomenal. The desire of their football team to play for the Dominion honors seems quite natural although a little late to be perfectly seasonable. But the activity in professional baseball circles is remarkable, considering that spring is so far away. It is reported that the manager of the Calgary Bronchos is signing up players right and left, one of the "finds" being a youth of nineteen named Brunetine, who, says a Calgary writer, "has all the earmarks of a veteran."

BASEBALL IN CHINA

They have a baseball season in China as well as a revolution, and the ball-players finished their job first. The teams were recruited in Shanghai and last season the league consisted of four clubs. Next year, it is to be doubled in size. According to reports from Shanghai, baseball is making great headway in China — and why should it not, where there are so many fans?

A NEW CLAIMANT

Danny McKetrick, clever manager of Joe Jeanette, claims the world's championship, basing his stand on the statement of Jack Johnson that he is through with the ring. Joe should share the honor with Langford and McVoy, with Johnson out of the way, but the champion has not retired and the chances are he will be seen in action again before another six months passes. In the meantime it might be well for Jeanette to settle the question of supremacy with Langford and McVoy.

EXPENSIVE DIMPLES

She had a dimple in each cheek — a deep, dainty, loving, delicious, kissable dimple

"Ah," exclaimed the young fool, "how I wish I had dimples like that!" And he reached out his hand and patted them softly.

The maiden smiled until the dimples were a hundred times lovelier than before, and the youth was completely captured. He took her for drives in the park. Then he took her to the Calldorf and treated her to a dinner such as visiting princes indulge in at the expense of the Government.

Next they went to the theatre and occupied a box, and after that they sought out a cosy café.

And since then he has had two dimples, two deep, cavernous, empty dimples, one in each side of his purse, and they will stay there until next pay day. 41

BRIGHT AS AN ORATOR

John Bright was the greatest orator England saw during the nineteenth century, an age and a country where oratory reached the heights. To hold such place he must out-toup Gladstone, the great; Disraeli, the brilliant; Palmerston, the witty; Cobden, the wise; Parnell even, with whom he is closely associated. His speeches are still read, and readable today, by those who rejoice in the lovely phrasing which keeps them literature where they were speech.

Augustine Birrell calls his address at the unveiling of the statue to Richard Cobden, "one of the greatest pieces of English speech," and again, the after breakfast speech in welcome to Lloyd Garrison in 1867, "perhaps the most beautiful speech ever made in the English tongue on a public occasion."

His habit was ever to stand at the edge of the platform where the audience could "get at him" and he at them. "Sheltered behind the reading desk no man can move an audience that does not see his boots." He must have been a splendid looking figure, this John Bright, as he thundered like Amos, and lamented the Jeremiah, and loved like Saint John. His was a splendid face, redeming mankind from a counterfeit presentment of godhood. And it is not as stern or set a face as might have been expected from his prejudices. Was it of him one wonders that Sydney Smith asked of the portrait painter: "Couldn't you manage to throw into the portrait a little more antagonism to the Established Church?"

Lond Affidavits

"What is that noise?" asked the presiding judge when a witness's voice was nearly drowned by a rasping uproar outside the court.

"My lord," said the counsel for the defendant, "I think it is the plaintiff filing affidavits."

Some of the new parasols are edged with narrow ostrich feathers, and have a big bow of ribbon on the handle, also edged with feathers.

For a satin slipper nothing is so effective as a small round buckle of rhinestone through which is inserted a satin or velvet ribbon.

Curls and puffs are used in profusion and quantities of false hair are still absolutely necessary. Infantile styles prevail — quite babyish, in fact.

To Unclog The Pores Remove Stifling Skin
"Clogged pores are the cause of many complexion difficulties," according to Dr. Heman Ward. "This condition makes the skin coarse in texture. It interferes with elimination of waste matter, producing a muddy or blotchy complexion, eruptions and other defects.
"To open and cleanse the closed pores there is nothing more effective than ordinary mercolized wax, used as you would cold cream, but not rubbed in. It should be applied at night and washed off in the morning. Mercolized wax, to be had at any drug store, will also remove the effects of the condition referred to. That is, it removes the undesirable complexion itself, with its disfiguring marks. Possessing a peculiar absorbent power, it flakes off the soiled skin in minute particles, but so gradually there is no irritation or inconvenience. It is recommended in preference to cosmetics, as the new complexion it reveals is a perfectly natural one."

GENERAL MILES PRAISES CHINESE

Was Always Unpopular with the Chinese but they are a Brave People but Nothing Can Stop Revolution.

(Special Cable Service.)

In some respects, China was to me the most interesting country I have ever had the pleasure of visiting. In their ancient civilization we find much that we could adopt with benefit, and still more that has been obsolete for centuries.

Ages ago China passed through some of the experiences that now interest or agitate our people. The controversies between capital and labor and the unequal distribution of wealth were problems in which they were concerned thousands of years ago. As a race they have encouraged industry, art, science and literature

GENERAL MILES

Compared with some other people their integrity has been proverbial.

It was my good fortune, in 1902, to have the opportunity of seeing the different sections of China, as well as visiting the principal cities of Hong Kong, Canton, Talensin, Pekin and other important places. A marked contrast is noticeable between that and our country.

During my sojourn in that country nine years ago I found the leading men greatly exercised concerning the threatened dismemberment of their country. Ostensibly for the purpose of obtaining spheres of commercial influence, Great Britain, France, Germany, Russia and Japan had all acquired control of certain portions of Chinese territory, and it seemed only a question of time when the nation would disappear from the map of the world.

China owes her existence today partly to the fact that two of the aggressive powers became involved in war over a certain portion of her territory.

To realize how far the absorption of that country had extended, one needed only to visit Hong Kong and see the formidable fortifications guarding the entrance to the harbor, the powerful fleet of battleships, the palace of the governor general and the 5,000 trained, disciplined, veteran (English) troops, all under a foreign flag. Similar occupation could be observed in other parts of the empire.

For hundreds of years war and the military profession has been unpopular with the Chinese people. They abhor the first and if possible would always avoid the latter. Their army now consists of approximately 160,000 men, and the government has recently been endeavoring to increase this number to 350,000.

That great empire of 430,000,000 people is now quaking like the tremors of the earth. From the center to the remotest quarter of that vast territory a political convulsion and revolution is affecting all its conditions and attracting the attention of the world. What will be the result — how far reaching will be its influence, or to what extent it will affect the 400,000,000 of the human race in other countries of the orient, it is impossible now to determine.

GERMANY AGAIN AFTER TERRITORY

PARIS. — It is learned from an authoritative source that Germany is negotiating with Spain for the acquisition of territory in Rio Muni, or Spanish Guinea, where it is proposed to establish warehouses and factories. Rio Muni is in Western Equatorial Africa, between Kamerun and the Muni river. A German commission will be sent to Rio Muni shortly to engage in topographical work.

MADRID. — Prime Minister Canalejas denies the statement that Spain was about to sell her Guinea colony to Germany or any other power. He added that Spain was willing to use great moderation in her negotiations with France about Spanish vested rights and interests in Morocco.

CANADA FOR MANUFACTURERS

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Hon. J. S. Henderson, commissioner of industries of Hamilton, Ont., declared "Annexation sentiment in Canada is absolutely nil," while addressing the American Hardware Manufacturers' Association convention on the subject, "Canada, the manufacturers' opportunity."

"As a budding nation our loyalty is intense and practical, and our position as one of the leaders of the Empire compels us to maintain our tariff wall," he asserted.

The speaker stated that Canada is a firm believer in the home market and that there was no possibility in the very near future of any reduction in duties levied on articles manufactured this side of the line.

Artistic Souvenir.

That burg of Lindsay appears to be unable to trim this speedy town at hockey; but there's a lot of enterprise there for all that. The Poultry Association are arranging to give souvenirs of the annual exhibition in the shape of artistically dyed feathers, stamped with the name of the Association and date of the show. The dyeing will be in three colors—red, green and yellow—which is being done by Mr. R. M. Bench, of this city.

TO HELP THE EXPORT TRADE

Well Known Business Man of Montreal Urges Canadian Manufacturers To Wake Up and Get After Foreign Trade

Mr. George F. Johnston, the well known financier is urging the manufacturers and traders of Canada to consolidate and form an association through which authentic information of the wants of other countries—particularly South America—could be secured for the benefit of Canada. Mr. Johnston's appeal, in part, is:—

Has not the time arrived when we should put forth some concerted action whereby we would render valuable aid to our Canadian exporters. This might be accomplished by following the example of our neighbors to the south of us by the formation of a Canadian Export Association. Our export trade is growing at a remarkably rapid rate and the work of such an association would be to educate our expanding manufacturers and traders who may be anxious to participate in profitable over-sea business. It would be the purpose of the suggested association to establish an intelligence department and through the agency of accredited correspondents who would supply ruling prices, point out new markets and fresh sources for the purchase of our raw material.

It may be news to many Canadians to know that there is scarcely a country in the world where Canadian merchandise does not find a ready market, both in the countries of the Old and New World. We have now a direct steamship service to Australia, New Zealand and the Far East and we have lately turned our attention to the development of trade to Latin South America and with most promising results.

From January 1st. to September 30th. of last year, the exports and imports between Canada and Argentina aggregated $5,051,467, which is $3,000,000 more than the previous year during the nine months above mentioned. Canada sent to Argentina $2,869,913 worth of goods and bought from that republic $2,181,554.

In looking over all the countries trade with each of the Republics of South America, I personally believe that our trade of 1910 with the Argentino might be duplicated in each one of the other Republics, if we put the proper trade machinery into operation. Canada in the last few years has been developing her export trade at a very rapid rate.

I would like to see our government assist in establishing a direct line of steamships with South America. This would facilitate the work of an energetic and patriotic Canadian Export Association. In many ways South America presents a very attractive field for Canadian business men and believe, as one personally acquainted with South America, as I am, there is no doubt a large trade could be worked up if proper attention were paid to cultivating the republics of South America. As everyone knows, South Americans for the most part, are not competitors of Canada. They buy what we have to sell and sell us commodities which we require. The only exception to this statement is the Argentine Republic and even with this republic our export trade last year was over $5,000,000. Canada should have, next to Great Britain, the first claim upon South American trade, because of the fact that the chief commercial houses of South America are English and would naturally give a preference to Canada. There is invested in South American enterprises at the present time, over two billions dollars of British money and as a result of this large amount of British capital invested, Canada, as a part of the British Empire, would receive a cordial welcome should she energetically seek closer trade relations with South American countries.

As a Canadian much interested in Canadian enterprises, I would like to see a system of organized effort to extend and enlarge our export trade and for that purpose, I would suggest the formation of a powerful league, known as the Canadian Export Association, which league ought to secure diplomatic influence for the successful exploitation of Canadian commerce. In order to secure a remunerative business for a direct steamship line, the government might grant a subsidy, which subsidy would not be required after a more extensive trade had been developed, as it would soon be apparent that Canadian steamships would soon have a paying cargo each way.

It might be pointed out that the greater part of manufactured goods used in South America are imported and that there is hardly an article manufactured in Canada which would not find a ready and profitable sale in the south. Implements are used there in enormous quantities. Cement is used in millions of tons. Leather goods, including saddles, boots and belting are everywhere in great demand owing to the agricultural nature of the country. The bulk of this trade is now going to Americans, Germans and the Belgians. We in turn need their asphalt, nuts, mutton, hides, mahogany, rice, rubber, wool, etc. Our Canadian government has neglected putting a live, energetic Canadian representative in each one of the Republics of South America and I think the time has arrived for either the government or such an association as I have indicated to take immediate steps towards the development of our Canadian trade in the south."

Mr. Johnston invites correspondence from manufacturers and traders of the Dominion on the subject and if there is sufficient interest manifested, necessary steps will be taken to organise an export association and to develop and extend our export trade.

"Silver Greyhounds."

BONAR LAW NEW LEADER

Says that the Canadian Elections Were a Declaration for Reciprocal Preference.

(Special Cable Service.)

LONDON.—Andrew Bonar Law, the new Unionist leader in the House of Commons, who succeeded Mr. Balfour, made his first speech at a leader at the annual conference of the Conservative associations of Great Britain at Leeds.

Mr. Law dwelt at length upon the Canadian elections, paying a warm tribute to ex-Premier Laurier as being the first to give preference to Great Britain and thereby setting an example to be followed by the other dominions. His admiration for Sir Wilfrid Laurier was not abated a jot when he rejoiced at the result of the elections. It was an ignorant and impudent claim, he said, that the elections did not bear upon the cause of preference. They were, and are, an emphatic reminder that reciprocal preference is the aim of Great Britain's autonomous dominions.

McNAMARA DEFENCE FUND

Federation of Labor Fights Shy of Resolution.

ATLANTA, GEORGIA — Labor leaders are trying to prevent the introduction into the convention of the American Federation of Labor now in session here of a resolution framed by the California delegation appropriating $50,000 for the defence of the McNamara brothers.

A large sum has been raised already for this purpose by private subscriptions and the leaders contend, it is said, that whatever, money is needed for the McNamara defence can be obtained in this manner without drawing on the funds in the none too well stocked treasury of the federation.

Two brief sessions were held by the convention today, but practically no business was transacted.

WARSHIPS AT TANGIER

French Vessels Exchange Salutes With Spanish Cruiser.

TANGIER. — The warships Leon Gambetta and Edgar Quinet, which were ordered here a short time ago after a Spanish vessel had arrived, came into the harbor. Salutes were exchanged with the Spanish cruiser Cataluna.

The natives here are restless and sickness and misery are prevailing.

The Dare-Devil Son.

A certain battalion — the Terrors" — possessed but a very small band. The commanding officer's feet — he was a burly farmer — were — well, very large. One day the battalion was to march out, but the music was not forthcoming.

"Where on earth is the band?" queried the adjutant.

For some time there was no reply; but when the question was repeated, a gruff voice was heard from the rear rank:—

"I do believe, sir, the colonel tred on it by accident."

NEW MAIL ROUTE.

Energetic Work Being Done to Get Another in Smith.

Fred McKee, of Selwin, deputy-reeve of the Township of Smith, was in the city on Saturday, and in conversation with The Times said that energetic work was being done to have another mail route established in his township. The proposed route would run from Lakefield; thence northerly to the Fourteenth concession; come back to the Twelfth; thence westerly to Chemong lake; south to the Eighth and back to Lakefield.

This new route will fill a long-felt want to the farmers of a rich district, and it is to be hoped that their wishes will soon come to fruition.

KING EDWARD VACUM CLEANER

You cannot clean carpets, rugs and furniture by beating. If you think you have, just try a KING EDWARD VACUUM CLEANER and you will find the article full of dust, which breeds disease.

The KING EDWARD HAND MACHINE has no equal as compared with other hand machines. It is lighter to operate and its suction is much stronger. Its suction is stronger than many of the power machines, and the dusting is done away with. On account of the short stroke one person can operate it on carpets and rugs equally as well as two, and it is about half the weight of other hand machines to carry up and down staire or from one room to another. It is sold for less money than any of the hand machines. All machines are guaranteed.

SUDDEN DEATH OF ROBT. M. ROY

PROMINENT BUSINESS MAN

Had Been a Resident for Nearly a Quarter of a Century—Was Noted Yachtsman, Mason, Oddfellow and Public Spirited Citizen.

The city awoke on Sunday morning to learn sad news—that during the night Death had been here and had called to the Great Beyond one of her most respected sons, Robert Maitland Roy. As the word was passed about, expressions of deep regret were heard at the loss Peterborough had sustained, coupled with those of sympathy for the bereaved family.

The end came with exceeding suddenness. Mr. Roy had been indisposed for about a week, but had every anticipation of being up and around as usual in the course of a few days. But it was not to be. At five minutes after 10 on Saturday night the summons came, and he passed away.

For a number of years Mr. Roy was stores inspector on the Midland division of the G.T.R., living the early part of his life in Bellville, coming to this city about 25 years ago. He had always been an enthusiastic amateur photographer, and on leaving the service of the Grand Trunk, 17 years ago, took up the art professionally, establishing the Roy Studio on Hunter street, of which he was senior partner until the time of his demise.

Throughout his life of 70 years, Mr. Roy had been an advocate of all clean sport. His own leaning was towards yachting, and he became known throughout the Great Lakes as an enthusiastic and accomplished yachtsman. During the 80's he owned the famous racing sloop Gracie, which sailed the American circuit, winning many prizes with Mr. Roy at the tiller. He was a member of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club of Toronto, as well as of other equatic organizations.

Since coming to Peterborough he turned his attention to steam yachting, and his little boat, the Rob Roy was familiar on the waters of the Trent Valley, and at the regattas every year.

Though in every way a public-spirited citizen, Mr. Roy never aspired to civic honors. He was a devoted member of St. John's church; of Peterborough Lodge, Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons; and of Otonabee Lodge, of Oddfellows.

He is survived by Mrs. Roy and a family of six children: R. M. Roy, of Hamilton; E. J. Roy, of Napanee; and F. L. Roy of this city; Mrs. A. M. Simmons, of Montreal; Mrs. Roland Denne, city; and Miss Gladys, at home. In addition two sisters mourn him—Mrs. E. P. Hannaford, of Montreal, and Mrs. M. A. May, of Peterborough.

With every citizen, The Times pays its tribute of respect to his memory and its deep sympathy with the family.

MANCHESTER COTTON STRIKE IS SETTLED

Manchester, Eng., Jan. 20.—The big cotton trade strike, over the employment of non-union labor, which culminated in a lockout of 300,000 men, has been settled, and the mills will be reopened Monday.

The operatives by a two to one vote agreed to accept a truce for one year. This is regarded as a victory for the employers. The rank and file of the operatives are satisfied with the settlement, but the union leaders are displeased with it, as their difficulties in persuading non-unionists to join the unions have increased.

Election of Officers.

Hon. President—Rev. F. J. Sawers.
Hon. Vice-Pres.—J. J. Turner, Jr.
President—Sam. Whittaker.
Vice-Pres.—Miss B. Hartley.
Rec. Sec'y—Miss May Curtis.
Treasurer—Miss Lillian Scott.

Sorry to Lose Him.

The boys of the Y.M.C.A. sincerely regret the departure at the end of the month of General Secretary H. M. Gilchrist. During a period of two years the secretary has worked well and faithfully to advance the interests of the institution, and has won many warm friends there. He goes from her to take the position of General Secretary of the Broadview Branch, Toronto.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

TELEGRAPH MARVELS

1700 Miles Per Minute is the Rate at Which a Wire Travelled Around the World Though this is Not the Record.

With a view to finding out how quickly a message could be sent round the world, the editor of the New York Times' recently carried out an ingenious test. He wrote a message of nine words addressed to the paper, and dispatched it eastwards. The message completely girdled the northern hemisphere, traveling through Honolulu to Manila, thence to Hongkong, Singapore, and Bombay, from which point it sped onwards to Suez, thence to Gibraltar, towards Fayal, and finally re-arrived at New York, a distance of 28,613 miles.

No attempt was made to clear the line for its transmission in the hope of establishing a record, but the messages was sent under ordinary commercial conditions. The message passed through sixteen relay stations, and sixteen and a half minutes after it left New York it re-entered that city, thus travelling at an average speed of 1,700 miles per minute.

This, however, is not a record. The quickest time in which a message has been dispatched round the world was in celebration of the opening of the Pacific cable, when the globe was telegraphically encircled in nine and a half minutes. In that case, however, the line was cleared specially for the passage of the message.

NEW CHURCH GOERS

In a Remote Part of India During a Service at a Mission a Tiger Once Put in an Appearance. But Turned Tail.

It is the commonest of common sights in the Highlands of Scotland, and in some of the remoter churches of the English Lake district, to see dogs at church. Their sheep-dogs are such inseparable companions of the shepherds that they would both look upon it as an unforgivable insult if one went anywhere without the other. So, when the shepherd goes to church, his dog goes with him, and so well trained are they that it is most unusual for any of them to stir during the service. They lie under the seats and generally go to sleep—a practice in which they are not imitated by their masters, for the Scottish shepherd is not accustomed to sleep under the longest sermon.

Bullocks in the Baptistry.

At the present moment a dog may be seen in a London church, for certain felonious and sacrilegious persons have taken to robbing the offertory-boxes at Westminster Cathedral by night. So the authorities have added to the staff a watch-dog, whose duty it is to keep his eye on the money-boxes. Whether he stays during the service, dogs are apt to do, we know not, but it is very unlikely that he does. He is probably only a night watch-man — or watch-dog — and goes home to supper and bed when other people are thinking about breakfast and the day's work.

Many people consider that the presence of a dog in church is a profanation of the sacred edifice, but surely a pig is much more so. Yet a pig might have been seen quite lately in a crate at the base of the pulpit during the harvest thanksgiving services at the Grimsby Fishermen's Church. It transpired that the minister had solicited a contribution from a local farmer, who said, "What would you like?" to which the minister replied, "Oh, anything from the farm." Well, the farmer might have sent potatoes, or eggs, or butter, or cheese, or even bacon, but he elected to send a pig — not in a poke, but in a crate. His contribution to the harvest thanksgiving services was thankfully received, and after the services were over was sold for a good price for the benefit of the church funds. The animal behaved splendidly in its unusual surroundings.

Too Much for the Tiger!

On one occasion at a mission church in a remote village of India a tiger put in an attendance. At any rate, the monarch of the jungle entered the church — probably for the first time in his life — but when the whole congregation rose "en masse" he was evidently not quite sure whether it was a sign of welcome or of menace. The tiger was as much frightened as the congregation, turned tail, sprang out by the way he had entered, and disappeared into his native haunts.

In the north-west of Canada a bear once strolled into a church. There was an immediate panic among the women, and some men sprang towards the shaggy beast, intending to slay him. Bruin, however, took all these things very coolly, sat up, and looked so amiable and unaggressive that, instead of killing him, the men laughed at him. Indeed, it was almost immediately seen that the bear was the identical animal which had formerly been the pet of the village, and which had run from the settlements into the woods about six months before. He had only returned to pay his respects to his old friends, and finding them all at church had evidently thought he might as well go too.

THE KING'S PRIVATE NAME

If the King were to renounce the Throne and resolve to become an ordinary citizen he would be called George Wettin. How does the name Wettin come to be King George's surname? This is the answer: —

Queen Victoria married Albert, Duke of Saxe-Cobourg-Gotha, of the senior branch of the House of Saxony. The family name by which this house, dating from the middle of the tenth century, came to be known afterwards was Wettin, and this was and is the surname of both branches — the Ernestine and Albertine — of the House of Saxony.

THREE MILLION MATCHES

Fifteen Hundred Million is the Number of Matches Used Annually by the Entire World for Smoking.

It has been estimated that, for each minute of time, the civilised nations of the world strike three million matches. This is said to be the average for every minute of the twenty-four hours of the day. Fifteen hundred million is the number for the entire year.

The importance of the industry which turns out the little splinters of wood tipped with sulphur or some other material ignited by friction, is only recognised when the average smoker tries to contemplate his predicament if he had to go back to the time when he had to coax a spark from a tinder-box. Small and insignificant as it is, the match demands as much attention in the choice of the wood involved in its manufacture as any other forest product. Only the choicest portions of the best trees are suitable. Sapwood, knotty or cross-grained timber will not do. Instead of being a by-product, the little match is turned out at hundreds of mills over the country where the by-products are bulky objects like doors, sashes, shingles, sidings, posts, and cord-wood. The pines, linden, aspen, white cedar, poplar, birch and willow are the most suitable match timbers.

IT IS VERY STRANGE

How the Men Who Know All — Who Heard That Years Ago — Can Be Taken Down.

Most of us have met, at some time or other, that objectionable individual who "has heard that years ago," and knows everything under the sun worth knowing.

When next you run up against him, ask him how many five cent bits, laid side by side, it would take to cover the surface of a half-dollar without overlapping the edge. He may suggest four, and may probably regard you with suspicion when you inform him that not even two of little coins can be so arranged.

When he has digested this marvel, ask him which city is the father east — Edinburgh or Liverpool — and note the look of humility on his face when you produce a map and prove to him that Liverpool enjoys that distinction!

If he is still cocksure about things in general, get him to tell you how many pennies, piled one on the other, it takes to equal the height of a quarter. Mindful of his previous failure, he may hazard eight or nine, when you promptly pulverise him with the fact that fourteen are required.

If, however, he is still obdurate, ask him how far the human eye can see on a clear day. He may say thirty or forty miles, whereupon you complete his discomfiture by informing him that ninety-five million miles is nearer the mark — the distance of the earth from the sun.

Birth Stones.

For ages certain gems have been allotted to the months, each with its significance. The list given below is now generally accepted:

January—Garnet: Constancy and fidelity.

February—Pearl or amethyst: Purity, peace of mind.

March—Jacinth or bloodstone: Courage in affection.

April—Diamond: Unchanging affection.

May—Emerald: Ensures happiness in love and domestic felicity.

June—Agate: Ensures long life, health, and prosperity.

July—Ruby: Exempts from love doubts and anxiety.

August—Moonstone: A charm for conjugal felicity.

September — Sapphire: Ensures cheerfulness.

October—Opal: Helpfulness and happy faith.

November — Topaz: Fidelity in friendship.

December — Turquoise: Success, happiness, and many friends.

The Prodigal's Return

Larry could not get on very well with his people at home, so he emigrated, and, after a time, went to India.

After some years he returned to his native village. How surprised the old folks would be! He walked along the village street in his smart-looking uniform, his heart beating fast as he neared the old home. Opening the gate, he stepped up the gravel path. Just then a ferocious dog rushed out and grabbed the soldier's leg. Shaking the dog off, he speedily regained the road, and was standing on the other side of the fence when his old father came out.

"Ah! my son," said the old man, "like the prodigal, you have returned."

"Yes," growled the soldier, "but it's your confounded dog that's enjoyed the fatted calf."

The World's Largest Flying Bird.

Among the most notable of recent additions to the Zoo is, what is generally regarded as the largest flying bird in the world. It is known as the lammergeyer (lamb's vulture), or bearded vulture. The giant bird was recently received from India and is the largest of all vultures or eagles. Its wings measure over 14 ft. from tip to tip, and it is not yet full grown.

The lammergeyer is found in Middle Europe, Asia, and North Africa. It is said to live mainly on carrion, but it is not averse to "creating" carrion by knocking an unwary chamois or goat over a precipice with a blow from its tremendous wing, afterwards flying down to the body to obtain a meal. Even mountaineers have been reported as having fallen victims to this method of assault.

LAND DEAL PAYS 30 PER CENT.

The Times is requested to state that the shareholders of The Industrial Land Syndicate, Ltd., have realized 30 per cent., in twelve months on the sale of their property, No. 1009 on the south bank of the Lachine Canal, for ninety-four thousand dollars ($94,000.00). The stock for this company was negotiated by [illegible] whose clients have received this week [illegible] advertise in The Times.

SOME CHANGE!

$17,500 Passed Out to Farmers of the District for Horses.

This district has long been famous for the excellence of its horses; they have achieved a fame that has spread far and wide. Intelligent breeding has brought this about; and a person would travel over many a league to find finer specimens of the draught horse than this locality produces.

And the last great West needs just that type of horse. That accounts for the presence throughout the country for the last few weeks of Mr. J. T. Hall, buying up suitable horses.

Yesterday was delivery day, and the C.P.R. yards was a scene of briskness. Four cars were loaded, and started on the way to the world's granary. About 65 horses were shipped, and as close as may be $17,500 was distributed among the farmers.

Natural Cure for Catarrh Obviates Taking Drugs

IT HAS SUPERSEDED THE OLD FASHIONED STOMACH-DOSING REMEDIES, AND INVARIABLY CURES QUICKLY.

It was their inability to reach the real source of catarrh and bronchitis that caused the medical profession to drop liquid cough medicines and adopt "Catarrhozone" instead. Catarrhozone provides a method of breathing right into the lungs certain rare medicinal vapors which are so healing and comforting as to entirely banish coughs, catarrh and throat trouble in a very short time.

The most wonderful thing about Catarrhozone is, that no matter where the germs of bronchitis or catarrh are hidden, Catarrhozone will reach and destroy them.

"About five years ago I took a cold in the head and Catarrh set in. It kept increasing by leaps and bounds. I kept putting off getting anything until at last I found I would have to. After trying several things I heard of your remedy, Catarrhozone, and procured a bottle and began using it. I was not long in finding out I had struck the right thing. I am recommending Catarrhozone to all who have catarrh, etc.

"(Signed) Everton L. Wassan.

"Blair P.O., Queen's Co., N.B."

Catarrhozone has made an astonishing record of cures. Its method is right: no drugs; just healing balsamic vapors, that bring instant relief to Catarrh and all throat, bronchial and chest colds. Get the large size, lasts months, is sure to cure; your price $1.00; smaller size 50c; sample or trial size, 25c. All dealers or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

Current Comment by The Commentator

That cleanly sport and godliness go hand in hand, was clearly shown by the large number of handsome looking, kern-eyed "brithers o' the besom and stane" at Knox church on Sunday morning.

I run across some splendid examples of unintentional humor once in a while. Do you know, I smiled in kirk at the Curlers' service Sunday morn when thep reacher asked us to sing "Rock of Ages cleft for me."

The prisoners in Montreal jail appear to have all the luxuries of life. When they can be supplied with cocaine, one wonders if the general rule isn't: "Ask for what you don't tee."

Magistrate Jeffs of Hamilton, has invented a law that declares there is property rights in umbrellas, and has fined a man $10 for the non-return of one. That's a blow at British liberty, if it doesn't fracture Magna Charta itself.

It is only for fear that some mitigating circumstances have not been reported that prevents me saying something mighty harsh, about the Kenora Police Force and Firemen. It's pretty close to the limit when they let a helpless prisoner and the four fire horses burn up.

Three hundred thousand cotton operatives in Lancashire, England, returned to work yesterday after the great strike. Wherein doth it profit to run into a strike where both sides lose?

Throughout the entire east, the record for the past two weeks is "the coldest in 20 years." Surely our old friend Mr. Winter could afford to rest on his laurels.

Here's hoping those good old farmer friends o' mine in Smith township succeed in getting the new mail route they're asking for. It shouldn't take much persuasion to convince the Department of the real need thereof.

And so the late lamented census of Canada was wrong? Yep, wrong by 10,000,000. Over that number alone have applied for Government jobs.

My millionaire colleague Fels appears to me to be doing a lot of explanationing in Toronto. He's now defending the McNamara brothers and say they didn't intend murder. Well, perhaps not; but they certainly took a sure way of accomplishing it.

Here's congratulations to another croney o' mine, J. H. Garbutt, Smith. The directors of Peterborough Industrial Exhibition showed good sound sense in picking him out for president.

That fine on a youngster for loafing around bar-rooms meets with my distinguished approval. And I'll pat the Chief of Police on the back if he gets a few more of them.

DEMAND BODY

Toronto, Jan. 13.—Considerable feeling has been aroused in Jewish quarters over the burial of Michael Smith in a Christian cemetery on Saturday. Smith was formerly a railway news agent, but was latterly a C.P.R. brakeman. He was killed at Sudbury while following the latter calling.

The Rabbi of Terauley street Synagogue, explained that Smith, whose real name was Trokentoll, married a Christian girl and afterwards moved to Sudbury.

When the body was brought to Toronto his relatives and friends tried to get the corps buried in a Hebrew cemetery, and according to Jewish rites.

With this aim in view Rabbi Jacobs and Mr. Geltabeiller, of the Bond street synogogue, called at the home 461 Bathurst street, and demanded that the body be turned over to them. This Mrs. Smith refused to do, declining to allow the Jewish church authorities to cross the threshold.

The funeral took place with Christian rites, and Hebrew friends of deceased are now investigating whether Mrs. Smith has the right to do with her husband's body as she will, and they will probably take legal advice on the question of removing the remains from their present resting place and having them placed in Jewish ground.

Don't waste your money buying strengthening plasters. Chamberlain's Liniment is cheaper and better. Dampen a piece of flannel with it and bind it over the affected parts and it will relieve the pain and soreness. For sale by all dealers.

VOL XXVIII NO 21 PETERBOROUGH ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 24 1912 PRICE TWO CENTS

MR. BURNHAM'S SPEECH ON NE TEMERE DECREE

Ottawa, Jan. 23.—Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., spoke as follows in the House of Commons this morning, when the ne temere decree was up for debate.

I have listened with a great deal of interest to the remarks of the honorable members of the opposition on this bill. They took great care in the early stages of this trouble, to avoid knowing anything about it ance in a very remarkable manner, until it has become coincident. The most absolute silence for my part I know that I am too young a member to make any mistake, when I apologize most humbly for venturing any remarks in this debate, but I cannot help pointing out that we have two statements before the House and two courses proposed.

The Hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Lancaster) has given us a concrete proposition embodied in his bill. I would say; let that go, send it to fountain head so that we may see whether it is ultra or intra vires, but must say that I have been most profoundly impressed by the statesman-like and candid utterance of the Right Honorable, the Leader of the Government. He has laid down the broad general principle that underlie the supremacy of the State. He has shown that the Church cannot override the State. To my mind that is broad enough to repel any ecclesiastical decree enactment, or laws of any description about whatever. He has also said, as I understood him, that the civil law alone validates marriage and that no church can be recognized as supreme on that question. What could be more explicit, what more likely to quiet the agitation in this country than this doctrine laid down by the great statesman at the head of this Government. There is no uncertain sound about it; why then, should we not fall in with that view and endorse the proposition to send a case to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council for the determination of the federal authorities. To reject the proposition of the Right Honorable, the Leader of the Government, would be to cast aside the greatest opportunity we have ever had of settling for all time the differences between Church and State. Of that I am convinced. It seems to me that never has there arisen such a magnificent opportunity for the settlement of this great question. How can it be settled except either by an infinite multitude of enactments or by a statement of a general and conclusive character which will finally establish the general principles. It can not be settled in any other way, but in order that we may exhaust all the remedies under our control. I would suggest that the bill of the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Lancaster) also be sent and submitted to the Privy Council, because you can never tell when lawyer get into what confusion and uncertainty will result. Therefore, for my part, I am prepared to endorse both positions.

PETERBORO 17, TRENTON 2

Local Intermediates Defeated Trenton at the Brock Street Rink Last Night in an Interesting Contest.

At Brock street rink last night before a record crowd, the Peterboro intermediates defeated Trenton by a score of 17—2 in a well contested game. The ice was in excellent condition and the weather ideal, not being as cold as for former contests and the large crowd thoroughly enjoyed the sport.

A number of slight accidents occurred during the game, Kelly receiving a cut over the eye; Giroux was struck on the head, but was able to continue. Reynolds of Trenton was laid out for a minute in the second half, when he collided with Giroux. The game was clean all through only three penalties being inflicted by Referee Sproule, all for tripping.

Armstrong, at centre for Trenton, was easily the best man on the team and played a fine game. Pringle in goal stopped many shots, and it is due to his fine work the score was not larger. The home team all played well and, to pick any one man, would be unfair. It is safe to say that if the Pets continue to play the game as they have in all their contests so far this season, they will take a lot of beating and will not about bring home the bacon in the championship finals.

The game was called about 8:30 and a minute after Parks scored the first goal on a pass from Coughlin.

The teams checked close and hard and the play was very even. Giroux notched the second tally in 10 minutes and Kelly repeated a few minutes later. Coughlin scored for Peterborough in about 2 minutes and repeated shortly after on a pass from Bond, after carrying the rubber the length of the ice. Trenton pressed hard at this juncture and McGorman beat Desrocher on a shot from left wing. Trenton notched another shortly after from a scrimmage in front of the Pets goal. Kelly scored another for the Pets before the half ended, making the score at half time 6—2.

The home team had much the better of the play in the second half, although Trenton played hard and put in some good combination at times, but were unable to score in this session. Parks got the first score in this half, 30 seconds after play commenced and repeated a few minutes later on a pass from Coughlin. The homesters repeated again in two minutes from a scrimmage. Coughlin got the next tally on Kelly's pass after a brilliant rush from his own territory. Kelly scored on a shot from left wing a few minutes later. Parks got the next one from a scrimmage in front of Trenton's goal in three minutes. Kelly notched another in a half a minute. Parks again scored on a pass from Giroux and repeated shortly after on a pass from Kelly. Kelly at this point took a hand in the scoring and notched one after a lone rush. Parks secured the last tally about three minutes before time was called. Trenton tried hard at this period but could not get past the Pets' defence, and the game ended 17—2 in favor of the home team.

MILITARY BALL A SUCCESS

Armouries Last Night Thronged With Youth and Beauty.

DELIGHTFUL was the dance given last night in the Armouries under the auspices of the officers of the 57th Regiment. The spacious drill hall was transformed into a literal paradise of beauty, by Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, whose taste in this direction is known far and wide. Excellent music was furnished by the Grand Opera House orchestra, under the capable leadership of Mr. Devey.

The hall was given by the officers of the local Regiment, the guests of honor being the ex-officers of the Regiment, and the officers and ex-officers of the 24th Field Battery, and the 3rd Dragoons.

About 60 couples were present, the officers, of course, appearing in uniform. The scene was exceedingly exhilirating and enchanting, and was thoroughly enjoyed by all who were present. At one o'clock dainty refreshments were served in the splendid dining hall of the Armouries, after which dancing was resumed until the "wee sma' hours."

MR. WILLIAM J. PORTER ELECTED THE NEW WARDEN

Reeve of Otonabee Was Elected at Inaugural Meeting.

The new County Council met yesterday, (Tuesday) afternoon, the following members being present: Messrs. W. J. Porter, Tanner, Brown Wyld, Tucker, Campbell, Ferguson, Moller, Killen, Coben, Shaw, Howden, Miller, Garbutt, Breault, McKee and Joyce.

Mr. Porter was elected Warden on the first ballot. He was escorted to the chair, wearing his official gown and after taking his seat, thanked the members for the honor conferred on him.

Mr. W. H. Casement and Mr. Calder, of Lakefield, on motion, were appointed auditors for the year; C. E. Pakenham was re-appointed to the Board of the Norwood High School.

The Council resolved itself on motion to be a committee to strike the standing committees for the year.

HON. S. N. BLAKE ON THE NE TEMERE DECISION

Only Way to Secure Supreme Control for State—One Clergyman Accuses Government of Side-Tracking—Must Have Dominion Law.

Toronto, Jan. 23.—The action of Parliament early this morning in deciding to refer Mr. Lancaster's bill to the Privy Council for a final decision on the respective jurisdiction of the Dominion and the Provinces in regard to marriage is one of the topics of the hour in Church circles in Toronto. The News secured an expression from Hon. S. H. Blake, which is given below.

Government Acted Most Wisely.

Hon. S. H. Blake, said: "I think the Government acted most wisely in what they did in connection with the marriage question in Ottawa yesterday. It is a question in respect of which there should be no uncertainty. At present the Dominion and each of the provinces of the Dominion has a right to its opinion as to the Legislature which has authority to deal with the question and the extent of that authority. In order to secure stability in the conclusion each should be heard in order that all may be bound. Therefore the first step in the way of giving the State an absolute and undoubted control on the fundamental question of our marriage laws with which when determined, no power inside or outside of the Dominion should interfere, is to get the opinion of each of these Legislatures, and thus settle the matter in respect of which each can bind.

Prolonged Litigation.

"Until this matter is settled by an authority which can bind all, any statute that might be passed might be the subject of prolonged litigation, and would keep matters in a state of uncertainty for an indefinite period. It appears to me, therefore that it is a wise conclusion that the final authority should first determine this question of power and that the each Legislature should, in the department allotted to it, pass such legislation as may be necessary to remove all doubts and difficulties in respect of our marriage laws, giving the Dominion and its component parts distinct and absolute control in the domain allotted to each.

Removed From Politics.

"It seems to me that the Government desired to remove the matter out of the region of political and religious differences, and to take the first step in the way of giving the State an absolute and undoubted control on the fundamental question of our marriage laws with which when determined, no power inside or outside of the Dominion should

ONE KILLED TWO INJURED

Callender, Jan. 23.—One man killed and two injured was the result of the first accident on the C. N. R. now under construction near here. While drilling rock on Contractor Livingston's section early this morning, the drill struck a charge put in yesterday that had failed to explode. Chas. Hanibal, who was holding the drill, was instantly killed, and Victor Cederode and Dave Nelson were injured, but not seriously.

The injured men were taken to Toronto on the noon train.

FOUND UNCONSCIOUS

New York, Jan. 23.—With 108 unset precious stones, valued at nearly five thousand dollars, in his possession, an unidentified man was found early to-day lying unconscious in the gutter in front of an apartment house on Twenty-Seventh street. The police believe that the man was given a stupefying drug and collapsed while struggling with his assailants. Apparently the latter were frightened away before they could accomplish their intended robbery.

MANCHUS CHANGE FRONT WILL FIGHT REPUBLICANS

IMPERIAL FAMILY HAS ANNOUNCED IT WILL NOT GIVE IN—ALL NEGOTIATIONS OFF.

Yuan Shi Kai Stepped Aside—Yin Tchang In in Complete Control and is Preparing to Resume Hostilities.

London, Jan. 23.—The affair of state at Peking are now in the unprecedented condition that Yuan Shi Kai has abandoned his task, according to advices received by the American consul at Tien Tsin and reported from that city to-day by the correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company. The despatch adds:

The situation in Peking has undergone an extraordinary change. The Imperial family has reversed its policy and abandoned all thought of abdication. Yuan Shi Kai has stepped aside and the whole control is in the hands of Yin Tchang, who has received [illegible] from the Chinese by the Manchus.

Yin Tchang assumes an attitude of firmness towards the revolutionary leaders and is said to be preparing to resume hostilities. It is reported that all negotiations which have been going on with a view to abdication have been summarily broken off.

FREEMASONS ENGINEERED THE CHINESE REVOLUTION

San Francisco, Cal. Jan. 23.—Tong King Chong, editor of the Chinese Free Press of this city, and secretary of the local revolutionists' junta, in a lecture before the Golden Gate Commandery of the Knights Templars, outlined the secret propaganda, which beginning shortly after the Manchus seized the Chinese throne, nearly three hundred years, has culminated in the overthrow of the aggressors, in the present revolution.

Tonk stated that the whole revolution had been engineered by the Chee Kung Tong (Chinese Free Masons).

Ten million members of the Chee Kung Tong in China were working for the overthrow of the Manchus before hostilities began, he said. "Eight per cent. of the Chinese outsiders of China are members of the Chee Kung Tong, and these also worked for the Republic."

DUKE STROLLS ON 5TH AVE.

Is Much Impressed With the Development of New York City.

New York, Jan. 23.—The Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, with the Duchess of Connaught, their daughter Princess Patricia and the Vice-Regal suite, arose to a day of social and sight-seeing engagements arranged for the second day of the five days' visit to New York. Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid gave a luncheon to-day in honor of their Royal Highnesses, and to-night there was another dinner on the programme, at the Reid house, followed by a musicale and a large reception with dancing. The dancing party will be largely confined to the younger married people. Fifty invitations have been issued for the dinner.

The Duke of Connaught anticipated more sight-seeing to-day with motor rides and walks through Fifth avenue and Central Park. The Duke is quite democratic and goes forth for strolls along Fifth avenue accompanied only by his Aide-de-Camp. He is an enthusiastic sight-seer and is said to have been much impressed with the development of the city since his visit here forty years ago.

The Duke and his party return to Ottawa Friday evening.

Current Comment

by The Commentator

'Twas a glorious victory.

I'd hate to be the Pope to-day.

The great common sense of the great Canadian people settled it.

I don't like to crow. But, think it over calmly, and didn't the government come to my way of thinking?

What do you know about Col. Hugh [illegible]?

I am heartily in accord with the principles advanced and the arguments expressed by Mr. Lancaster, and am prepared to support this bill."

A GARBAGE BY-LAW.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I think the thanks of the ratepayers are due to Dr. Burnham and members of the Board of Health for taking action in regard to a garbage by-law. Let the Council follow up the good work by giving the people a by-law that will provide for the removal of garbage at proper intervals.

Anti-Filth.

When you have a bad cold you want the best medicine obtainable so as to cure it with as little delay as possible. Here is a druggist's opinion: "I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for fifteen years," says Enos Lollar of Saratoga, Ind., "and consider it the best on the market." For sale by all dealers.

REGIMENTS ORDERED TO BE READY TO GO TO BELFAST

SEVERAL BODIES OF TROOPS GET URGENT ORDERS.

Serious Trouble is Expected Because of the Embittered State of Public Feeling.

Belfast, Ireland, Jan. 23.—Several regiments of cavalry and infantry have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to come to Belfast at short notice in consequence of the inflamed stage of passion awakened among both Nationalists and Unionists by the announcement of the coming demonstration concerning Home Rule.

The manoeuvre of the Unionists in threatening to block Ulster Hall where the Home Rule demonstration is to take place, has incensed the Liberals and Nationalists, and trouble looms up distinctly.

Brigadier-General Count A. E. Gleichen, the commanding officer of the district, was returning from Switzerland, where he has been on vacation.

The merchants of the city are arranging to barricade and board up their properties in the vicinity of Ulster Hall.

WHITE MOB HANGED 3 MEN AND 1 WOMAN

Strung Up to Trees and Their Bodies Riddled With Bullets—Negroes Protested Their Innocence to the Last.

Hamilton, Ga., Jan. 23.—A mob of 100 men last night broke into the Harris County jail here, overpowered Jailer E. M. Rabbitson and took four negroes, three men and one woman out and hanged them to trees, one mile from town. The bodies were riddled with bullets. It is estimated that 300 shots were fired.

The negroes were arrested yesterday charged with the murder of Norman Hadley, a well-to-do farmer. Hadley was killed Sunday night as he sat in his home, a shot being fired from the outside. The blacks were tenants on the Hadley farm. The negroes protested their innocence to the last. No motive for the killing of Hadley, who was very popular is known.

DETROIT FOR CHEAPER FARES

Should All Lines be Brought Under the Terms of New Line Franchise?—Women Voters Are Busy.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 23.—Street railway fares and tentative municipal ownership of the traction lines were voted on here to-day. At present five cent fares prevail on many of the city lines, with eight tickets for a quarter during the day on the newer lines. The question at issue to-day was whether all the lines should be brought under the terms of the franchise of the newer lines. In opposition to this it has been urged that with the older franchises expired and expiring, the city should compel lower fares on all the lines without extending any franchises. The proposed agreement runs until 1924, and provides that the city may purchase the lines any time on six months' notice. There has been a heavy registration of women voters.

Here is a woman who speaks from personal knowledge and long experience, viz., Mrs. P. H. Brogan, of Wilson, Pa., who says, "I know from experience that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is far superior to any other. For croup there is nothing that excels it." For sale by all dealers.

That cleanly sport and godliness go hand in hand, was clearly shown by the large number of handsome looking, kern-eyed "brithers o' the besom and stane" at Knox church on Sunday morning.

I run across some splendid examples of unintentional humor once in a while. Do you know, I smiled in kirk at the Curlers' service Sunday morn when thep reacher asked us to sing "Rock of Ages cleft for me."

Magistrate Jeffs of Hamilton, has invented a law that declares there is property rights in umbrellas, and has fined a man $10 for the non-return of one. That's a blow at British liberty, if it doesn't fracture Magna Charta itself.

It is only for fear that some mitigating circumstances have not been reported that prevents me saying something mighty harsh, about the Kenora Police Force and Firemen. It's pretty close to the limit when they let a helpless prisoner and the four fire horses burn up.

Throughout the entire east, the record for the past two weeks is "the coldest in 20 years." Surely our old friend Mr. Winter could afford to rest on his laurels.

Here's hoping those good old farmer friends o' mine in Smith township succeed in getting the new mail route they're asking for. It shouldn't take much persuasion to convince the Department of the real need thereof.

And so the late lamented census of Canada was wrong? Yep, wrong by 10,000,000. Over that number alone have applied for Government jobs.

My millionaire colleague Fels appears to me to be doing a lot of explanationing in Toronto. He's now defending the McNamara brothers and say they didn't intend murder. Well, perhaps not: but they certainly took a sure way of accomplishing it.

Here's congratulations to another crony o' mine, J. H. Garbutt, Smith. The directors of Peterborough Industrial Exhibition showed good sound sense in picking him out for president.

KINGS IN TRADE

Most of the Monarchs of Europe Have Made Fortunes by Shrewd Speculation in Business Undertakings.

Monarchs are not above making money. And perhaps the Kaiser should be given first place among reigning Sovereigns for shrewd commercialism. He makes a strong point of cultivating the friendship of financial magnates, not only in his own, but in other countries as well.

The Kaiser has some very large holdings in the Hamburg-American Steamship Line. He is extensively interested in the diamond-mine enterprises of German West Africa. REASONABLE REQUEST

It was a cold night. The traveller [illegible]ired at the only hotel in the little [illegible] if he could be lodged for the [illegible], but was informed that it was full up.

"But you must give me some sort of accommodation," said the stranger. "Surely you don't want me to sleep under the starry but chilly skiesg"

"Well," said the proprietor, "the best we can do is to make you up a bed in the passage and curtain it off for you." And so it was arranged.

In the dark watches of the night the traveller awoke. A freezing draught chilled him, and the sheet which had been hung up as a partition was blowing merrily in the breeze. The traveller rose and shouted for the landlord.

"What is it?" queried a voice from the stairhead.

"Please," said the stranger, timidly, "may I have a paper of pins to lock my bedroom door with?"

THE SILENT JAP

The Japanese, alone of all races, utter no sound when engaged in combat. From this national trait springs the curious regulation which prevents Japanese regiments from possessing bands bugles, or drums. Orders are given verbally, or by means of signals with the hand or sword. No trumpets sound the charge, no drums beat the tattoo, and no bugles wake the troops with their ringing calls.

A FAIR OFFER

It was a political meeting in the East during the last recess, and the M. P., an exceptionally popular man, was addressing his constituents. The politician in question rejoices in a luxuriant crop of hair. The audience was sympathetic for the most part; but there was one man in the front row of the audience who made numerous interruptions. He was a coal-heaver, apparently, and had but recently been heaving coals.

"Get your hair cut!" he shouted during a most pathetic passage in the candidate's speech. The well-known catch phrase seemed particularly applicable, so a good many of the audience laughed.

But the M.P. was equal to the occasion.

"I will make a bargain with that gentleman," he said. "I will get my hair cut if he will get his face washed."

There were no more interruptions.

The World's Largest Flying Bird.

Among the most notable of recent additions to the "Zoo" is what is generally regarded as the largest flying bird in the world. It is known as the lammergeyer (lamb vulture, or bearded vulture). This giant bird has recently arrived from India, and is the largest of all eagles or vultures. Its wings measure over 14 ft. from tip to tip, and it is not yet full grown.

The lammergeyer is found in Mid-Europe, Asia, and North Africa. It is said to live mainly on carrion, but it is not averse to "creating" carrion by knocking an unwary chamois or goat over a precipice with a blow from its tremendous wing, afterwards flying down to the body to obtain a meal. Even mountaineers have been reported as having fallen victims to this method of assault.

POPULAR SONGS

Romantic Origin of Some Well Known Songs — How "Killarney" and "The Star Spangled Banner" Were Composed.

Composers tell many a curious and romantic story of the birth of songs which have become world-famous; and few of them are more remarkable than those told by Signor Tito Mattei.

"Several of my best songs," he says, "have come to my mind whilst idly strumming with my fingers on a window-pane or table; and my well-known 'Hear the Wild Winds Blow' was written when I was having an oyster supper."

"Dear Heart" had an equally curious origin. One night when the Signor went to see his publisher, Mr. Keppel, the latter produced a sheet of paper, saying, "Here are some pretty words; what do you think of them?" The composer glanced at the manuscript and, walking to the piano, instantly played the four last line of the air which has since been sung all the world over. The same evening the song was complete, and the following morning Mr. Keppel and the Signor were drinking to its success in "repeated glasses of champagne."

The sweet and universally popular "In Old Madrid" came to Mr. H Trotère one evening as he was returning home from the Theatre. He had no paper on which to jot it down, nor had the publican into whose house he rushed any to offer him. But, catching sight of some biscuit-bags, he seized one, and in a few moments the famous melody was written down.

"Go to Sea" was composed within a quarter of an hour was jotted down "Asthore" was written by Mr. Clifton Bingham and set to music by Mr. Trotère after lunching at Restaurant; and "The Brow of the Hill" eclipsed even these marvellous records, for Mr. Trotère composed the melody, wrote a letter, and ran 400 yards to catch the post, all within eight minutes!

Of "Killarney" a strange story is told. One day Boucicault took the words of the song to Balfe. Mrs. Balfe took them upstairs to her husband, who, after glancing through them, sat down to the piano Scarcely had his wife left the room when the composer excitedly called her back. "I have done the song," he exclaimed. "It is sweet. Tell Boucicault to come and hear it."

It was while dreaming the time away in his yacht, that Michael Maybrick's great song, "The Holy City," came to him in a flood of inspiration. Hastily wring down the voice part, he called his sister-in-law, Mrs. Florence Maybrick, to the cabin and asked her to sing it while he extemporised an accompaniment; and within half an hour of reading Mr. Weatherley's words the glorious song was sung by the woman who, but little later, was to make the world ring with her name.

In the war of 1812 Francis Scott ey wrote "The Star-Spangled Banner" [illegible] McHenry. When he returned to his division, we are told, he read it aloud once, twice, three times, until the entire division seemed electrified by its pathetic eloquence. An idea seized Ferdinand Durang. Hunting up a volume of flute music, he impatiently whistled snatches of tune after tune as they caught his eye. Note after note fell from his puckered lips until, with a leap and a shout, he exclaimed, "Boys, I've got it!" and there rang out for the first time the song of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

WHEN BIRDS BREED

Few Experts Can Really Tell When Birds Breed for Even When in Captivity They Baffle Those In Charge.

Although a thousand and one ornithological volumes have been written, it is a curious fact that not a scrap of information is to be found in any of them regarding the ages at which different species of birds breed in the wild state. This discovery has been made by a writer who suggests that as, in most cases, birds breed as a matter of course in their second season, writers have assumed that there is nothing to be said on the subject.

Dr. Seth Smith, who is in charge of the birds at the Zoological Gardens, London, says that in all probability many of the parrots do not breed till they are three or four years old — that is to say, till their fourth or fifth season. Geese, however, according to the same authority, are an exception to this generalization, as, in common with shelldrakes and some of the pheasants, they breed in their second season. Possibly, as regards geese, this applies only to domesticated breeds.

Pigeons and the majority of gamebirds attain their full plumage in the first summer; and the presumption accordingly is that they breed in their second season. That this is the case with partridges is rendered evident by the fact that in their second season, all the birds, with possibly a few accidental exceptions, are paired.

NEW BATHING SUITS

New York.—Skirts on bathing suits are only in the way thinks Miss Dorothy Taylor, the young New York society woman whose abbreviated costume on European bathing beaches last summer shocked many American visitors. Trousers or trunks are less clumsy. Only prudish, silly people, with naughty minds see the harm in a skirtless bathing suit," she says, "when I go swimming, I go into the water, and I wear silk trousers, or trunks and a long silk jersey, which reaches almost to my knees.

"Silver Greyhounds."

Little Social Calling.

The interest taken by the woman of today in athletics, in the world, in affairs of public tenor, has brought about at least one welcome social change—the abolition of the social call.

No longer are upper blinds seen to flutter suspiciously while maid or butler utters the solemn "Not at home" to relieved callers. The allotted twenty minutes of platitudes, during which hostess and guest conversed about such vital topics as the weather or the servant situation, is reckoned as so much wasted time by the busy woman of society.

The gradual disappearance of the calling custom does not mean a consequent damper upon social activity. What it does signify is a more sincere and a more natural phase of sociability. Today a woman rings up the friend she wishes to see on the telephone and arranges for a friendly little visit. The stiff rose and gilt of the front parlor have yielded to the cozy depths of the living room easy chairs and the staid conversation of the reception room to the cozy chatter of the tea table.

What a bugbear were the "Tuesdays or "Thursdays" of the society leader from which continued absence spelled social oblivion. Many a heartache originated in these drawing rooms of the dictator, where cuts were dealt right and left and arrows sent out by a satirical tongue which caused a sting which lasted for weeks. A rise of stiff silk, burning patent leathers and other insignia of correct dress are not conducive of kindness and good cheer. For these very obvious reasons we hail with joy the passing of an era of silly formality, hastening to welcome in its stead the custom of "just dropping in for a chat" or an afternoon visit.

Telephone Courtesy.

Many otherwise polite persons feel that they can be rude when engaged in a telephone conversation. With the first "Hello" many a man and women drop their courtesy as if it were a [illegible]

If the "central" were to record all that she hears and all that is said to her it would make some of us blush for shame. While men frequently swear over the telephone, there are many women who, while they do not give vent to profanity, so far copy the manners of the male sex that they scream like shrews at "central" if she happens to give them the wrong number or interrupts them before they have finished talking.

That the ways of telephones and the persons who operate them are trying to one's temper no one can deny, but the irritability that manifests itself in outward speech is not a requisite of the proper appreciation and use of the telephone. It is nothing less than a pernicious habit which most people acquire unconsciously. Let us remember that consideration and kindness pay better than rudeness and discourtesy. If not, then let us have poorer telephone service and preserve our self respect.

Make it a rule never to be rude to the telephone assistants. It is like shooting from an ambush—at an unseen foe, it is true, but it hurts just as much.

Politeness a Valuable Cult.

If regarded from no other point of view than as an asset in journeying through life, politeness and the observance of small courtesies will be found a very valuable cult.

True, the blustering, pushing man or woman makes a way of its sort, but if closely observed neither can very readily come back another time with any success. Aggressiveness is often needed, but impoliteness never. When it is necessary to emphasize even that may be done with dignity and a perfectly polite manner, carrying weight far better than arrogance and rudeness ever can.

SULLIVAN COMING BACK

Mike (Twin) Sullivan, former champion welterweight, who outgrew the class, and who has been having a touch of the quiet life on a farm near Cambridge, Mass., will forsake the cows and chickens and try his luck in the arena again. Mike is to meet Paddy Lavin at Buffalo, and if he wins he will go after the harder nuts in the 150-pound division and the middleweight class. If Mike is right he is hard to beat.

EXPENSIVE DIMPLES

"I had a dimple in each cheek — a deep, dainty, loving, delicious, kissable dimple

"Ah," exclaimed the young fool, "how I wish I had dimples like that!" And he reached out his hand and patted them softly.

The maiden smiled until the dimples were a hundred times lovelier than before, and the youth was completely captured. He took her for drives in the park. Then he took her to the Calidorf and treated her to a dinner such as visiting princes indulge in at the expense of the Government.

Next they went to the theatre and occupied a box, and after that they ought out a cosy café.

And since then he has had two dimples, two deep, cavernous, empty dimples, one in each side of his purse and they will stay there until next pay day. 41

MY LADY'S COLUMN.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA'S PROTEGE

At the age of three, pianists in the making take more interest in toys than in sharps and flats. But Fitz Scavenius, the famous young Grieg player, who will visit Birmingham during his coming concert tour, and who is one of the favoured few to have his name entered in the book in which Queen Alexandra writes down the names of her favourite artists, on his third birthday astonished his family by clambering on to the piano stool and playing "Ding dong bell" and "Mary, Mary, quite contrary," hammering away at the notes till he struck the right ones. Later at the age of 14 he achieved another record by being the only competitor to obtain full marks at the senior Trinity College examination. Shortly after this exploit Queen Alexandra sent in young Scavenius, who is of Danish descent, and immediately set the seal of her approval upon his playing.

The Healthy Pose.

If the proper pose of the body be retained in all the ordinary duties of life, whether sitting or standing, it will minimize the fatigue of the daily routine. When double work is thrown upon some muscles, while others are idle, the result is the pain in back and limbs with which so many woman suffer. To walk upstairs with the figure erect and not like a half-shut jack-knife, legs and joints flexible and lungs breathing properly, will not only contribute to a woman's appearance but also to her health.

MATERIAL IMMATERIAL
THE MODEL'S THE THING

Black and white continue to be the mode; whether frocks are of silk, chiffon, satin or cloth.

An exquisite model for an evening dress is composed of black chiffon over the same fabric of white. A lot of jet is used on the black tunic. The foundation of the gown is cream, veiled with the sheer white. A blue satin girdle gives a touch of color.

This gown would serve for a model in marquisite or it would be charming in any simple limp material. The mode is the thing.

Princess Mary's Rebuff

The following little story of the Queen and Princess Mary was told by one who could vouch for its truth. Princess Mary, when a younger child, ran one day into the sanctum of a certain well-known private secretary at Court. "I am sorry," said the much-harassed individual, "that I have no time to spare this morning for you, my little lady." The Princess, in high dudgeon, ran to her mother. "Sir So-and-So called me a "little lady," she complained, "and you know, mother, that I am a Princess." The Queen replied laughingly, "Run back, Mary, to Sir So-and-So, and tell him that you are a Princess who has not yet learned to be a little lady."

Poached Eggs with Stewed Tomatoes

Poach carefully the number of eggs required, and, after placing on hot buttered toast, put eggs and toast on a hot sahet. Now wipe some small tomatoes, and stew them for five minutes in a little butter, pepper, and salt. Make a border of the tomatoes round the poached eggs. This provides a dainty and appetising breakfast dish.

MERRILL & MERRILL

543 GRANVILLE STREET, VANCOUVER, B.C.

IT WAS A BATTLE ROYAL

The Men of the Northern Zone Won by Narrow Margin from the Sons of Scotia.

It was a great and glorious struggle that Peterborough put up against the united force of Auld Scotia in the curling competition. The morning game saw the Canadians down, and their was dismay in the hearts of many of their supporters. The splendid, regular, put-it-just-where-you-want-it play of their opponents were on them apparently.

There were plenty of friends there to see them go down to defeat, and it was the commiserating hand-shake for theirs.

But in the evening there was a change. It was practically a Peterborough aggregation and the men from the old land found they had their work cut out. The Canadians not only evened up for the morning score, but passed the men from Scotia.

The score at 2 o'clock was not available, but the visitors admitted that on the day's play they had been beaten.

"Tell the people we've had a bonny time; tell them we'll have forever a kindly feeling for Peterborough; tell them that we're a' British together"—was the parting message of one of the great leaders of Britain's armies this morning.

THE BANQUET.

The visiting curlers were entertained to a banquet last night by their visiting brethren. The affair took place in the Masonic Hall, which was kindly placed at the disposal of the curlers by the Masons. About 200 sat down to a splendid menu, a procession being formed in the hall above and headed by a bagpipes, marched down to the large dining room below.

Mr. James Connal, president of the Peterborough Curling Club, presided. The toast list was as follows: "The King," "The District Clubs," and "Canada." The toasts were responded to briefly, by prominent gentlemen present, and were interspersed with songs by Mr. W. Mellroy and Mr. Gordon Wright. The affair terminated with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," after which the curlers formed in a line and returned to the rink, where the bonspiel was resumed.

A vote of thanks to the ladies, in connection with the decorations and salads that were supplied at the banquet, and also for the sandwiches, etc., given to the curlers at the rink in the afternoon.

A Mother's Cares Destructive to Health

ANAEMIA, BAD BLOOD, HEADACHES, AND LASSITUDE VERY COMMON.

Mrs. Wilkinson's Letter Gives Advice That Every Mother Can Well Follow.

From her home in Nedton where she resides with her large family, Mrs. Wilkinson writes: "For years I was pale, anaemic and lacking in vitality. I was a constant sufferer from indigestion and the distress and pain it caused me, coupled with ever-increasing anaemia, made me weaker day by day. Constant headaches, specks before the eyes and attacks of dizziness made me feel as if life were not worth living. My constitution was completely undermined and the constant pallor and dullness in my eyes showed what a sick woman I was. I began to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills and the improvement although slow, was sure.

"I gradually got back my strength and my appetite grew much stronger, and I enjoyed my meals thoroughly. I felt happier and more contented and the sickly pallor of my face was replaced by a bright, rosy color, which proved that a strong medicine was at work. In a few months Dr. Hamilton's Pills brought me from a condition of deathly paller to robust health."

You can obtain the same results by using Dr. Hamilton's Pills—beware of the substitutor that offers you anything except Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all dealers or the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

NO SURRENDER!

The people of Canada found their feet last night when they said that it was State over Church. The fact that the Ne Temere bill was referred to the Privy Council does not mean that it is outside of Canadian politics—that it is being shelved. It means that the Canadian Parliament has said that the Ne Temere decree is iniquitous; and it merely asks the [illegible] Empire to

And the rest of the British Empire will.

IMPRISONED IN MEXICO.

Ottawa, Jan. 22.—After having spent two years in jail in Mexico city while awaiting a hearing of the charges against him an investigation is at last to be made through the British intercession into the case of George I. Hamm, a Canadian, formerly of Napanee, Ont. An ultimatum has been delivered through the British Minister at Washington, demanding instant justice. Mr. Hamm, after winding up a wholesale business in Napanee and there started the United States Banking Company, which failed in 1909, owing the Bank of Montreal three millions. Mr. Hamm was arrested and put in prison. No trial was granted his legal representatives.

ENORMOUS EATERS

Some Great Gastronomic Feats Performed at Different Times by Gluttons for Wagers, and Then Boss.

Not lon gago a Berlin market porter undertook, for a wager, to put away at one sitting, six mutton chops, twelve eggs, a goose, a duck, 6 lb. of potatoes, and 22 lb. of hay. Difficulties were anticipated with the last course, and large sums were laid against the accomplishment of the feat. The ingenious porter solved the difficulty by calling for a cigarette after he had finished the duck. He then set light to the hay, pounded the ashes up with the potatoes and swallowed the lot. After a heated discussion the referee declared him the winner.

A certain Mr. Jerry Eke, of Norwich, on one festive occasion had a small calf prepared and cooked for his special delectation, and deliberately consumed it, all but the bones, during the space of seven hours; and so little did this interfere with his excellent digestive powers that he joined his boon companions in a hearty repast the same night, and appeared to be none the worse for it.

Perhaps the smartest gastronomic feat on record was that performed by Vicomte de Viel Castel, who, to decide a wager, disposed of the following items in 2 hr. 40 min.: Two dozen dozen of oysters, a soup, a beefsteak, a pheasant stuffed with truffles, a salmis of ortolans, a dish of asparagus, another of peas, a pineapple, a dish of strawberries, four bottles of wine, ending with coffee and liqueurs. The meal was valued $125.

A Siberian soldier, notorious for his insatiable appetite, he possessed once disposed of a meal in the presence of an English officer, consisting of 10 lb. of bread and butter, 10 lb. of beef, and a bundle of pillow-cushions as dessert. A young Russian soldier, seventeen years of age, named Batane, ate 24 lb. of beef in twenty-four hours, and on another occasion disposed of a repast prepared for fifteen people.

AFTER THE BANTAMWEIGHT

Al Delmont, who has fought Jimmy Walsh about as often as Jim Barry has mixed with Sam Langford, wants to get the bantamweight belt and has challenged. Johnny Coulon at 116 pounds. Albert is a great little fighter, but he will not be able to make 116 pounds ringside and Johnny Coulon absolutely refuses to make a lower weight for any star.

Greater activity is being displayed at this point in railroad construction, than at any other point in the whole of the North West. When construction is completed, railroads will be operating in nine directions from the town, which will become one of the greatest divisional points in the whole of Canada. Persons buying at present prices can look for a quick turnover at double what they paid. We are offering lots in our sub-division of "RIVER VIEW HEIGHTS" at the following low prices: $100 each for inside lots, and $125 for corners, and on the very easy terms of $10 cash and the balance in payments of $5 per month. No interest on balance if deferred payments are made regularly.

SOCIETY DEALERS

Society People By Art Dealing Make Good Money on the Side And Many Make Their Living By It.

Although there are many dealers in art treasures and antiquities who are scrupulously honest and have never intentionally sold an object which was not exactly what they described it to be — and who to-day, in quite a number of cases, are prepared to give 10 per cent. profit upon the return of almost every article they have sold during the last ten years, so greatly has the value of these increased within that period — it is a fact that there are many others who, taking advantage of the modern craze for collecting, resort to all sorts of dodges in order to impose upon the ignorant.

For instance, in Great Britain, it is quite a common trick for dealers to distribute part of their stock in farmhouses and cottages, in the hope that enthusiastic strangers will assume that they have been there for generations. After thus stocking a cottage the dealer casually mentions to customers that he has been told of a certain cottager who has some very good antique "stuff," and that he himself has had no time to verify the report. Of course, the address is promptly asked for by the enthusiastic collector, who is thus led to purchase goods which he might not otherwise think of buying.

An Ingenious Method.

This is a somewhat common and fairly well-known trick, and the consequence is that some dealers have hit upon a more ingenious method. They arrange with some well-known man or woman in "society," who is furnishing a new house, to decorate it with fine furniture, pictures, and prints, supplied free on the understanding that should a visitor admire any of them they are to be sold if possible, and that a handsome commission will be given on the transaction. "There are certainly in society, many who add to their diminished incomes by either selling works of art themselves or acting as agents for dealers.

"A well-known connoisseur, when recently visiting a Duchess, had the following experience:—

"The lady was delighted to see him; she particularly wished for his advice and assistance. 'Algy has run terribly into debt; he may have to resign his commission in the Guards. I cannot ask his father for money, as he is badly hit by the depression in agriculture. You know all the rich Americans and the value of fine furniture; could you possibly help me to sell that magnificent Louis Seize piece? It was given to a former Duke by the Emperor of Russia, and it was always said to be worth many thousands of pounds.' The visitor looked at the bit of furniture — it was one he had seen at the shop of a celebrated dealer, who had had it for years on his hands and had resorted to this device to try to get rid of it."

SILENT HUSBANDS

Chinese Revolt Women Have Determined to Assert Themselves Too.

While Chinamen have risen in revolt against the Manchu dynasty, their women-folk — at any rate some of them — have come to the conclusion that the time has arrived when they should make a strong protest against the custom which forces a girl to be betrothed to a boy in her infancy and ultimately marry him, although they may be scarcely acquainted with one another and have nothing in common. Such is the determination of Chinese women to stamp out this custom that some years ago nine Cantonese maidens drowned themselves together one night in the Pearl River rather than accept the lot of wife under these conditions.

"In three districts in Central Kwangtung, where a girl can always get work at silk-winding, thousands of girls have formed themselves into anti-matrimonial associations, the members of which refuse to live with the husband more than the customary three days.

"Then they take advantage of their legal right to visit mother, and never return, save on certain days or after a term of years. If the parents attempt to restore the runaway bride to her husband she drowns herself or takes opium; so parents and magistrates have had to let the girls have their way. By presenting herself in her husband's home on certain festival days the bride keeps her wifely status."

Dr. Ross also mentions a very curious practice observed between husbands and wives in certain districts of China. Etiquette, it appears, forbids husband and wife to be seen talking together. Thus, a young man and his wife meet in an empty lane and, supposing themselves unobserved, he asks her for the key of the garden gate.

She throws it on the ground without looking at him, and, once indoors, rates him soundly for speaking to her in public.

"Suppose," she says, "someone had seen us!"

Some of the new parasols are edged with narrow ostrich feathers, and have a big bow of ribbon on the handle, also edged with feathers.

For a satin slipper nothing is so effective as a small round buckle of rhinestone through which is inserted a satin or velvet ribbon.

Curls and puffs are used in profusion and quantities of false hair are still absolutely necessary. Infantile styles prevail — quite babyish, in fact.

Not Room for Both

"I know Ames comes in for a lot of praise because he hunts with a camera instead of a gun," Forbes began, in a slightly acrid tone. "It never seems to strike people that there may be more than one kind of brutality."

"What's the matter with Ames?" demanded one of the men on the clubhouse porch.

"Up in Canada last fall, Forbes readily resumed, "I went off by myself one day, when Ames was fiddling over his kodak, and I stumbled full on a black bear. Because I was the only thing in sight, very likely, I became the immediate object of her attentions. I had only a slight lead, but I was going pretty well when Ames poked through the brush and took in the situation.

"'Hold on there, old chap!' he yelled. 'You're too far ahead. I can't get you both in.'"

GOLD FROM SEA-WATER

You Look On While the Engines Make You Rich by Extracting Potash From the Waves.

Many people have come forward with ideas for extracting gold from sea-water. All those ideas have fallen through, and the only extraction of gold has been from the inventors' or investors' pockets. Recently, however, a new idea for extracting money from the waves which holds out a little more hope of success.

It is alleged that in every 3,000 lb of sea-water there is 1lb. of potash. Now potash is a fairly valuable commercial substance. Its present price is $6.50 a ton, and over $20,000,000 worth is exported to the United States every year. It is reckoned that potash can be extracted from sea-water at a cost of about $2.50 a ton, leaving an ample margin for profit.

The system of extraction is simple. There is a ton of potash in about three-quarters of a million gallons of sea-water. A large tank is constructed, on the bottom of which is placed a common ground furnace slag which has been treated with a weak iron sulphate solution. Sea-water is forced up through this, leaving behind a deposit of the valuable potash. Pumps supply the necessary water at the rate of 800,000 gallons an hour, a ton of potash being deposited every eighty-five minutes. The total cost of the necessary engines to run the pumping machinery is nearly $250,000. Not only will the tanks be used for extracting potash, but for getting the gold out of sea-weather as well. It only requires a strong solution of iron sulphate instead of a weak one; $15 worth of gold can be extracted every five hours, at a cost of $2.50 an ounce. Gold is worth $40 an ounce. The cost of running the machinery works out at about $300 a day. The amount of gold extracted will be worth about $3,500, leaving a clear daily profit of over $3000.

The Best Helpmeet.

All men, as well as women, like to be understood. Sympathy is their greatest help, and no woman who is self-centred, who is vain and thinks only of herself will gain the highest regard of man. She may be exquisitely beautiful, have a crowd of admirers at her feet, but she cannot bestow that wonderful happiness a plain little women full of sympathy gives to her husband. If she understands him, is interested in him and his life-work, whether it be planting vegetables, composing music, or building towers, she will encourage him to reach his highest aim. Being beautiful will not make up for selfish indifference.

Fun and Fresh Ideas.

To remain young one must have company and enjoy it. Not a big dinner party one day, an afternoon reception the next, a late card party the following, and so on. This, for the hostess, is hard work that will quickly bring the appearance of age in its train, and, indeed, no work is more arduous. To attend to the wants of guests, to anticipate their desires, to have the whole responsibility of the success of a party is an utterly differtn thing to the bright company necessary to the well-being of the woman who leads too monotonous a life.

The limiting influence of four walls is what so many women who are housewives and mothers have to fight against, and they need company as a recreation.

A GOOD HAND

A young fellow has popped the question, and anxiously awaited the answer that was to decide his fate.

"Do you ever gamble at cards?" the fair one asked.

"No," he answered; "but if I do now would be the time."

"Why?" she inquired.

"Because," he answered, with a deep sigh, "I hold such a charming hand."

BOILED SNAKE-ONE

Reptiles Though Repugnent to European Tastes are Considered in Many Climes as Dainty Dishes.

People in general have an instinctive abhorrence of reptiles, yet in many parts of the world it is a "cut" from the alligator, not from the joint. The waiter may deliver his order of "Boiled Snake—One."

A peculiarly dainty and nourishing dish is made with the iguana, the flesh of which is as white as that of a chicken and just as palatable, though the reptile's outward appearance with its scaly, blackspotted, green coat, is more repulsive than either crocodile or alligator. To the inhabitants of the Bahamas and the other islands in the West Indies, the iguana affords a much valued source of food. They hunt them down by means of dogs, their mouths muzzled in order to prevent them using their teeth and damaging the reptile, then eat them alive, or kill, salt and barrel them for home consumption. The flesh of the reptile is usually served up boiled, together with a dish of clarified iguana fat, into which the meat is dipped as it is eaten. The eggs of the iguana also are much relished, and are like hens' eggs, in flavour, but wholly filled with yolk, and do not become hard in boiling.

Crocodile flesh is publicly sold in the meat markets of Senuaar in Africa, and in Siam you see their carcases hung up for sale like sheep's in the butcher's shop. Both alligator and crocodile eggs are much prized by certain nations. The second is considered to be a dainty in Siam, while the natives of Madagascar are particularly fond of the first.

Milly: "You know, dear, we've been engaged for two years, and I think it's time we were getting married."

Tilly: "Oh, I don't know, dear. If you really love him you'll let him be loving for a little longer yet."

Ten Years Ago.

It was just ten years ago that Argonauts defeated Ottawa and won the Ontario championship. The Argo team that day was as follows: Fullback, Irving Ardagh; right half-back Hardisty; centre half, Percy Darling, left half, Henderson; quarter, Russell Britton; scrummage, Phil Boyd (right), Joe Wright (centre), Banty Russell (left); wings, Langton (inside right), Bill Brant (left), Leslie Wilson (middle right), Pud Kerr (captain, left), Chummy Hill (outside right), Chadwick (left); flying wing Parmenter. Banty Russell and Pud Kent are the only two who have played in this season's games.

With the Boxers

Ray Temple, the Milwaukee light weight, is going to Australia to box for Promoter McIntosh.

After his [illegible] bout with Bob Moha, Bill Lang said that he was through with the game for good.

Mat Wells has returned to his home in England and will perhaps be matched to meet Packy McFarland in London.

The Down-Trodden.

A certain battalion — the Terrors" — possessed but a very small band. The commanding officer's feet — he was a burly farmer — were — well, very large. One day the battalion was to march out, but the music was not forthcoming.

"Where on earth is the band?" queried the adjutant.

For some time there was no reply; but when the question was repeated, a gruff voice was heard from the rear rank:—

"I do believe, sir, the colonel trod on it by accident."

I Am Willing To Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10 00 Worth of Medicine

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this medicine, and anyone suffering from these diseases can get a box of it absolutely free. All that is necessary is to send me your address.

I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and pay me if cured. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the Uric Acid sufferers of the world, so I can show them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, nor would I accept it now or later if you sent it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying calls to urinate. But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to listen to anyone thereafter. Happily, I am in a position now to demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to spend any money to find out; I don't ask them to believe me, nor even to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my own cost. That is surely fair.

To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars, which will be used to compound my medicine. Much of it is ready now to be sent out, all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there be thousands of them. And anyone who needs it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have a disease for which this medicine is intended, I ask you to send me some of your leading symptoms. If you have any of the symptoms in the list printed here you need my medicine and if you will write me I will gladly send you a box of it free with full directions for your use. Look the symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, then write me about as follows: "Dear Dr., I notice symptoms number"—here put down the numbers, give your age, full address, and send it to me. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 887 Franklin Building, Toronto, Can.

The ten thousand dollars I am spending for the compounding of my medicine is only a part of the money I am devoting to this cause, for the package of medicine I send you will be fully prepaid at my expense. From any standpoint you view it, YOU incur no expense or obligation. Just tell others who you know are suffering who sent you the medicine that cured you.

I am promising to give away ten thousand dollars' worth of medicine, and I will do that; I am promising to send any sufferer who writes me a box of this medicine and full directions free of charge, and I will do that.

DR. T. FRANK LYNOTT
who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

I can say further that this medicine has been vouched for according to law as complying in every detail with all requirements. It will stop rheumatism, it will stop pain and backache, it will stop too frequent desire to urinate; it will heal, soothe and strengthen. You will be better in every way for having taken it. There is not an ingredient that can injure; not one but will benefit. All that I ask is that you use it yourself so that you may be personally convinced.

Owing to the large number of requests, I have had ten thousand more copies of my medical book printed. This book is new and up to date and contains complete descriptions, symptoms, causes, effects and cures of kidney, bladder and rheumatic diseases. All who write for the free medicine will be sent a copy of this grand, illustrated medical book—the largest ever written on these diseases for free and general distribution.

If you need medicine such as I have, if you are anxious to be cured and don't want to spend any money LOOKING for cures, write me. Read the symptoms over and let me hear from you today.

These Are the Symptoms:

1—Pain in the back.
2—Too frequent desire to urinate.
3—Burning or obstruction of urine.
4—Pain or soreness in the bladder.
5—Prostatic trouble.
6—Gas or pain in the stomach.
7—General debility, weakness, dizziness.
8—Pain or soreness under right rib.
9—Swelling in any part of the body.
10—Constipation or liver trouble.
11—Palpitation or pain under the heart.
12—Pain in the left wrist.
13—Pain in the muscles of head.
14—Pain or soreness in the kidneys.
15—Pain or swelling of the feet.
16—Pain or swelling of the muscles.
17—Pain and soreness in nerves.
18—Acute or chronic rheumatism.

COL. STEELE, C.B., M.V.O.
Winnipeg.

The recent publication by Col. Steele of the military history of the prairie province, brings to mind the leading part the colonel himself played in its history, though he took too great care that he did not figure in the article, so that the reading of it was like "Hamlet" with the principal character left out.

Col. Samuel Benfield Steele was born in County Simcoe in the year 1849 and educated at Orillia School and the British American Commercial School, Toronto. He was granted his first commission in 1866 in the Militia and on the return of the Red River Expedition in which he served gallantly, in 1870 joined the Canadian Permanent Artillery. Mr. Steele joined the N. W. Mounted Police in 1873 rising to superintendence in 1885. For the next four years Col. Steele commanded the Police in most of their expeditions against the Indians and to restore order in the new districts. He was chosen to command the "Strathcona" Horse in the South African War. Col. Steele is now commanding military district No. 11.

As a sportsman Col. Steele is well known as one who takes a keen interest in every exercise that will strengthen a man bodily and mentally.

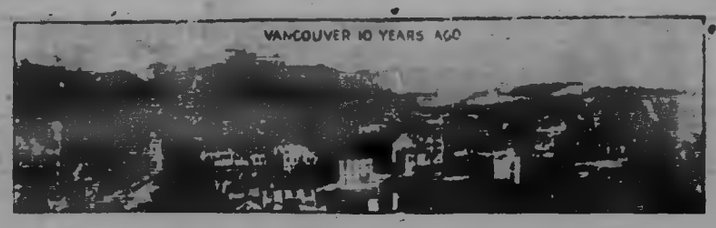
BUILDERS' PROFITS with Bankers' Security



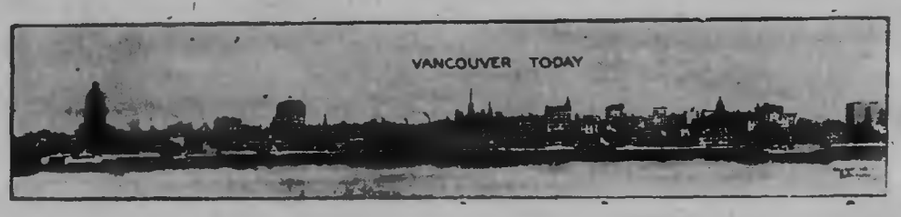
100,000 SHARES AT $1.00

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has been organized recently with an authorized capital of $500,000, to do a general building, real estate, and insurance business, and is actively engaged in Vancouver and Victoria—two most promising fields. The profits from building houses for cash and selling on instalments is well known, and will be one of the principal channels from which profits will be derived. BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its own building department and architect, and does its own construction. In addition to building houses, BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS, LIMITED, has its real estate department, where it carries on a general real estate business, discounting agreements of Sale, subdividing and transacting a general insurance business.

BRITISH CANADIAN HOME BUILDERS LIMITED, is a new concern, having been in business less than two months in Vancouver, but is becoming well known as the Company without any promotion shares and with a strong board of directors, made up of well known Vancouver and Victoria business men.

Shareholders may conservatively look for a 10 per cent dividend the first year, increasing thereafter and a steady advance in the value of their shares caused by the substantial reserve it will always be the policy of the directors to build up.

Companies run on similar lines, notably the Los Angeles Investment Company and "Home Builders," both of Los Angeles, have proved phenominally successful, the former, which has been in business some sixteen years, having accumulated assets of over $6,000,000, and paying 28 per cent. dividends: and the latter, which started business three years ago, with only $1.250 capital, has assets to-day of over $1,089.000, a surplus of over $308,000, is paying 17 per cent. dividends, and its $1.00 shares are selling at $2.30.



FIRST ISSUE OF SHARES
